Hanging of Cardinal Demanded; He Prays In Court for His Judges

Trial Adjourned Till Tuesday When Tribunal's Verdict Will Be Announced

Budapest, Hungary, Feb. 5 (AP).—Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, aware the prosecution has demanded his death, asked tonight that God grant guidance to his judges so their verdict will help promote peace between church and state.

He also besought the love of the Roman Catholic Church for the Communist-dominated Hungarian state which is trying him on treason charges.

"May the Lord give wisdom to the court, when they pass their sentence, which may help a settlement at home and abroad," the slender Roman Catholic primate said in his final plea.

Prosecutor Asks Death Sentence

Earlier Prosecutor Gyula Elapi called for a verdict "hard and inexorable"—death on the gallows—for Cardinal Mindszenty and his six co-defendants.

Defense pleas were entered for "leniency, and a wise decision."

In addition to treason, all are accused of espionage and illegal money dealings.

Presiding Judge Vilmos Olthys adjourned the trial tonight until Tuesday, when the verdicts will be announced.

Cardinal Mindszenty made a 15-minute appeal to the court.

He said he had been held more than 40 days by the police and the court.

Regrets Conflict, He Says

"They ask me (questions) and I answer," he said.

"The questions and the answers are not only for those who question me, but in the meantime the man also gives an answer for his own soul. From these answers which I give myself, I can draw the conclusion that I did not lose my goodwill in the course of my life and I am thankful for that to my God."

The cardinal said again he regretted past conflict with Hungarian laws.

"I state that, according to my belief, I am not and I have never been the enemy of the Hungarian people," he said. "I have no controversies with the workers and with the peasants, to whom I and my family belong.

"I have no intention of taking away any rights from any category, but after the tragedy of the World War a most difficult historical role was waiting for me and it would have been my task to be the announcer of the light of the evangelism."

"I Am Thankful to My God"

Referring to Hungarian land law revisions of 1945, the cardinal pointed out that the bench of Hungarian Bishops blessed the peasants who were given property from large estates and has said repeatedly the Catholic Church would never ask for return of confiscated acres.

"I am thankful to my God that, according to my severe conscience, I am not an enemy of peace," the

Welles Leaves Hospital After Six-Week Stay

Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State, was released from Casualty Hospital at 11 a. m. yesterday after a six-week stay for treatment of severe frostbite.

The 56-year-old former diplomat is recuperating at an undisclosed location. He is expected to return to his farm in Oxon Hill, Md., at the end of this week.

He was found unconscious and near death in a field less than a mile from his home at 7 a. m., December 26, with his clothes frozen to his body.

Welles attributed the accident to heart seizure while he was walking late the previous night to overcome insomnia.

He was saved from probable amputations by new techniques of controlled-temperature treatment for frostbite. A month after he was stricken, physicians said he was preparing to go home.

New Storms Threaten Gains Made in Battle of Blizzards

Chicago, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—New snowstorms and high winds threatened today to wipe out the gains made in the blizzard-burdened West's struggle against one of the worst winters on record.

A storm front swirling across the Rocky Mountains increased the peril to 4,700,000 cattle and sheep threatened with starvation on frozen rangelands.

In Nebraska, South Dakota and Wyoming, the Fifth Army announced that the biggest mass bulldozer operation in history had made impressive inroads in the battle of the blizzards.

But United States weather forecasters predicted that winds of 30 to 40 miles per hour would whistle across the western and central Nebraska plains tonight and with "considerable blowing and drifting snow."

It was feared that the new storm would blow shut many of the roads the Army bulldozer crews had cleared during the past seven days.

Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, commander of the bulldozer operation, said at his Omaha headquarters that during the first seven days in the three-State area the Army cleared 9180 miles of road, liberating 25,131 snowbound persons. The operation enabled hay and feed to be moved into the area where 550,740 head of cattle and

Stocks, Lard, Cotton Prices Still Slipping

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—A week of tumbling prices came to an end today with stocks, cotton, lard and some other commodities still slipping.

Stocks in New York fell for the sharpest loss since the day after the presidential election. Declines ran from a few cents to more than $3 on top of extreme losses of $5 yesterday. Numerous issues hit new lows for the past year or more.

Action of stocks nailed down a general decline which began in such basic commodities as grain, livestock, butter, eggs and cotton. It is a decline which has been going on for several months, but which picked up momentum in the present week.

Drops in commodity prices had a repetitious appearance, for it was just one year ago this week that the big postwar break hit grains and spread to other commodities.

The one big difference from last year was that this time the price slump came from levels which, to begin with, were lower than in 1948. Nor were the declines as sharp as last year.

Also, last year prices were far above the points at which the Government was pledged to step in and support the market. This year prices of some commodities, particularly grains, had slipped through that support level as if it didn't exist.

Many market were closed today, but there were enough open to send the Associated Press index of 35 wholesale commodity prices to a new two-year low at 167.95. That compared with 175.97 a

'Cinderella' Role Reported Planned For Miss Truman

Boston, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—Hollywood Producer Joseph Pasternak was quoted today as saying he planned to star Margaret Truman in a three-million-dollar "Cinderella" musical.

A spokesman said, however, there had been "no discussion" of putting the President's daughter in the movies.

The Boston Post said the producer had made the statement in a "casual conversation."

"I would like to see her playing a waitress who works her way up to becoming a great opera star," he was quoted as saying.

Attorneys Advised

Judge Scott Acts to Prevent Client Soliciting in His Court

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Judge Armond W. Scott yesterday moved to prevent lawyers from soliciting clients in his courtroom.

Before the judge acted, a lawyer voluntarily returned half of $100 received from a citizen charged with drunken driving. The other half was returned at the request of the jurist after he spoke of "other action."

The citizen ended up handing the $100 to the court as the fine.

Declaring that legal ethics forbid lawyers' shopping for business, the Municipal Court judge called for stronger checks against the possibility of violations.

The judge ordered his bailiffs alerted to prevent lawyers from approaching locked-up defendants until he gets on the bench. He commented at one point:

"There ought to be a Municipal Court rule that no lawyer, unless previously and voluntarily retained by the defendant, shall be allowed to see the defendant without the court's permission, either before, during or after court is in session."

The statement was made after completion of a driving while drunk case against John E. Alfriend, 23, who said he is a student at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and resides at 3022 Duke st., Alexandria, Va.

According to police, on Friday night Alfriend was found to be under the influence of liquor when he was arrested for driving his car

'Grass Roots' Home Rule Bill Drafted

Compromise D. C. Measure Designed To Represent All Of Plan's Advocates

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

In a joint effort, members of the Washington Home Rule Committee and the District Central Democratic Committee are nearing completion of a "grass roots" Washington home rule bill for presentation to Congress.

Benjamin C. Sigal, member of the Democratic Central Committee's home rule group, told The Washington Post last night that finishing touches would be put on the bill in the next two days, and that it would be ready for presentation to the Senate District Committee early this week.

The new draft, which follows the general pattern of the Auchincloss bill, is the product of many weeks of analysis and study by the two groups, in close cooperation with Senate suffrage leaders.

To Represent all Elements

Spokesmen for both groups emphasized that they purposely have rewritten the local suffrage measure "most slowly and cautiously" in an effort to come up with a bill that will represent all elements of Washington's home rule advocates.

In the course of writing their legislation, minor disagreement among the committee members has centered, it was learned, in the following areas:

1. Should streamlining of the District government departmental setup be included, similar to the Auchincloss home-rule bill? Or should the bill be restricted only to the home-rule features, principally a 12-member elected city council and an elected Board of Education, leaving to the former body the job of reorganizing its own city government in its own way?

Oppose Dual Approach

Many of the home-rule drafters have opposed the "double-barrelled" approach on grounds that Congress would pass only the less controversial reorganization aspects of the bill. Also, they maintain, passage of the President's overall Government reorganization measure would permit a District administrative shakeup by executive order.

The committee members agree that this question is essentially a matter of political strategy, and have indicated that final decision will rest with Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), who heads the Senate Home Rule Subcommittee.

2. Should there be separate qualifications for voting in city council elections and in delegate-to-Congress elections as the Auchincloss bill now stipulates? Under that plan, only a year's residency in the District is required in council contests, whereas to vote for delegate a person would have to be legally domiciled here, and have no other voting residence.

Some committee members have held that it would be difficult to conduct elections with dual voting lists.

Another point still up in the air, suffrage spokesmen said, centers on the question of whether a provision placing all District employes under Civil Service status should be included. The original Auchincloss bill as introduced in

Party Rows Delay Senate T-H Hearing

8 Hours of Strife Climaxed as Neely Roars at Taft: 'Keep Your Mouth Shut'

Bitter partisanship yesterday dragged the Senate Labor Committee's hearings on repeal of the Taft Hartley law far behind schedule and indicated prolonged floor debate on the measure.

The committee climaxed eight hours of public squabbling last night with Senator Neely (D., W. Va.) roaring, "You keep your mouth shut" to Senator Taft (R., Ohio).

It was the sixth day of the bitterest hearings in recent Senate history.

During the long day and evening:

1. Democrats accused Republicans of dragging out the hearings to make it impossible to finish by the February 10 deadline they have fixed.

2. Senator Aiken (R., Vt.) shot back that the Democrats were treating the proposed bill purely as "a political measure."

3. Senator Murray (D., Mont.) angrily accused a witness—Gerard D. Reilly, who helped write the Taft-Hartley Act of—"double-crossing labor," and said Reilly "got in here on false pretenses."

4. Democrats ridiculed Senator Taft and disputed his prediction that Congress will keep most of the Taft-Hartley provisions on the books.

Taft, Neely Clash

One of these was Neely. In an exchange with Taft yesterday morning, Taft said Neely was trying to "blackguard" a witness—Ludwig Teller, a New York lawyer—who had some good things to say about the law which bears Taft's name.

Just before last night's 10 p. m. closing time, Neely said he had not heard Taft use the word "blackguard" but had read it in a newspaper.

Neely: "If he said that, he shamefully violated the rules of the Senate."

Taft: "I—.

Neely: "I have the floor. You keep your mouth shut until I get through."

Taft Apologizes

Several Senators exclaimed in protest. Taft tried to speak. Neely said: "If he will apologize, it will save me having to call the Senator a name I don't want to use."

Taft: "I meant to say bulldoze. If I said blackguard, I withdraw it and ask that it be retracted from the record."

Neely said, "Very well, I accept the apology," and indignantly left the room.

Representatives of the commercial printing industry testified through the evening. Sitting idly by were other scheduled witnesses, including Robert N. Denham, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, and Woodruff Randolph, president of the International Typographical Union. They will come back Monday.

The printing industry witnesses asked that a number of Taft-Hartley provisions affecting their industry be retained in any new labor law.

Reilly, a former member of the NLRB, is attorney for some of them. While he was on the stand, Murray said Reilly, by helping to write the Taft-Hartley Act, was "double-crossing" labor.

The intracommittee fight finally

Not Giving Up Driver's Seat

Democrats to Slap Down GOP Push for Action on Filibuster

A Republican move to force quick action this week on a filibuster-killing change in Senate rules will be slapped down by the Democrats.

The Senate Democratic caucus yesterday pledged, on a show of hands, its unanimous opposition to a motion by Senator Knowland (R., Calif.) which comes up automatically in the Senate Monday.

The Democrats decided, Senator McClelland (D., Ark.) said, "that they are not going to let the Republicans run the Senate."

The Republicans, quarterbacked by Knowland, replied that they will give the Democrats a chance to show whether they are only giving "lip service" to President Truman's civil rights proposals.

Knowland wants to take away from the Rules Committee and place on the Senate calendar a resolution under which two-thirds of those voting could gag debate at any time.

Under present rules, the debate gag applies only on bills actually before the Senate and not to motions. Southern Democrats opposing President Truman's civil rights proposals always have stalled them by filibustering, or talking to death, motions to take them up.

A heavy docket, meanwhile, faces Congress this week but the desire of members to participate in Lincoln celebrations may shove much of it aside.

Senate and House leaders have crammed the calendars for the first few days in the hope of disposing of several major bills.

An Administration bill to give the President power to shuffle executive agencies comes before the House Monday, along with a resolution to change the deadline for determination by Congress of an appropriations ceiling.

Those two bills will be followed by the Administration's reciprocal trade measure, which is expected to keep the House in a wrangle for two days.

Knowland's motion in the Senate put Administration leaders on a political spot.

But Senator Lucas of Illinois, the majority leader, said his colleagues suport his stand that the Rules Committee must have "reasonable" time to act on the rules change proposal. The committee adjourned abruptly last Wednesday without acting, precipitating Knowland's motion.

Since the Democrats hold a 54-to-42 edge over the Republicans in the Senate, Lucas said the caucus had decided to "vote the Knowland motion up or down."

"The Democratic leadership proposes to keep a firm hand on the reins of leadership against any effort for political reasons—and I say that advisedly—to interfere with the orderly disposition of the

Russia Warns Norway To Sign Soviet Pact, Keep West Out of Bases

Note From Kremlin Cautions Oslo on Joining 'Aggressive' Atlantic Alliance

London (Sunday), Feb. 6 (AP). Russia offered a nonaggression pact to Norway today after tacitly warning the Scandinavian country against joining an Atlantic alliance with the United States and western Europe.

The Soviet Ambassador to Norway handed Dr. Halvard Lange, Norwegian Foreign Minister, a note yesterday containing the offer, the Moscow Radio said in a broadcast heard in London.

[The United Press quoted the Russian broadcast as saying the Western Union powers wanted to draw Norway into the pact in order to establish military bases there. Characterizing Norway's assurance against granting military bases as insufficient, the Russians said:

["This statement means that any provocational rumors or hastily concocted falsifications about the threat of attack against Norway would suffice to make Norway grant . . . bases to the armed forces of foreign countries at any time including the present peacetime."]

On January 29 Russia asked Norway's attitude toward the Atlantic pact, pointing out that the two countries have a common frontier. Norway's reply was made Tuesday.

Atlantic Pact Criticized

The latest Russian note said the Soviet Union could not agree with Norway that the Atlantic pact would meet the aims of the United Nations.

Russia also declared Norway "failed to give a clear reply" as to whether Norway would permit foreign bases to be established on Norwegian territory.

The Soviet note said the inclusion of Norway in the Atlantic pact "can lead to Norway being involved in a policy of a particular grouping of powers pursuing far-reaching aggressive aims."

Russia declared the nations envisioned as members of the Atlantic pact form "a restricted grouping of states which do not aim at consolidating peace and international security."

Cites Friendship for Norway

The projected pact would include the United States, Canada, Britain, France, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg. Norway, Denmark and other nations have been spoken of as joining it.

The Soviet note said Norway's February 1 reply contained a "suggestion that the threat of attack could emanate from the Soviet Union." Russia said such a suggestion "is void of any foundation" and bespoke her friendly attitude toward Norway.

The note said Russia "in order to eliminate any doubt as to the intentions of the USSR proposes to the Norwegian government the conclusion of a non-aggression

U. S. Scale Lagging, Council Says

AFL Asks Pay Boost of $650 A Year for Federal Employes

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Miami, Fla., Feb. 5—The leadership of the American Federation of Labor today asked Congress to give Federal employes a $650-a-year increase.

The AFL Executive Council, in session here, urged immediate consideration of two bills providing the wage increase for postal workers and other Federal employes. The measures were introduced by Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), chairman of the Senate Committee on Postoffice and Civil Service.

The council declared its conviction that the wages of the average Government employe are lagging considerably behind those in private industry.

But, the council added, "the more compelling reason for immediate action is present high prices."

Living costs, the council said, are far beyond the reach of Government workers.

During the past 24 years three pay bills have been passed for Government employes, but in each instance they have been "half-way measures," according to the council.

The Eightieth Congress, in its last hours, granted a $450-a-year increase to postal personnel and $330 for other Federal employes, effective last July.

In the case of the postal workers, the council pointed out, the raise represented a 14½ per cent boost in salary "at a time when the Government's own figures showed a 33.6 per cent rise in living costs since the last pay adjustment more than two years before."

The record of the Government in dealing with its own employes has not always been praiseworthy in the matter of wages, the AFL leaders stated, adding:

"Government career employes are denied the accepted economic bargaining agents enjoyed by law by other workers. It is a moral obligation of the Congress to deal with the men and women in the Government in a fair and just manner."

The AFL Council also noted that President Truman, in his annual budget message, said: "The Government and its employes should be assured that the salaries paid for positions at all levels are fair compensation for the work performed."

Ex-President to Appear

First Hoover Report Section Will Go to Congress Monday

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The first portion of the Hoover recommendations for reorganization of the executive branch of the Government will be delivered to Congress Monday.

From now on, the report will reach Congress at the rate of two or three sections a week until the full report—about 15 sections—will have been made.

At 10:30 a. m. Monday, former President Herbert Hoover, chairman of the reorganization commission, will appear before the Senate Executive Expenditures Committee to discuss the report and the recently presented bill to give President Truman authority to order changes in the administrative branch subject to congressional veto.

Both Hoover and President Truman have recommended passage of the bill. Both have urged that no agencies be exempted from it.

In spite of these high-level requests, the House Committee on Expenditures last week reported out a measure that would require that several agencies, including the defense department and a few regulatory bodies, be covered in separate recommendations. In testimony before the House committee a week ago, Hoover emphatically disapproved such a provision.

In spite of President Truman's

Cabbie Fails To Spot His Attackers

By John London and Al Lewis
Post Reporters

The taxi driver who was beaten at Thomas Circle on January 14 failed to identify his assailants in a police lineup yesterday. The lineup included two policemen reassigned by Police Chief Robert J. Barrett because he suspected they were responsible for the beating.

Just who did maul James Rowell, 48, Yellow Cab Co. hacker, remained a baffling mystery. He lost three teeth, suffered badly bruised ribs and a broken left arm which is still in a cast.

Rowell emerged from a special lineup staged by police behind locked doors about 11 a. m. and told reporters: "I couldn't identify anyone."

When reporters pressed for details, the former clothing salesman from Cheverly, Md., refused to elaborate. "I'm a very sick man," he said, "and I'm very tired and I just took my wife to the hospital last night."

In the room where the lineup was held were Detective Sergt. James Roche and Pvt. Angelo Bonaccorsy whom Police Chief Barrett on Thursday said he believed assaulted Rowell. Barrett said he thought the police officers were "guilty as hell, but I've got to prove it."

Asked after the lineup if he still thought the policemen guilty, Barrett said he would not discuss the case.

He hung up on the phone abruptly after referring the reporter to Inspector Robert S. Bryant. Bryant

Miner, 62, Buried By Slide, Dug Out After 10 Hours

Shamokin, Pa., Feb. 5 (U.P.).—A 62-year-old coal miner was rescued tonight after he had been trapped for nearly 10 hours by a cave-in at the bottom of a 20-foot mine shaft.

The feverish efforts of rescue workers were rewarded after a day-long battle in which new coal falls threatened to take the life of Alexander Pochekilo before they could clear away the first slide.

Pochekilo was buried upright by a slide of coal and dirt while he and his son, Joseph, 22, worked in their independent mine at nearby Sagon. Joseph was freed in an hour.

2 Negroes Push Into Keith's, Staging Segregation Protest

Two Negroes, a man and a woman, yesterday crashed Keith Theater's "whites only" policy, attending an afternoon performance with two white persons.

Hardie Meakin, theater manager, said the pair, holding tickets bought by a white man, brushed by the ticket taker, who was alone at the door, and was unable to stop them, although he tried to.

With their white companions, they ran upstairs, Meakin said, and "melted away into the audience so we couldn't find them." They came out more than an hour later, at about 5:15 p.m.

Entrance by the pair with their companions was part of a demonstration by the Young Progressives of the District against the segregation policy of three downtown theaters. Nearly a score of pickets, split in three groups, took up posts at the Capitol, Warner and Keith's.

Two other Negroes who attempted to enter Keith's were turned back by Meakin, who by that time had reached the lobby, and explained that "we reserve the right not to admit those that we do not want to admit."

"We don't want to be the first ones to break down the segregation policy which has been established here for 100 years," said Meakin, who added he wanted to make it clear that the two Negroes would not have gained entrance if there had been two men at the door, as there usually are.

Last week, the young Progressives picketed the Capitol in protest against theater segregation policies.

Bald Attempt To Regulate Cost Of Haircut Fails

Olympia, Wash., Feb. 5 (U.P.).—The House of Representatives was thrown into an uproar today when a law was proposed to reduce the price of haircuts for persons "having less than a full head of hair."

The House was considering a bill regulating barbering when Representative Vernon A. Smith arose, his bare scalp glistening, and suggested an amendment that:

"Fees charged for haircutting for persons having less than a full head of hair shall be reduced in proportion to the quantity of hair the customer possesses."

Cries of "Get the hair out of your eyes," rose from the lawmakers.

Representative Bringham Young opposed the amendment on grounds that barbers had to look harder when people had less hair.

The vote was against the amendment.

One Representative immediately proposed a substitute amendment which would charge people with less hair more for shaves because they "would have a longer forehead." This also was eliminated.

Reds' Blast Halts China Peace Talks

Nanking (Sunday), Feb. 6 (U.P.). Chinese peace possibilties nose-dived today when the Communist radio called the government of acting President Li Tsung-Jen a "trouble-making token regime," and Li canceled the flight of a peace delegation to Peiping.

The Communist radio opened a bitter attack on Li's administration which came to power when Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek went into retirement, and simultaneously demanded that Li prevent Chiang and other "war criminals" from "escaping."

Unconditional Surrender

The broadcast said Communist demands that the Nationalists prevent the escape of government "war criminals," and punish Japanese war criminals, could now be added to the eight peace demands made by Communist Leader Mao Tze-Tung. Those demands amounted to unconditional surrender.

The spokesman said Li's was only a token government because of the disintegration of government administrative organs. He said that instead of making any contribution to peace negotiations it was "really continuously making trouble."

A few hours earlier Li suddenly canceled the flight of a six-man delegation which planned to ask Communist leaders in Peiping to begin peace talks.

Peace Trip Canceled

Kan Chia-hou, his representative in Shanghai, announced that the flight, set for today, had been called off. Kan said the peace delegation might leave "in three days."

Strong Communist forces were reported driving southwest of Nanking today on a broad outflanking movement which threatened a Yangtze River crossing in the almost undefended area between here and Hankow.

The heavy troop movement appeared to have taken the Nationalists by surprise and the Central Daily News said the exact objective of the columns was not known.

Military Talk

Differences Ironed Out At Rhodes

NYHT News Service

Rhodes, Feb. 5—Egyptian and Israeli military leaders at the Rhodes armistice conference met privately for the first time today after some differences which have stalled negotiations for the past week were ironed out at a joint gathering of full delegations.

Col. Yigal Yadin, Israeli chief of staff, and Col. Mohammed Seif Eddine of the Egyptian general staff sat down with Brig. Gen. William E. Riley, United Nations Truce Commission chief of staaff, in an effort to agree upon military technicalities concerning an armistice line.

U. N. officials regarded the first purely military session of the three-week-old conference as an encouraging advance from the political phase.

The two full delegations met for 90 minutes this morning with Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, U. N. acting mediator. The meeting made good progress, and it was reliably learned that the Egyptian leaders took the initiative in suggesting the military conference.

There is no longer any pessimism here that one of the parties will walk out of the conference. U. N. sources are certain it will progress to a conclusion.

Dr. Bunche has moved to bring other Arab states into the conference. Contrary to reports, no Arab government has as yet replied to his invitation.

Acheson Is Only 'Mister' to Guard

Dean Acheson had trouble yesterday getting by a guard at the State Department doorway.

"Yes," Acheson replied. "I am the Secretary of State."

Sen. Chapman Blocks Action On Nomination of Ethridge

By the United Press

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has quietly shelved for the time being President Truman's nomination of Mark F. Ethridge to be the United States member of the United Nations Peace Commission for Palestine, it was learned yesterday.

Ethridge, publisher of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal, already is on duty in Palestine. But it may be some time before the Senate confirms his appointment.

At the request of Senator Virgil Chapman (D., Ky.), the Foreign Relations Committee put Ethridge's appointment to the $12,000-a-year U. N. job at least temporarily on ice.

Ethridge's newspaper opposed Chapman's election to the Senate in November and backed his Republican rival, former Senator John Sherman Cooper. The newspaper did, however, support the election of Mr. Truman.

Chapman declined to discuss the matter. From other sources it was learned that the committee took up the nomination last Wednesday. But it was informed that Chapman requested a postponement of what had been considered a routine confirmation procedure. Members were told that Chapman might testify against the nomination later.

Ethridge, who served the late President Roosevelt on overseas missions, probably will draw his pay in any event because it comes from the United Nations and not from the United States Treasury.

But diplomatic sources said failure to confirm the appointment soon might be "awfully embarrassing." They expressed some doubt as to whether Ethridge could take part in any conciliation commission decisions as a representative of this country until the constitutional requirement of Senate confirmation is met.

If Chapman makes opposition to Ethridge a point of "personal privilege," the nomination might never be confirmed.

Traditionally the Senate rejects appointments when a Senator from the nominee's home State says the appointment is "personally obnoxious" to him.

The man in the middle may turn out to be Vice President Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, who is reported to friendly with Ethridge. There was no way of telling whether he could persuade Chapman not to block the nomination.

U. S. May Aid Middle East, If Peaceful

By the United Press

This Government is considering economic help for the Middle East if genuine peace can be established between the Jews and Arabs, officials said last night.

The possibility of a large-scale future program for putting that part of the world on its economic feet was discussed in recent conversations between the State Department and British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks, it was said.

Officials emphasized that the program would hinge on restoration of peace to Palestine.

Peace in the Middle East was the subject of separate talks yesterday between Secretary of State Dean Acheson and officials of Egypt and Israel.

Acheson talked for 45 minutes with Eliahu Epstein, special Israeli representative, and for 30 minutes with Egyptian Ambassador Mohamed Kamil Abdul Rahim.

The Egyptian said he discussed with the secretary the peace talks at Rhodes between his country and the Jews. Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, acting United Nations mediator, reportedly has presented a new compromise plan for breaking a 19-day deadlock in the Rhodes armistice negotiations.

All Epstein would say after his talk with Acheson, however, was that the question is under study.

The purpose of the State Department talks with Franks, officials said, was to develop insofar as possible a joint Anglo-American approach to the problem of ending the Palestine war and bringing stability to Israel and the Arab world.

North Korean Forces Reported In 5 Attacks Across Border

Seoul, Korea, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—Brig. Gen. Che Byung Buk, chief of staff of the Korean national army, said today that North Korean forces have made numerous attacks across the border into South Korea, five within the past four days.

However, he said in an interview, he did not believe the North Koreans were ready to open a full-scale invasion of South Korea at this time. If there is a "real invasion" the South Koreans are prepared to meet it, he said.

Che described the current attacks as "political in nature" in view of the arrival of a United Nations commission here. (The U.N. has recognized the South Korean government as the only legal government in Korea.)

More than 100 North Koreans have been killed in the attacks while South Korean casualties have been low, he said.

Royall Devours Pie At U. S. Base in Japan

Osaka, Japan, Feb. 5 (AP).—United States Secretary of Army Kenneth C. Royal ate a whole apple pie today.

On a visit to a mess hall of the Twenty-seventh Infantry Regiment he saw a stack of apple pies. Exclaiming "my these smell good," he took a pie and ate it all.

Expert Sees Jap, German Armies Soon

By the United Press

Japanese and German armies—controlled by the United States and Britain—may be established before the end of this year, a military analyst predicted last night.

William Bradford Huie, writing in Nation's Business, said a new American-controlled Japanese army may begin to appear before the end of 1949. A revived German army under British-American control is "more than a possibility," he said.

Huie reported that United States military aid is now being furnished "in one form or another" to the armies of 30 foreign nations—"virtually all the non-Soviet armies of the earth." Millions of dollars already have been spent in training and equipping those armies, Huie said, "and the prospect of spending several bililons more is a pivotal issue of the Eighty-first Congress."

Huie said proposals to build up the French army may cost as much as one billion dollars and involve future commitments to spend an additional five billion dollars. Japan is now costing American taxpayers about one billion dollars a year, Huie said, and Germany probably will continue to cost another one billion dollars.

Assassin's Party Outlawed by Iran

Tehran, Iran, Feb. 5.—The Government today outlawed the leftist Tudeh Party and accused one of the party members of yesterday's attempt to assassinate Shah Mohammed Reza Pahelvi.

The accused assailant, Fakhr Raiee, died last night in a hospital of injuries inflicted when a mob beat hm after the shooting.

An official communique said the Shah is recovering from two minor bullet wounds. One bullet pierced his cheek and another struck him in the side. Three other bullets struck the young ruler's hat.

Raiee was described in Parliament as an active Tudeh member. Acting Interior Minister Manouchehr Eqbal said Tudeh organizations would be dissolved throughout the country.

France Considers Idea of Big 4 Talk

Norway Official To Confer Here

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
HALVARD M. LANGE, Foreign Minister of Norway, who left Oslo yesterday, with other government officials, for talks in Washington on the projected North Atlantic Defense Pact

By Russell Hill
NYHT News Service

Paris, Feb. 5.—French official circles have been giving serious consideration to the idea of a "Big Four" meeting, it was learned today.

The Foreign Ministry denied that France had proposed to Washington and London a "final attempt" to negotiate with Prime Minister Stalin before concluding an Atlantic pact. However, the possibility that such an approach may be made in the near future was not ruled out.

There is a strong current of opinion in Paris opposed to out-of-hand rejection of any Soviet peace feelers.

It is obvious that France would prefer the initiative to come from elsewhere than Paris. Reports that Washington would consider a "Big Four" meeting now inopportune will probably make it more difficult for the French government to act.

There is no doubt, that it would react much more favorably to any suggestion of a "Big Four" conference than to Stalin's proposal for a meeting with President Truman.

Stalin Reported Ready For Big Four Conference

Berlin, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—The Soviet licensed Berliner Zeitung quoted Moscow correspondents today that Premier Stalin would be willing to attend a Big Four conference. This shows that Stalin is making all efforts to secure peace, the newspaper said.

Council Would Avoid Defense Discussions

London, Feb. 5 (AP).—The five Brussels Pact allies disclosed tonight the proposed "Council of Europe"—the continent's first international parliament — would sidestep the explosive issue of common defense.

A communique issued by representatives of Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg sketched broad outlines of the proposed council. It will be divided into a key committee of ministers and a consultative assembly with advisory powers.

The communique said discussion of common defense matters would be barred. This was interpreted as a move to forestall Soviet criticism of a European parliament by leaving the problem of mutual defense to the North Atlantic defense pact

The communique, issued after a three-day meeting of the Brussels Treaty Permanent Commission, made only limited recommendations for the two organs of the proposed council.

Final conclusions, the communique said, must wait for a conference of the Brussels Pact powers with other European countries who will be invited to join.

Main recommendations of the commission were:

1. The committee of ministers would consist of one minister from each member country. The committee "could discuss all questions of common concern to member countries with the exception of questions relating to national defense." The committee "would also be resonsible for preparing the work of the assembly."

2. The consultative assembly, to meet once a year would act in a deliberative capacity and "would make recommendations to the committee of ministers." It would have "no legislative or constituent powers."

Russia Offers Pact to Oslo

pact with the USSR and thus to put all end to any doubts."

Dr. Lange left Norway for Washington yesterday shortly after the Moscow radio said he received the Soviet note. He will discuss with American officials Norway's inclusion in the proposed Atlantic pact.

Last week discussion among the three Scandinavian countries — Norway, Sweden and Denmark— for a three-way defense alliance broke down. Sweden had demanded that the three countries remain completely independent of any other grouping of powers, while Norway had insisted on linking defense plans with the western powers in the Atlantic pact.

Norway told Russia in her note Tuesday that she had hoped the United Nations would provide the necessary strength to maintain peace and security for all nations but that this hope had not materialized.

Caring for her own security, the note said, Norway was convinced of the necessity for seeking increased security through regional defensive cooperation.

The note emphasized, however, that Norway would not permit the establishment of air or naval bases on her territory unless attacked or threatened with attack.

Today's note from Moscow is in reply to that Norwegian communication.

It said:

"From the reply given by the Norwegian government it is clear that as regards the question of participation of Norway in the Atlantic union, it (Norway) contends that the United Nations has not yet become sufficiently strong for upholding the peace and security of all countries."

The Russian broadcast said the Norwegian government regarded the Atlantic pact as a regional agreement inside the framework of the U. N. Charter and that it has the aim "of averting aggression."

"The Soviet government does not share this opinion of the Norwegian government as regards the aims and nature of the Atlantic union," the Russian reply said.

Karen Rebels Fight for Railway

Rangoon, Berma, Feb. 5 (AP).—Karen rebels and Communist troops battled fiercely with national troops today for control of vital railway facilities.

Official reports said the Rebels seized one point on the Rangoon-Mandalay railway, and were fighting for control of another. This battle is being waged about 50 miles north of here and 10 miles north of the railway junction city, Pegu.

The government confirmed that the Rebels had overrun Nyaunglebin, on the railroad 90 miles north of here.

Other Karen tribesmen were reported massing at Nyaungmya, 80 miles southwest of Rangoon in the Irrawaddy Delta.

Soviet Fliers Hear Dixieland Jive...

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

WASHBOARD STYLE—Russian fliers Anatol Barsov (left) and Peter Pirogev, who are touring Virginia as guests of the State Chamber of Commerce, are treated to a bit of real Americana on a Richmond street corner. The entertainers are four Negro boys known as the "Ramblers," whose rhythmic southern jive appears to fascinate the fugitives from Russia

Soviets Warn Of Retaliation In Berlin Bloc

Berlin, Feb. 5 (AP). — The cold war reached a new point of tension in Berlin tonight.

Soviet-licensed newspapers printed implied warnings of retaliation as the Anglo-American forces tightened their counter-blockade of the Russian sector of Berlin.

German workmen and police dug ditches at strategic highway points to help back up the Allied ban on motor freight traffic from western Europe into the Soviet zone of Germany. Rail freight had been banned earlier.

About the only links now left between Berlin and the West, except the Allied airlift, are the communications cables.

The Russians resumed their heckling tactics of sending fighter planes into the main airlift corridor to engage in target practice. The West protested what it called a dangerous practice, but nevertheless the airlift brought another 6000 tons of freight into this land-blockaded city.

Further heightening the tension was a report that two new Soviet army divisions have been moved into Germany. The Russians are believed to have 330,000 troops here.

Escaped Soviet Fliers Spend Busy Day on Virginia Tour

Lexington, Va., Feb. 5 (AP).—The two escaped Russian fliers on a tour of Virginia for a personal view of the democratic scene—American style—wound up their first day of sightseeing tonight at a basketball game at the Virginia Military Institute.

It was a full day for Peter Pirogov and Anatol Barsov. As they headed for a night's rest at Roanoke, the answers to questions that were banked off interpreters came through a little fainter.

Starting at Richmond at mid-morning, the fliers saw a variety of sights—from department store manikins to the mountains. These terminal views were interrupted by stopovers for ice cream in a Buckingham country store and a luncheon at Natural Bridge.

Reporters, banking their questions off interpreters, were given replies of amazement and pleasure. A $75 tweed suit would be about 1080 rubles in Russia, Pirogov said with a shake of his head—about two months salary for a laboring man.

But there was no need for an interpreter when three slick models paraded in an evening gown, a beach playsuit and a snappy cocktail dress. Both Pirogov and Barsov commented on the models, using the international eyebrow code.

Then the store decided it would present the fliers with shirts.

"They didn't speak any English at all," said a blonde salesgirl, "but they managed to select shirts that cost $10 each."

Zachariadis Seen New Chief

Athens, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—Constantine Rentis, Minister of Public Order, tonight identified Nicholas Zachariadis as the "new Communist generalissimo," indicating that Zachariadis has replaced Gen. Markos Vafiades both militarily and politically as chief of the Greek guerillas.

The Greek general staff reported last night that it had monitored a guerilla broadcast which reported Vafiades had been relieved of his Communist Party duties because of illness and that Zachariadis had succeeded him as head of the Communist Party.

Rentis said also that he believed the "Free Greece" government established by Vafiades would be ended this year through the combined forces of American aid and Greek suport of the Truman Doctrine.

Polish Police Smash Plot To Kill Government Leaders

Warsaw, Feb. 5 (AP).—The Polish security police said today they have crushed a foreign-financed plot to kill government leaders.

The announcement did not name the men said to have been marked for death. Neither did it identify the country alleged to have supplied the conspirators with money.

A massive roundup of former members of the Home Army smashed the plot, the police said. They reported "several scores" of suspects have been seized in the biggest security roundup in more than a year.

The accused carried the banners of the Home Army in the 1944 uprising against the Nazis. After the war they opposed Russian domination of their country.

An unconfirmed report said a time bomb had been found near the meeting place of the Council of Ministers. This group, composed of President Boleslaw Beirut and six other officials, rules Poland by decree.

Only sketchy details of the conspiracy were disclosed. Police raiders seized automatic weapons, small arms, explosives and "a large amount of gold and paper dollars," the police said.

The government long has accused the United States of provoking internal troubles in Poland. Security Minister Stanislaw Radiewicz once declared openly that forces opposed to his Communist-domnated government had been "reduced to an intelligence service agency in the pay of the most aggressive imperialistic power—the United States."

Prosecutor Asks Death for Cardinal

cardinal said. "I had never been against peace. I only pointed out emphatically certain preliminary conditions in the interest of a long and lasting (church-state) peace.'

He said he had confessed already that "I came into conflict with the laws of the state in certain things concerning finances."

"I have already offered restitution. That is my earnest (wish).

"I prayed this morning to my Lord and asked for peace in these heavy days. I brought the love of my church to this courtroom, and I beg for this love for the Hungarian state, to which I have shown obedience here.

"I also beg for this love for myself and may the Lord give wisdom to the court, when they pass their sentence, which may help a settlement at home and abroad."

Associated Press RADIOPHOTO
CARDINAL MINDSZENTY
Asks Wisdom for the Court

Drugging Report Denounced

Prosecutor Elapi denounced reports abroad that admissions of the defendants were extorted by drugs or torture. He declared all were guilty.

"The verdict should stigmatize the traitors," he said. "It should be hard and inexorable."

Cardinal Mindszenty's lawyer, Kalman Kicko, led off final pleas before the five judges of the people's court with a reminder: 'All of you in this courtroom will likely be mentioned in world history and your deeds will be judged through the next century."

The prosecutor's demand for the death penalty was couched in Hungarian legal terms; it was not expressed directly. Hungarian prosecutors never ask flatly for life or death sentences. But the recommendation for a hard sentence means a recommendation for execution. Similarly, defense lawyers always ask for leniency, not acquittal.

The prosecutor demanded the removal of Cardinal Mindszenty as one of "the last remnants of reaction."

He said the 56-year-old spiritual leader of Hungary's seven million Catholics was not the man indicted "but it is Josef Mindszenty, Hungarian citizen, who committed great crimes and who is responsible, whether he wears the purple of a cardinal or is in rags."

Elapi emphasized the charge that the primate sought to induce the United States to interfere in internal Hungarian affairs and to declare war. He said "that was the treason." He said "hatred of democracy, not defense of religion," was the motive.

Then one by one rose the lawyers for the cardinal and the others: Duke Paul Esterhazy, wealthy royalist.

The Rev. Ondras Zaker, pale, slim former secretary to the cardinal.

Prof. Justin Baranyay, a professor of church law.

The Rev. Miklos Nagy, secretary of Catholic Action, a lay organization.

Laszlo Toth, a journalist who worked for Nagy.

The Rev. Bela Ispenky, a priest.

Professor Pleads Wholly Innocent

Of all the group, only Baranyay had pleaded wholly innocent.

Cardinal Mindszenty's attorney, Kicko, opened in an apologetic vein. He said he agreed with the prosecutor that the cardinal's activities had "harmed the country immensely" and that many false stories about the case had been printed abroad.

He asked for a "wise and lenient decision." He said: "My task is difficult, but I did the best I could for the defendant." He pointed out religious teaching is compulsory in Hungarian schools and said there is no attack on freedom of religion in Hungary. He belittled the role of Hungarian royalists.

Kicko declared that Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York, whom the prosecution has sought to link with Cardinal Mindszenty's operation, is not "a definite factor in American political life."

He said Cardinal Mindszenty used not a penny of the money he made in illegal trading of dollars for his own purposes, but was duty bound to arrange foreign currency operations for his church.

Spellman to Denounce Trial From Pulpit Today

New York, Feb. 5 (U.P.)—Fancis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, will ascend the pulpit of St. Patrick's Cathedral Sunday to denounce personally the trial of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, primate of Hungary.

The cardinal, who appears in the pulpit but barely, said he will have "much to say."

He designated Sunday as a day of "prayer and protest" throughout the archdiocese. He was joined in this by Catholic churchmen all over the country who dedicated Sunday as a day of prayer for the Hungarian prelate.

Radio Station WOR will broadcast a recording of the sermon at 3 p. m. Sunday.

Vatican Circles 'Despair,' Rome Paper Declares

Vatican City, Feb. 5 (AP).—Vatican circles "despair for the fate of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty," the independent Rome newspaper Memento Sera said tonight.

L'Osservatore Romano, Vatican newspaper, said the church feels the cardinal is making "mechanical gestures" in his treason trial. It said the church had no credence in the proceedings and believed his confessions are not credible.

The Vatican radio announced it blamed "Eastern powers" for causing disturbances on Vatican wavelengths during its foreign language broadcasts.

U. S. Protests Exclusion Of Officials From Trial

By the United Press

The United States has protested to Hungary over exclusion of American Legation personnel from the trial of Cardinal Mindszenty, the State Department said last night.

The State Department previously had said that the American mission had received three tickets to attend the trial, but members were not allowed to enter the courtroom.

ECA Retraction Clears 3 Nations

NYHT News Service

The Economic Cooperation Administration, after a six-weeks investigation, retracted yesterday its charge that Great Britain, Belgium and Holland were profiting by reselling to American companies aluminum and lead scrap obtained originally with Marshall Plan dollars.

The retraction was made in an announcement by Howard Bruce, deputy ECA administrator, on the outcome of the investigation launched after his preinvestigation blast at the three Marshall Plan countries on December 14.

It had been alleged in news reports then that almost one-fifth of about 100,000 tons of aluminum and lead purchased by the three western European contries with ECA funds had been resold to purchasers here in the form of scrap.

Intensive investigation since then, Bruce asserted yesterday, "confirmed ECA's previously stated position that there were no improprieties on the part of the three governments involved in these transactions." The transactions involved covered the first ten months of 1948.

"The investigation also showed," Bruce added, "that a substantial portion of the United States imports of the two metals recorded as coming from the United Kingdom and the Netherlands was actually in-transit shipments which had originated elsewhere. Furthermore, the study indicated with respect to Belgium that much of the lead exported to the United States was under the control of non-Belgium interests, which merely used Belgian refining facilities in the processing of the concentrates en route to their destination."

However, ECA indicated that the fact that any aluminum and lead scrap is available in western Europe for sale to the United States, when the United States is sharing its short supply with western European countries, poses a problem which requires "further study by the European countries and ourselves."

Inflation Less

U. N. Reports Economy of World Gains

Lake Success, Feb. 5 (AP).—The United Nations reported tonight a general improvement in the world economic situation.

A new economic survey said food production increased sharply in 1948, more industrial goods were turned out, and international trade was better.

It also stated there were signs inflationary prices are beginning to drop in some countries.

The 52-page report was prepared for the Economic and Social Council, which opens its eighth session here Monday. It is entitled Major Economic Changes In 1948."

Russian Expansion

The document refers briefly to both the European Recovery Program and Russia's newly organized Economic Council for Mutual Aid in eastern Europe.

As in previous U. N. economic studies, there was not much information on Russia and her satellites. The report did state that expansion of production in Russia was one of the chief factors in increased world production last year.

In fact, it was reported that Russia and some other countries which do not receive Marshall Plan aid, showed a greater increase in production than some of the western European countries. Italy, for example, showed a slight decline in industrial output, while Poland reported a gain of more than 25 per cent over her 1947 production.

Barter Trade, Credit

The report outlined briefly some of the measures Russia is taking to aid Soviet-bloc countries. These included barter trade agreements and extensions of credit.

On the world food situation, the report said:

"As a result of substantially larger harvests in the summer of 1948, the supply of foodstuffs during 1949 will be increased considerably. This is perhaps the most important economic development during the past year and, for that matter, since the end of the war."

On industrial production:

"According to preliminary estimates, the rate of industrial production for the world as a whole during the first nine months of 1948 reached a level equal to about 132 per cent of that of 1937. This level repreesnted an increase of 11 per cent over that of the corresponding period of 1947."

On inflation:

"Because of the greater volume of agricultural and other consumer goods, inflationary pressure is not likely to be further aggravated during 1949 and may even be reduced in a number of countries."

The report mentioned the United States as one of the countries where signs of deflation had appeared.

Despite improved conditions, the report said, there still are acute shortages of some items. These include textiles, leather and coal.

Dunkirk Hero Gets 5 Years on Treason Charge

Paris, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—Gen. Marle-Bertrand Fagalde, white-haired hero of Dunkirk, was sentenced today to five years solitary confinement for committing treason while an inmate of a German prison camp.

Gen. Rene-Paul Dubuisson was given a four-year suspended sentence and Gen. Jacques D'Arras was acquitted on similar charges..

Fagalde, who commanded the French Eighteenth Army Group which covered the British evacuation at Dunkirk in 1940, was found guilty of having volunteered to join the Nazi Waffen SS while a prisoner at Koenigstein, Germany in 1944. He claimed his offer was a ruse to get out of jail.

Youngsters Aid Heart Fund Drive . . .

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

AS CAMPAIGN OPENS—Two youngsters who have been victims of rheumatic fever make their contribution to the Heart Association Fund drive that will open tomorrow and continue through February 28. Eight-year-old Joanne O'Neil of 656 G st. ne., holds a transparent heart while Barry Charles Nathan, 6, of 3614 S st. nw., drops in a coin. February 12, 13 and 14 have been designated as "Heart Badge Days," during which small red heart badges will be pinned on fund donors

A three-way plan to fight the ravages of heart disease was outlined yesterday by the chairmen of the Washington Heart Association's $75,000 fund campaign, which will begin Monday.

John H. Wilkins, jr., and William E. Leahy, general co-chairmen of the appeal, which will extend through February 28, said yesterday that the fund is needed to finance an association program covering education, research and community services.

The association wants to spread heart disease information among both cardiac patients and healthy persons, and especially among employers. The research program calls for expansion and strengthening of the seven heart clinics in operation here.

In the field of community services, the association wants to be able to follow up treatment of clinic patients, to get child-placing agencies to develop cardiac foster homes, and wants help in establishing summer camps for young heart disease victims who need special treatment.

House Group Backs Trade Plan

By The Associated Press

A majority of the House and Ways and Means committee yesterday formally recommended restoration of the reciprocal trade agreements program without any hobbles.

The report called that course "the only action consistent with our foreign policy as a whole." At the same time the minority criticized the hearings as incomplete.

The committee approved the bill last Wednesday by a vote of 17 to 8. Two Republicans joined the Democratic majority in voting for it.

The measure extends the President's power to negotiate mutual tariff cuts with other nations until June 12, 1951, and eliminates restrictions written into law by the Republican Eightieth Congress.

One of the Republican provisos was that the President must explain to Congress if he disregards Tariff Commission recommendations in reducing duties of specific commodities.

The majority report declared that "the fallacies and subterfuges" of the Republican law, passed last year, "seriously crippled" the United States trade program, which it called the keystone of American foreign economic policy.

Eight Republicans who signed a minority report criticized the Democrats for closing the hearings without calling in the Tariff Commission.

". . . Political emotionalism has triumphed over judgment and reason," the minority said.

Representative Reed (R., N. Y.), ranking minority member of the committee, issued a statement declaring that the bill approved is "completely inadequate to safeguard the Nation's economy and the national defense."

Congress to Get ECA Request For 5.6 Billion

By the United Press

The Administration will ask Congress for $5,650,000,000 to spend on European recovery in the 15 months ending June 30, 1950, it was disclosed last night.

The request will be put before Congress formally Tuesday. Hearings start then in House and Senate on second-round authorizations for the Marshall Plan. The aid goes to 19 nations in western Europe.

Administration sources said $4,400,000,000 will be sought for the next fiscal year, which starts July 1, and that $1,250 000,000 will be requested for the three months prior to July 1.

The new requests show that Marshall Plan costs, as predicted, are dropping. Recovery Chief Paul G. Hoffman has said that expenses to this country should fall each year of the four-year plan.

Congress put up $5,055,000,0000 for the program's first 15 months. However, President Truman was authorized to make the whole sum available in 12 months, and he did so. As of Friday, most of it—$4,491,497,000—had been spent.

Chairman Sol Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee said he would introduce Monday the Administration's bill to blueprint the second year of recovery spending. The new figures probably will be written into the bill.

Hoffman and Secretary of State Dean Acheson will kick off hearings on the aid program Tuesday, at a joint session of House and Senate foreign committees.

Civilian Considered As Staff Chief Head

By The Associated Press

The Hoover Commission yesterday was reported weighing plans to propose a civilian chairman over the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff to cool off interservice rivalries.

The commission has modified its earlier thinking, however, on reducing the Secretary of the Army, Navy and Air Force to "undersecretary" rank. It reportedly favors trimming their powers, leaving their titles unchanged.

This was reported privately by persons familiar with the military planning of the 12-member, two-party commission headed by former President Herbert Hoover.

The group is said to lean toward imposing a civilian chairman on the three coequal chiefs of staff. He would be named by the President, presumably after consulting with the Secretary of Defense.

The commission will make its first report to Congress Monday but the section on the military is not due for some days; it was emphasized that no plans can be considered the commission's final proposals until they reach Congress.

To centralize military authority, save money, and end squabbles over budget and strategy, the commission proposes to center greater power in the Secretary of Defense. This reportedly will mean cutting off the direct line of appeal to the President now enjoyed by the Air, Navy and Army Secretaries.

An earlier, tentative conclusion that the latter should be designated "undersecretaries" ran into dissent in recent commission sittings. Members of Congress who are on the Hoover body said it was highly unlikely that Congress would approve such a "demotion."

The idea now seems dead, informants reported. But a proposed shifting of key powers to the Defense Secretary—including supreme authority over the budgets of the fighting services—remains in the recommendations.

Defense Secretary Forrestal, at a news conference last week, indicated he would not oppose a civilian chairman for the chiefs, but said he believes the job should be held by someone who has had military experience and background.

First Hoover Agency Report Due Monday

expressed desire that agency heads not seek exemption from reorganization plans, several have requested to appear before the Senate committee. The first of these, the committee reports, will be heard Thursday, when Lieut. Gen. Raymond A. Wheeler, chief of Army engineers, will testify. A strong effort is being made to exempt the Army engineers from the bill. Transfer of some of the engineers' civilian functions to public works agencies was recommended by Hoover task forces.

Monday's report by the Hoover commission will cover reorganization plans for the Office of the President. Another early report will deal with reorganization of the Postoffice Department. Other task force reports have been prepared on (1) general departmental management, (2) accounting, (3) budgeting, (4) personnel, (5) purchasing, (6) transportation, (7) veterans' affairs, (8) Federal-State relationships, (9) Government business enterprises, (10) lending agencies, (11) natural resources, (12) medical services, (13) Indian affairs, (14) statistical services, (15) records management, (16) the Departments of Agriculture, State, Interior, Commerce, Treasury, and National Defense.

Worked for 14 Months

The 12-man commission has worked for 14 months. The task forces under it have been busy for from 10 to 14 months with Government agencies, producing what the Hoover office calls "the most comprehensive body of research in the history of Government."

"The committee on reorganization of the armed services, for example, held 25 days and 10 evening sessions and interviewed 245 witnesses," the commission reports.

Many of the problems that the commission met had to do with disagreements between task forces where their researches overlapped. The force dealing with Agriculture covered much of the ground that was covered by public works and natural resources, with similar conflicts all along the line.

Two million words of background material, findings and recommendations were delivered by the task forces. The scope of their studies was indicated by this statement by the commission:

"Employing 2,100,000 persons, more than the population of Philadelphia, the excutive branch has grown tenfold in 20 years. Its 1812 boards, bureaus, agencies and other subdivisions require 722 pages for listing in the Government manual.

The 12-man commission was chosen, four each, by the President, the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate, in 1947. It includes, besides Hoover, Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Senator George D. Aiken, (R., Vt.), Representative Clarence J. Brown, (R., Ohio), Arthur S. Flemming, former chairman of the Civil Service Commission and now president of Ohio Wesleyan University; Defense Secretary James Forrestal, Joseph P. Kennedy, New York City; Senator John L. McClellan, (D., Ark.), former Representative Carter Manasco of Alabama; George H. Mead of Dayton, Ohio; James K. Pollock, professor of political science, University of Michigan, and James Rowe, jr., Washington.

Wolcott Sees Rent Control Need Fading

By The Associated Press

A top-ranking Republican said yesterday price and employment declines mean rent controls may not be needed much longer.

For the same reason, he urged Congress to await developments before handing President Truman anti-inflation powers he asks.

The lawmaker, Representative Wolcott of Michigan, senior GOP member of the House Banking Committee, suggested a 6-months "as is" continuation of rent ceilings. The President wants the law strengthened and extended 2 years.

Wolcott said short term action is "the sensible thing."

"I believe," Wolcott told reporters, "we should give consideration to extending the controls as is to October 1, to see what happens to the economy in the next 90 days. This would have a bearing on whether we need to continue the controls at all."

Melvin H. Baker, chairman of the Construction Industry Information Committee, said meanwhile that the supply of housing in this country had been increased by more than 22 per cent since 1940.

"Yet for those families looking for places to buy or rent at the present time," he added, "there are fewer available accommodations than in 1940.

"There is no paradox in our having more housing per person and yet having a situation in which housing is harder to find. The abnormal rate of new family formation and the high income and purchasing power in the hands of American families have resulted in greater consumption of housing than ever before . . ."

Party Rows Delay Labor Bill Hearing

developed Democratic accusations that Republican members were trying to drag out the hearings and Republican countercharges of "politics" on the part of Democrats.

These charges followed observations by Chairman Thomas (D., Utah) and Senator Murray that proceedings were moving too slowly and would have to be speeded up to meet the deadline set by the committee. Senator Donnell (R., Mo.) retorted that the deadline had been set by a strict party-line vote and could be changed at any time.

Day, Night Sessions Scheduled

Teller represents a number of employers in labor relations. He first took the stand Friday night and found opportunity between committee arguments yesterday to defend some points in the Taft-Hartley Law and express doubt that the Administration substitute would protect management and the public.

Despite the delays which so far have retarded progress in the committee, Democratic members appeared to be sticking by their earlier decision to end proceedings by Thursday. To accomplish this aim they have scheduled day and night sessions since hearings opened.

In one exchange yesterday between Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) and Senator Taft, the Floridian accused Taft of being "inaccurate" and erroneous" in his observations at a news conference Friday. At that time Taft told reporters Congress would retain two-thirds of the Taft-Hartley Law, of which he was co-author.

Pepper quoted Taft as having said it was clear from the course of hearings on the measure that there would be no more than nominal repeal of the Taft-Hartley law. This interpretation of his statement Taft hotly denied.

Neely Joins Argument

He said it was his opinion that Congress in the end would amend the Taft-Hartley Act rather than repeal it and substitute an amended version of the Wagner Act, as the Administration has urged.

Senator Neely, then jumped into the argument, accusing Taft of "playing for the headlines." The Ohioan, Neely said, was "defending a dead horse."

Taft countered by charging Neely with trying to "blackguard" Teller, who was still on the stand and had volunteered some support for the Taft-Hartley law.

A sensative spot in the Administration's measure was touched by Senator Morse (R., Oreg.), who expressed concern that some President in the future might create "a dictatorship under democratic language" unless his powers in labor disputes were spelled out in the new bill. President Truman, backed by Attorney General Clark, has said he has ample powers implied in the Constitution to deal with strikes which threatened the national health or welfare.

The Taft-Hartley law contains a provision empowering the President to seek injunctions in such strikes. The Administration substitute provides for a 30-day "cooling-off" period instead.

During what testimony he was able to give between committee wrangling, Teller described the Taft-Hartley law as "a fair, forward step in the complicated evolution of labor." The Administration bill, he said, represented "a long step backward" and overlooked protection of management and the public.

He said the proposed substitute would not protect workers against unions and union leaders and did not assure fair collective bargaining. Under the closed-shop system, prohibited by the Taft-Hartley law but permitted under the substitute, Teller said some AFL unions had collected as much as $3000 in "initiation fees" from employes needing jobs.

He singled out the International Typographical Union for criticism, declaring it was "gradually strangling the printing and publishing industry" by enforcement of the closed shop and regulation of apprentices. It could have survived just as well, he said, with the union shop "but it chose to combat the law."

Under the union shop, which was permitted by the Taft-Hartley law, an employer may hire anyone regardless of union membership. The new employe, however, must join the union within a specified time.

Chairman Thomas placed in the record a satement by Gerhard P. Van Arkel, former general counsel for the National Labor Relations Board, indorsing the Administration bill. Van Arkel, who resigned from the NLRB in protest against the Taft-Hartley Act, denounced it in his statement as "unfair, disruptive of peaceful and productive collective bargaining, and a threat to the freedom of American workers."

Fulbright Asks U. S. Approval of European Union

By The Associated Press

Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) called on Congress yesterday to go on record for a political federation of western European states.

Fulbright wants approval of just nine words:

"That the Congress favors the political federation of Europe."

A resolution for this is before the Senate. It was presented last Monday by Fulbright and Senator Elbert Thomas (D., Utah). While it awaits a test, some Senators dealing with foreign affairs indicated a cautious approach to the subject.

Fulbright said Senate approval would give European nations a nudge toward political stability which he regards as even more important than the proposed North Atlantic defense alliance.

Economic recovery of western Europe, for which this country is spending billions, is closely tied in with his goal, the Senator observed.

Reuther to Seek Retirement Pay For Auto Workers

Detroit, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—Walter P. Reuther, president, of the CIO United Auto Workers, disclosed today that the UAW will seek retirement benefits for all members 60 years of age and over.

Reuther told a United Rubber Workers (CIO) district convention that the UAW will stand firm on its previously announced demand for $100 monthly pensions.

Union spokesmen estimated that about 80,000 of the union's 900,000 members would be eligible for immediate retirement if the demand is met.

AFL Calls for World Labor Federation

Miami, Fla., Feb. 5.—The American Federation of Labor today called the world to join with it in a world federation of labor "dedicated to the principles of freedom, social justice and lasting peace."

The call was issued by the 15-man AFL Executive Council, meeting here.

The council declared that the time was ripe for creating such a global labor organization, in the wake of withdrawal from the Communist-dominated World Federation of Trade Unions by the CIO, British Trade Union Congress and Netherlands Federation of Labor.

"We urgently apeal to the other free trade unions still formally affiliated with the WFTU to lose no time in withdrawing from this cominform auxiliary," the council declared.

The council observed it always had opposed the WFTU as a "Communist-dominated agency dedicated to the task of serving Soviet totalitarianism and its imperialistic aggression."

"Now that the strongest free trade unions have left it," the council said, "mobilization of world labor for effective united action in behalf of democracy, reconstruction, social justice and peace will be greatly facilitated.

"The struggle for these great goals can be triumphant only if the freedom-loving workers join hands on an international scale."

Bette Davis' $328,000 Pay Tops For Sex; Bogart's $467,361

By The Associated Press

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

IN THE CHIPS—Listed by the Treasury Department yesterday as among the Nation's highest money earners for 1947-48 are (from left) Actor Humphrey Bogart, Actress Bette Davis and Dorothy Shaver, New York department store executive

Big-eyed Bette Davis made $328,000 to edge out Film Songstress Deanna Durbin and gain top billing for their sex on a Treasury list of the Nation's leading money earners, issued yesterday.

But filmdom's scowling Humphrey Bogart finished in front of both. The list, second issued for calendar 1946 and business fiscal years ended in 1947, showed he pocketed $467,361.

Taxes on these earnings are not shown.

Miss Davis drew her pay from the same film concern as Bogart, Warner Brothers. Miss Durbin was paid $323,477 by Universal Pictures.

A woman business executive, Dorothy Shaver, 51, president of Lord and Taylor, New York department store, was paid $110,000.

Movie Actress Rita Hayworth, now the fiancee of Ali Kahn, wealthy Indian Prince, got $94,416.

Jacob W. Schwabb, New York textile magnate, pooled $340,542 from United Merchants and Manufacturers, Inc., and $100,000 from Cohn-Hall-Marx Co., for a $440,542 total.

Movie Actor Dennis Morgan, in real life Stanley Morner, drew $325,892 from Warner Brothers.

Joseph Pulitzer, of the publishing and prize-awarding family, $284,712 from the Pulitzer Publishing Co., St. Louis.

William Goetz, Universal Pictures producer, $284,000.

Ann Sheridan, the film star, $269,345 from Warner Brothers.

Robert Montgomery, the movie actor-producer-director, got $250,000 from Universal Pictures. George W. Mason, board chairman of the Nash-Kelvinator Corp., Detroit, also reported $250,000.

Commodity Prices Slip

month ago and 193.68 a year ago.

Heavy Losses in Cotton

Most of the excitement in commodities today came in cotton at New York and New Orleans. Futures at New York suffered their heaviest losses in many weeks on the largest Saturday trade since Saturday dealings were resumed last summer. Final prices were 95 cents to $1.30 a bale lower.

Losses in cotton came despite large supplies on this commodity being sealed under the Government price support program.

Fats and oils prices also weakened. All cottonseed oil futures at New York and lard futures at Chicago made new lows since trading in the various contracts started. Loose lard was offered at $12 a hundred pounds in Chicago, unchanged from the six-year low made yesterday.

A leading manufacturer of oleomargarine reduced prices two cents a pound at the wholesale level. It was the second such price cut this year.

Grain Futures Rally

Grain futures at Chicago staged a little rally, making a slight advance from the seasonal lows scored yesterday. But cash corn sold at $2.23½ cents a bushel, a new low since December 3, 1934. The price was about 35 cents under the Government support level.

Livestock markets were quiet with prices of steers and heifers at the lowest point since early 1947.

Hogs, closing at a top of $21.50 a hundred pounds, were 50 cents above the January 3 low. But with that exception they were at a bottom since the old OPA days in October, 1946.

Best grade eggs sold in Chicago at 42½ to 43 cents a dozen wholesale, a drop of more than 10 cents since the first of the year. Best grade butter sold at 62 cents a pound wholesale, which was up from the low of the year but compared with 89 cents at this time in 1948.

Falling Price Trend Held Coming to End

New York, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—The falling price trend is coming to an end and indications are that most consumer items will be maintained at their present price levels until the end of the year.

This was the view expressed by leaders of key industries throughout the country. Many said that lowered prices had stimulated demand, and that no further price cuts were envisaged at present.

In the high-priced luxury field including jewelry, custom-made clothing and entertainment, leaders indicated that prices might go down slightly to step up demand. On the other hand, industries with rising costs like the automobile industry and the railroads said their prices and rates would probably go up.

Action to Stop 'Panic Market' In Cattle Asked

By the United Press

Senator Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.) yesterday asked Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan to take immediate action to stop a "panic market" in livestock.

Butler telegraphed Brannan that the cattle market has been "demoralized" by Army purchase of meat from offshore sources, principally Argentina. The Army meanwhile had announced suspension of Argentine meat purchases.

Butler said cattle feeders are losing $50 to $125 a head and that the market is "demoralized to the point where it is most critical."

He told Brannan that Army purchases for domestic and foreign use should be made exclusively on the domestic market and suggested advisability of a Senate Agriculture Committee investigation.

The Army said it was stopping Argentine purchases because its meat "pipelines" are full.

Taft Planning Fight For Political Life

By Bert Andrews
NYHT News Service

Senator Robert A. Taft acknowledged recently that he will be fighting for his political life when he seeks reelection as Senator in 1950, and it has now become clear that if he takes that hurdle he'll also be in there fighting in 1952 for the Republican presidential nomination.

The intentions of the man from Ohio were made clear in an unusual address he read in Niles, Ohio, at the annual Ohio meeting in memory of another Republican, President William McKinley.

Senator Taft disclosed that his platform consists of six planks and he discussed them in detail after chiding the handlers of recent campaigns in these words:

"Some Republicans are discouraged today because for five elections now the Republican Party has met defeat. But its defeats have been due more to its failure in presenting its principles to the people than to those principles. . ."

Senator Taft offered six principles that should be followed if the Republican Party is to "continue to live and prevail." Summarized, they are:

HUMAN LIBERTY

"Because of my belief in the vital need of liberty, I am opposed to price control and wage control and allocation control in time of peace. I was opposed to the OPA and the WPB after the war ended because they attempted to substitute a detailed control of business for the freedom of competition and the freedom of enterprise. I am opposed to socialized medicine, because it takes from the people the right to buy the kind of medical service they wish to obtain . . . I am opposed to a tremendous burden of taxation, because it takes from the people the right to spend the money which they have earned and spends it for something which the Government thinks is good for them. I have been opposed to universal military training because it takes from a boy and his family the right to choose and pursue his own education and occupation and imposes a year of training and indoctrination determined by so-called experts in Washington."

EQUAL JUSTICE UNDER LAW

Senator Taft defended his objection to the Nuernberg trials because, "while clothed with the forms of justice, they were in fact an instrument of Government policy, determined months before at Tehran and Yalta." He criticized those who wrote the United Nations Charter at Dumbarton Oaks for forgetting "the ideal of justice." He hit at the New Deal for trying to "solve every problem by the creation of boards and commissions."

NO SPECIAL PRIVILEGE

He defended the Sherman Act, the Taft-Hartley law, the proposal to increase the minimum wage, the tax reduction bill, and the efforts to enact antipoll tax and antilynching laws.

PEACE

"Today we have quietly adopted a tendency to interfere in the affairs of other nations, to assume that we are a kind of demigod and Santa Claus to solve the problems of the world. We must assist many nations to restore their economies from the disruption arising from the war because the spread of communism will encourage Russia to end the peace and threaten the peace of America.

"We can well give economic assistance to underdeveloped areas of the world to relieve human misery which may lead to war. But let us do it in the spirit of humility. Let's not use our economic power to assume political power. . . .

HIGHER LIVING STANDARDS

"We are concerned that the Government keep the economic machine running at a high rate of speed with as little friction and intermission as possible. We believe this can be brought about by sound fiscal policies, by balancing the budget, by a sound currency and proper control of credit . . .

TO PREVENT HARDSHIP AND POVERTY

"Finally, we are interested in promoting better education, better health, better housing, better security for our people, and equality of opportunity, particularly for the children. These tasks are primarily the job of our State and local governments, and while Federal aid is often necessary in order that they may be properly done, particularly in the poorer States, there should be no Federal control or concentration of power in Washington."

3 Die, 74 Hurt In Accidents

A 14-year-old girl who swallowed a plastic hair curler while she was putting up her hair was one of the District's 74 home accident victims who required treatment at local hospitals last week.

Three other District residents died last week due to home accidents, two of them from fires caused by smoking in bed.

Of the injuries reported by the Red Cross Home Accident Survey last week, 30 were due to falls, 7 to burns, and 3 to accidental poisonings. Foreign bodies in eyes, nose, throat and stomach, and miscellaneous cuts and bruises caused the rest.

A young man who mistook acid for eyedrops and suffered chemical eye burns as a result was listed among last week's victims.

So were children who swallowed soap powder, bath powder, roach powder and strong disinfectants.

Two women, burned when their ovens exploded, and three babies who sustained first and second-degree burns when hot tea and coffee were spilled on them were also among the injured.

District Sales Tax Stress Hit on 'Hill'

The Senate District Committee will thoroughly investigate all sources of revenue open to the Commissioners — including a higher Federal payment to the city and increased real estate taxes —before settling on a local sales tax, a committee member disclosed last night.

The legislator further said that the District officials' presentation on the Hill thus far has not convinced him that the sales tax should be the "sole cure-all" for bringing the 1950 city budget into balance.

"The sales tax or nothing idea being sold to Congress is not good public relations," said the Senator, adding that current serious consideration of the sales levy "will not close the door to checking into just how heavy a burden real estate and other taxes are carrying."

Heavy Schedule Set

Meanwhile, Senate and District leaders have set a heavy schedule of committee meetings the coming week to tackle city budgetary problems, extension of rent control, pay raises and home rule legislation.

On the House side, Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), has called a meeting of his full District Committee Monday at 10:30. He said his group will primarily consider rules procedures, such as the still unsettled question of what shall constitute a working quorum. A regular full meeting will be held on one Monday each month, the chairman said.

The Bates Subcommittee on District Appropriations will meet at the same time to act on technical languages in the city money bill to clear the way for final study of the 103 million dollars in recommended expenditures in the 1950 fiscal year.

The House District Judiciary Subcommittee, headed by Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.) will meet at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday to map out a program on a long list of local legislation pending before the group.

High Priority for Bill

Harris has indicated that high priority will be given to his bill to extend District rent control through June 30, 1951. He has made clear that he is opposed to the idea, contained in some bills before Congress, that the District and national rent control setups should be merged into one. The rent bill is before Harris' subcommittee.

The Harris subcommittee also will have jurisdiction over home rule legislation.

Joint hearings on the proposed District sales tax, pushed by the Commissioners to help meet a prospective 16 to 18 million dollar deficiency staring them in the face in the coming fiscal year, will open at 2 p. m. Tuesday before the Senate and House District Fiscal subcommittees.

On the Senate side, Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) is expected back from a vacation in Florida to preside over a meeting of his full District committee at 11 a. m. Tuesday. Staff members said committee personnel, subcommittee programs and possibly the nomination of Judge Aubrey Fennel to succeed himself as a Municipal Court Judge will be taken up.

FILIBUSTER—Fr. Pg. 1

Democrats To Balk Rush

Senate's business," the Illinois Senator said.

Knowland contends that unless the rules are changed, a Southern Democrat filibuster will prevent any civil rights action.

He said that unless the rule change issue comes early in this session, a filibuster against it will prevent any action.

Conceding that the Democrats can slap down his motion, Knowland said he will be back with a smiliar proposal if the Rules Committee does not act Wednesday.

Charman Taft of Ohio said he will call the Senate Republican Policy Committee into session on the matter Monday.

Senator Byrd (D., Va.) said it was the general understanding that the Rules Committee will approve Wednesday a resolution under which two thirds of those voting could cut off debate at any time.

If such action were taken, the resolution would go to the Senate calendar. A motion to bring it before the Senate then would be subject to unlimited debate.

Besides anti-filibuster situation, the Senate program for Monday or Tuesday includes a bill to continue the Administration's export control authority.

Committees in both Senate and House will carry the ball during the week.

Driving for action on a Taft-Hartley law repeal bill, the Senate Labor Committee plans to hold day and night sessions until Thursday.

Its House counterpart is seeking a showdown on an Administration bill to make the minimum wage in interstate industry from 40 cents an hour to at least 75.

The House Banking Committee starts hearings Monday on a bill for a two-year extension of rent controls.

Foreign committees of the Senate and House will sit together Tuesday and Wednesday to hear Secretary of State Acheson and ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman discuss the foreign aid program which the President wants continued.

After their testimony before the joint committee the two officials will undergo questioning before each committee separately.

Another joint group, the Senate-House Economic Committee, starts hearings Tuesday on the President's overall anti-inflation program.

the Eightieth Congress carried a similar clause, but this was eliminated as too controversial when it was reintroduced in the House last month.

Spokesmen of both groups expressed confidence last night that satisfactory compromises on these areas of disagreement were in the works. They were certain of eventual agreement on all points.

Working on the home rule subcommittee are Gerhard Van Arkle, Harold J. Boisvert, J. C. Turner, Sigal and Tom Morgan, all of the Democratic Central Committee, and Sturgis Warner, Louis Oberdorfer, John Ferguson and Marshall Hornblower, members of the Washington Home Rule Committee.

Meanwhile, Senator Kefauver's three-member Home Rule Subcommittee will meet in executive session Wednesday morning to hear James R. Kirkland, counsel of the Senate District Committee, present a brief on past testimony of local suffrage proposals.

YOUR COMFORT AND YOUR SAFETY

...are first in the new cars created with common sense and imagination at Chrysler Corporation

Cars are like people in some respects. You trust a car that is safe and dependable. You like a friendly, comfortable car. You respect one that shows good taste, and has real character under the hood.

We've always tried at Chrysler Corporation to think first of your comfort and safety—and of the satisfaction you feel in owning a car of outstanding mechanical ability.

We've had the common sense to keep our cars practical—and the engineering imagination to make them exciting at the same time. This combination of common sense and imagination in engineering and research has brought you some of the greatest advances in history . . . for example, we pioneered the high compression engine 25 years ago. We were the first to bring you all-steel car bodies, four-wheel hydraulic brakes, and many other basic developments now adapted or adopted by other car manufacturers.

Now we are investing 90 million dollars in four wonderful new cars. And once again we're putting every penny in common sense and imagination in engineering . . . in functional design, in quality thru and thru, in cars engineered from the inside out.

We didn't go in for bulbous contour . . . or seats that are too low . . . or hidden wheels. But once again we designed functional hoods that you can see over . . . built seats at chair height . . . kept wheels in the clear so you could change tires or put on a set of chains.

Again we've built with plenty of room for your hat! Again we've given you wide doors so you won't have to wrestle your way in and out of your car! Fenders are fenders, not half the side of your car. And what a difference in repair cost if you dent one!

The no-distortion windshields and rear windows are wider and deeper. There's more shoulder room, seats are wider. Yet our cars are easier to garage and park. And we've given you more stopping power and better pick-up.

Again you'll trust our cars, for they're even safer and more dependable. And more comfortable and more convenient than ever before! And they'll earn your respect for their ability, their character, and their good looks. You'll like them on sight. They reflect all their good engineering qualities in their trim, clean lines and well-bred beauty.

They're being shipped to dealers. They're your kind of car . . . the best ever created by our great team of engineers, designers, and research men. With more than 50 new advances! With all the basic engineering features pioneered at Chrysler Corporation which have meant so much to owners of Plymouth, Dodge, DeSoto, and Chrysler cars! We cordially invite you to see these greater values as soon as your dealer announces their arrival.

Again you get the good things first from CHRYSLER CORPORATION

Beaten Cabbie Fails To Spot Attackers

was placed in charge of the police investigation a week ago Saturday by Assistant Superintendent Floyd A. Truscott, then acting police chief while Barrett was in Florida.

Bryant also refused to comment.

Thursday, Barrett told reporters he shifted Roche and Bonaccorsy from vice squad assignments because he believed them responsible for the beating. He said he returned Roche to his original robbery squad assignment and sent Bonaccorsy back to uniformed duty in the Sixth Precinct.

Meanwhile, investigation by a reporter for The Washington Post revealed that police records indicate Roche and Bonaccorsy were busy arresting a man at 10th and V sts. nw. at about the time of the Rowell attack, 5 a. m., January 14, at Thomas Circle.

The arrest book at the Thirteenth Precinct Station House indicates Bonaccorsy booked Gerald Richard Barnes, 33, 1244 Girard st. nw., at 5:15 a. m. on January 14 on charges of keeping and selling whisky without a license Roche's name is not listed on the arrest book as an arresting officer, but is so listed with Bonaccorsy on a book at headquarters.

The Thirteenth Police Precinct station house is at 912 U st. nw., only about a block away from the scene of the reported arrest.

According to papers filed against Barnes in Municipal Court, Bonaccorsy and Roche proceeded to the vicinity of 10th and V sts. nw. about 4:45 a. m. January 14, tracking down a complaint about curbstone bootlegging there.

Uses Marked Money

The papers state Roche gave three marked $1 bills to Bonaccorsy.

Bonaccorsy bought a pint of whisky from Barnes who ran off when the policeman apparently started to arrest him, the papers said. The defendant was arrested after he raced to 1003 V st. nw., the papers said.

Roche found it necessary to strike Barnes in the course of making the arrest and suffered an injured middle finger on the right hand, for which he received treatment at Emerency Hospital at an unstated time, the papers said.

Yesterday's lineup was not held in the lineup room but in the narcotics squad room, behind locked doors. Two detectives who usually work in the narcotics squad room were refused admittance.

Present during the lineup were Lieut. E. E. Scott, head of the robbery squad; Capt. Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of the Detective Bureau; Inspector Bryant, chief of the Detective Bureau; three robbery squad detectives, Bonaccorsy and Roche. All wore hats and coats, which the beaten cabbie had said were worn by his assailants.

Also present was Charles E. Ford, attorney for Bonaccorsy and Roche, and a police stenographer.

Rowell has steadily maintained he could not give detailed descriptions of the attackers. He said he thought they were out of town men and not policemen.

According to Rowell, he was set upon merely because he happened along when two men were slapping another unidentified citizen.

He said he paused to watch, then went into the drug store at Thomas Circle to get headache tablets. When he returned to the street, the two men who had been molesting the third man accused Rowell of having phoned Second Precinct police while in the drug store, Rowell said.

Then the two men pummeled, kicked and kneed Rowell, forced him into their car, drove around the block, and finally let him out, he reported.

Rowell was given emergency treatment at Garfield Hospital and then was admitted to Prince Georges General Hospital for a week.

New Storms Threaten in West

95,440 other farm animals had been stranded, he said.

But the new storm already had been felt further west. In Nevada, heavy snowfall and severe winds grounded the Air Force's feedlift planes. The huge cargo planes, loaded with hay and feed to be dropped to sheep and cattle in southwestern Nevada, were poised for the takeoff as soon as the storm abates.

Yesterday they made 14 flights before the weather closed in.

The new storm was a heartbreaking blow to Utah ranchers, most of whom had hoped to salvage "at least something." When the new blizzard struck, many said they would be ruined.

There are more than 1 million sheep on Utah grazing lands, and ranchers feared the airlift would be of little help.

Losses Are Huge

A Nation-wide survey by the United Press showed these losses for 35 days:

Persons killed: total of 579, including 235 by freezing and from exposure in blizzards and tornadoes; 191 in highway accidents attributed to the weather; 96 in fires and 57 in miscellaneous accidents blamed on the weather.

Total property loss, including livestock and crops, $236,036,000. That is 10 million dollars more than the assessed valuation of the State of Arizona. Crop loss alone totaled 116 million dollars.

Livestock killed: an estimated 174,200 cattle and 153,200 sheep, valued at $29,906,000, most of them in the disaster areas of Wyoming, Nebraska and South Dakota. In addition, 4,700,000 cattle and sheep, valued at nearly 500 million dollars, are imperiled by lack of feed, but Army and Air Force rescue forces are cutting the total daily.

State and Federal funds appropriated or allocated for relief in the West: $2,360,000.

Storm Disaster Under Control, Forrestal Says

By the United Press

Defense Secretary James Forrestal reported to President Truman last night that the Western storm disaster is being brought under control.

He said relief operations are "proceeding satisfactorily" and should straighten out the situation unless another big storm hits the stricken States.

The summary prepared by Acting Army Secretary William H. Draper, jr., on Army, Navy and Air Force activities in the storm belt during the past week said primary highways and railroads in all snowbound States are open. The big job ahead is to open secondary or county roads to relieve isolated communities and livestock herds.

The Army has more than 1000 major pieces of snow-removal equipment in the Nebraska-South Dakota-Wyoming area, and more are on the way. Draper said "comparable" equipment is being used in the Utah-Nevada-Arizona sector.

He said the Air Force has contributed 75 transport planes, eight helicopters and considerable ground equipment to the feedlift operation and that the Navy is helping out with aircraft and equipment in the distribution of feed to the snowbound herds.

Judge Scott Bans Client-Seeking in Court

into the rear of one driven by Police Lieut. David McCutcheon of the First Precinct. The accident occurred at 10th and Q sts. nw., according to Assistant Corporation Counsel Richard Barton.

Flanked by Attorneys Donald Weed and Thomas David, Alfriend pleaded guilty to the charge, and a recommendation was made that the probation officer investigate the case, court officials said.

But then Alfriend was returned to the stand and the lawyers summoned back into the courtroom.

Judge Scott declared later that the hearing was to determine whether lawyers were soliciting clients in the courtroom. This is court officials' version of the testimony:

Alfriend said that while sitting in the lockup dock that morning waiting for court to convene he asked "someone" if a lawyer was needed. He said he was informed that there were a couple present.

Alfriend said he wound up in the corridor talking to David and Weed about the case.

Two friends of Alfriend then testified David and Weed approached them appraising them that the maximum penalty was a $500 fine and six months. Weed received $100 in cash, it was said. Of this sum, $75 was for attorneys fee and $25 a bond premium to free Alfriend pending probation report, it was testified.

Judge Scott said he wouldn't have hesitated referring the case to probation with or without the exhortation of counsel.

David told the court that $50 of the original $100 paid already had been returned to Alfriend's associates.

Scott then told Weed to return the other $50 and added, "I'll take other action." The money was returned. Alfriend then paid a $100 fine and was freed.

The judge then referred to Supreme Court decisions holding that all defendants have a right to be represented by adequate counsel. But, said Judge Scott:

"From my experience, there are many cases where a defendant does not need a lawyer, such as this particular case where the man was going to plead guilty anyway."

Asked for comment later, both lawyers denied any breach of legal ethics or that they sought out Alfriend as a client. They declared their action was entirely proper.

'Nightmares' Please Trade Board Diners

All the "nightmarish" qualities that made the first half of the Washington Board of Trade's thirtieth annual midwinter dinner a huge success were brought out again in full force last night to wind up the gala affair.

What Board of Trade officials believe is the only public dinner in the United States that runs in two sections on successive nights may soon become a triple-headed affair as more than 950 guests jammed every nook of the Hotel Mayflower main ballroom last night.

"Nightmare" was the theme of the board's third annual "double-header" dinner. Diners entered a special section of the hotel decorated in weird designs and colors. Witches and monsters ran gibbering in and out of the area. Trick mirrors and billboards lined the walls.

Distinguished guests included the District Commissioners, members of the House of Representatives and the judiciary, as well as prominent businessmen and city officials.

Speeches and serious business were not permitted and after the evening's main attraction — a sumptuous dinner — was over, diners relaxed and sang before a six-act program of entertainment got under way.

Highlighting the professional show of dancers, acrobats and comedians, was Singer Margaret La Porter, who brought the huge crowd to its feet with her medley of old Irving Berlin tunes.

Chairmen for the dinner this year were, Edward T. Offutt jr., and Harrison Somerville.

Off-the-Record

Radio Men Hear Talk By Truman

President Truman delivered an off-the-record speech last night at the seventh annual dinner of the Radio Correspondents' Association, held at the Statler Hotel.

After the dinner, the President was presented with a replica of the table on which the two Bibles rested when he was sworn in as Chief Executive January 20. The original has been used by Presidents at inaugural ceremonies since the time of Abraham Lincoln.

The President also was given a film copy of the television coverage of the inauguration at the Capitol.

About 700 guests—including Supreme Court Justices, members of the House and Senate and Cabinet members—were invited to the banquet.

Court Custom Is Defended

Prince Georges County trial magistrates and State's attorneys announced their willingness to appear before the judiciary committee of the Maryland Senate to defend present practices in the magistrate's courts.

William H. McGrath, Prince Georges County member of the House of Delegates, has introduced a bill giving defense attorneys the right to cross-examine State's witness in preliminary hearings regardless of whether the defense places any witnesses on the stand.

State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie said yesterday the practice of not permitting cross-examination of State's witnesses at preliminary hearings unless the defense takes the stand is perfectly legal and a good practice."

Bowie said he will be glad to debate the legality of the custom with any member of the State Senate committee considering the matter.

Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie, who has been on the bench or serving as State's attorney for 20 years, said the custom was in effect when he entered practice.

He said he also would be willing to appear before the Senate committee.

McGrath said his bill has passed the House of Delegates and that Prince Georges County is the only county where the custom prevails.

Montgomery County lawyers said questioning of State witnesses is permitted in that county.

Score of Measures To Aid U. S. Workers Introduced In House

A score of bills to benefit Federal workers were introduced in the House during the past several days. Among them were the first major pay raise bills to be sponsored by members of the House Civil Service Committee. For example:

REPRESENTATIVE MORRISON (D., La.) put in a bill which he promises to push which would give flat pay raises of $800 each to the half million postal employes; $500 to each classified Federal worker, and $500 raises to legislative, judicial and District employes.

REPRESENTATIVE RHODES (D., Pa.) put in the AFL-sponsored bill to give $650 flat pay raises to all postal and classified employes. A new member of the Civil Service Committee, Rhodes also is sponsoring a bill which would give postal employes double time off for holiday work.

Another Rhodes bill would give severence pay to employes who have had at least five years of service and who are laid off in a reduction of force through no fault of their own. The severence pay would be half salary for six months. Morrison has in a similar bill.

REPRESENTATIVE BOGGS R., Del.) put in a bill which would exempt the first $1440 of Civil Service pensions from Federal income taxes.

REPRESENTATIVE DAVIS (D., Ga.), a Civil Service Committee member, introduced a bill which is sure to have support. It would allow any employe who has less than 20 years of service and who is laid off to forfeit his right to a Civil Service pension and to elect to receive the money he paid into the retirement fund, plus interest. Under the present law, no employe who has more than 10 years of service can withdraw his retirement money when he leaves Government.

LEAVE: A third Rhodes bill would permit employes to accumulate up to 120 days of annual leave. The maximum is now 90 days. In addition, his measure would compel the Government to pay Federal workers for all the leave they turn back, or they forfeited during the war years.

PROMOTION: A promotion bill also is being sponsored by Morrison, the ranking Democratic member of the House Civil Service Committee. When promotion exams are given, the bill would compel Federal agencies to give due consideration for promotions to length of service, experience, and general fitness.

RETIREMENT: Two liberal retirement bills also were dropped into the hopper by Morrison. They would: (1) provide optional retirement after 30 years of service regardless of age, and (2) to provide optional retirement for employes who are 60 and who have had 25 or more years of service. Another Morrison bill would provide for the creation of a three-man board of appeals in the Civil Service Commission to settle disputes of employes arising out of the administration of Civil Service laws and rules.

OVERTIME: Representative Dingell (D., Mich.) has a bill which would liberalize payments for holiday and overtime work by Federal employes. His bill would require Federal agencies to pay true double time to all of its employes for work on any and all holidays.

Also, true time and a half would have to be paid for all work beyond 8 hours in any one day or 40 hours in a basic 5-day work week. Most classified and postal employes aren's paid full time-and-a-half for overtime work.

NAFM: The National Association of Federal Mechanics has elected the following officers: A. H. McKay, president; A. P. Levister, vice president; A. N. Garner and E. W. Coon, secretaries; J. I. Weeks, treasurer, and Thomas Maddock and E. A. Eslin, legislative committee.

NOTES: AFL's American Federation of Government Employes will have a dinner Wednesday night at the Press Club for its three local vice presidents who are: Floyd Swiggett, Charles F. Sharkey and Trall Price. The trio has organized several new lodges in recent weeks . . . Bettie Renner has resigned from Justice's civil rights section to enter private law practice here . . . Louis Brownlow will tell about his 45 years with Government clerks at a dinner meeting tomorrow night of the Society for Personnel Administration at the Agriculture Department cafeteria.

CENSUS is looking ahead about 15 months when it will need from 3500 to 4000 card punch operators here to tabulate the 1950 general population census. It has arranged with the District Board of Education for the establishment of a program to train students to operate the machines.

Beginning soon, two experimental classes will be started soon at Cardozo and McKinley Tech high schools. About 50 pupils who complete the course will be offered jobs by Census in June.

To Present Ballet

"Rackety Rackety House," a ballet performed by students of the Washington School of Ballet will be the next presentation on the Children's Theater program of the District Recreation Department, Miss Sybil Baker announced yesterday. It will be showin February 18 and 25 at 8:30 p. m. and February 19 and 26 at 2:30 p. m.

Cancer Clinic At Gallinger May Have to Close Down

Lack of Personnel Said to Threaten Operation of Only Free District Unit

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Gallinger Hospital's cancer detection clinic, only such facility in Washington for those who are unable to pay, may be forced to close for lack of personnel, it was learned yesterday.

Present status of the clinic was described as "precarious" by Dr. Jay McLean, chief of the cancer division, District Health Department.

"In any event," he said, "the clinic faces closing on June 30 for lack of nurses whose positions were abolished from the 1949-50 budget."

Clinic Has One Nurse

At present, the cancer chief revealed, the Gallinger clinic is running with but one nurse, who, besides the required duty of being present when doctors examine women patients, must handle clinic details "beneath her professional status." These include washing instruments, answering the telephone, and other work generally handled by a clinic aide.

"That's not only unethical but probably illegal in that it violates civil service regulations," declared Dr. McLean.

Dr. McLean, a cancer surgeon, said he requested authority to hire an aide for the work but the District Commissioners not only turned him down, but abolished positions of the cancer division's five nurses in the official budget request now before Congress.

Four on Follow Up Work

Only one of the five nurses now attached to the cancer division is assigned to the Gallinger clinic. The other four do home "follow up" work for the division, checking cancer patients who have been under physicians' care but who fail to report for appointments.

Such home details are increasingly important now that the District Cancer Records Registry is in operation, said Dr. McLean.

Originally, the five nurses were assigned to the cancer division to work in the three cancer detection clinics planned at Gallinger and at two health centers. The health center clinics, however, were later stricken from the plans in favor of concentration of cancer division funds on the Cancer Records Registry project, it was explained.

When District Health Officer Dr. George C. Ruhland submitted his budget request to the District Commissioners the nurses' positions were continued with expectation that they could be used on their present duties. But, declared Dr. McLean, the District Commissioners struck the positions from the budget before submitting it to Congress.

1000 Persons Examined

The Gallinger cancer detection clinic, which opened last February 17, already has examined more than 1000 persons, the cancer division chief said.

"And if it is forced to close down for lack of personnel there will be no free clinic here for the poor," he said.

Other cancer detection clinics in Washington's private hospitals ask a contribution of $15 to cover costs of the examinations, Dr. McLean said.

"Those who can't afford to pay the $15 are not given an appointment, but are referred to the Gallinger clinic," he declared. "The centers have to do that, since their budgets depend on the fixed contributions."

Dedication Speaker

The Grand Exalted Ruler of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, George I. Hall of Lynnbrook, N. Y., is scheduled to speak at the dedication of a new $25,000 addition to the Silver Spring Elks Clubhouse at 8 p. m. Thursday. The clubhouse is located on Fidler lane.

Music by the Mile for Local Bus Riders . . .

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

RADIO INSTALLED—In preparation for "Operation Radio," which Capital Transit will launch this week, M. L. Mostyn (left), supervisor of transit radio operations for Station WWDC, installs a radio on the bus. Ross H. Beville, chief engineer of WWDC, has the more interesting task of pointing out the speaker to Miss Joyce Turner of McLean, Va.

WHAT'S THAT NOISE?—Passengers on W., & M. & A. Bus Line, which has had this radio-equipped bus in operation for two weeks, register little emotion to the mobile melody, although reports indicate that the bus radios are being met with favor

Yes, You Still Can Stop the Bus But You Can't Stop the Music

By Charles E. Davis, jr.
Post Reporter

Pull up a bus, friends, and listen to some music.

You'll have to listen to a few commercials, too, but it's promised they will be made as painless as possible. Someone has to pay the piper.

The piper in this case is WWDC-FM which will supply the music when Capital Transit launches its "Operation Radio" this week.

Capital Transit hopes to have 10 radio-equipped buses in operation by midweek. The mobile carriers of melody will be split evenly, at the beginning, between Northwest and northeast Washington. At some future date it is evisioned that all 1900 of the company's buses and streetcars in regular use will be radio-equipped.

Test Runs Prove Popularity

How will the public react? Capital Transit says test runs have shown the public favored transit radio by better than 9 to 1.

But to see for yourself, you have to turn to the W. M. & A. Bus Line which has had a radio-equipped bus in regular service for two weeks.

To observe, ride on the bus from the W. M. & A. terminal to Seat Pleasant and back, a ride of 90 minutes.

The passengers make no expressive show of emotion as they enter the bus and hear music for the first time on a public conveyance. They don't clap their hands in glee, nor do they show annoyance. They simply accept it.

"Someone must be carrying a portable radio," declares one gray-haired woman as she boards the bus with a companion.

Forget Your Troubles?

Perry F. Scott, 77, of Spaulding ave., Dupont Heights, Md., climbs aboard, spies an official of the bus company whom he knows and says: "This will make you forget your troubles."

"I listen to the radio quite a bit at home," says Scott, who is in the general merchandise business. "I like all the programs—even the commercials."

But Scott, who has been riding the bus line for more than 20 years, decides that music is best for the bus radio.

And Mrs. Dorothy Hall, a housewife, of 6414 B st. ne., likes the radio too.

"I like to listen to the music when I'm not talking," she says.

She likes the "soap operas" but doesn't think they would do for buses because "you might have to get off in the middle." She suggests "some hill-billy music twice a week."

Makes Ride Seem Shorter

"It's cheerful," says Mrs. Mary Rogers, a housewife, of 2125 32d pl. se., "and it makes the ride seem shorter."

But she hopes they never carry the "soap operas." She hates 'em.

It was the first ride on a radio bus for Mrs. James Hall, a housewife, of 233 Pennsylvania ave. se., and her initial reaction was that she was "a little bit surprised" but liked it.

The only critical note is sounded by Mrs. Charles Nelson, a housewife, of 6508 Central ave., Maryland Heights, Md.

"It sounds very natural," she says. "I always have the radio on at home. But I like to hear the news reports and they're not loud enough. Just loud enough to tempt you."

Roy A. Chew, traffic manager of W. M. & A., hastens to explain that this deficiency is being remedied, that the difficulty is an increase in volume as the bus nears the transmitter and a decrease as the bus gets farther away from it.

To Have 13-Tube FM Sets

Other buses of the line, Chew says, are to be equipped with 13-tube FM sets manufactured by Stromberg-Carlson and equipped with an automatic volume control that keeps the volume at a constant level.

W. M. & A. hopes to equip all of its 50 buses in regular service with radios during the next two months, Chew says. Coast of the receivers and their installation is born by WBUZ-FM, the station which supplies W. M. & A. with its programs.

Chew says the revenue which the radio commercials will produce for the bus line will be to the advantage of the riders, that it may forestall necessary fare increase, in fact, might some day bring about fare decreases.

Capital Transit says the same thing, that if the plan is successful the company "is in a position to derive some income."

The first W. M. & A. bus was equipped with a set that has eight speakers, four spaced at intervals on each side of the bus.

However, the sets to be installed in the other W. M. & A. buses as well as the Capital Transit vehicles have six speakers which are placed at staggered intervals the length of the bus.

For the present, Capital Transit's radio buses will provide music, news and 25-second commercials spaced from 5 to 10 minutes apart from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. Monday through Friday and from 7 a. m. to 3 p. m. on Saturday.

The receiving sets on the vehicles will be turned on at 7 a. m. by remote control from WWDC-FM. A high-pitched supersonic tone inaudible to the human ear will be caught by the receiving set when the station takes to the air.

This supersonic tone will sensitize the set and automatically place it in operation. The sets will be turned off at 7 p. m. by the same method of remote control.

For safety's sake, the speakers will be located in the bus so that the radio program will be almost inaudible to the driver.

But you, says Capital Transit, will hear it all. Step up, buy your weekly ticket and—don't try to stop the music. You can't.

Fast-Working Bandit Muffs One Holdup, Pulls Off Second

Police yesterday were seeking a young bandit believed responsible Friday night for an attempted holdup, and another that was successful, staged in quick succession.

In both instances, the gunman was described as about 25, wearing a bright red-checked mackinaw.

He first appeared in King's Pawnbroker's Exchange, 1620 14th st. nw, at about 6:15 p. m. and told Isaac Tepper, 35, an employe, he wanted to buy a suit he had picked out earlier.

While Tepper reached for the suit, the "customer" produced a revolver. Tepper was standing near the front door, he told police, so he stepped into the busy street. In a few seconds, the outwitted bandit dashed out and fled.

Less than two hours later and about seven blocks away, a man answering the same description held up the grocery store of Mrs. Toby Applebaum, at 1837 19th st. nw., and escaped with $150.

Another Friday night holdup victim was a woman cab driver, Miss Frances Price, 30, of 1647 Gales st. ne. She said a man robbed her of $5 after she had picked him up in the 3400 block of Benning rd. ne. He then ordered her to drive him to 1st and K sts. ne., where he disappeared into an alley.

Purse Snatcher's Victim Suffers Broken Ankle

Two purse-snatchings within 24 hours in the 1200 block of 31st st. nw., one of which resulted in a broken ankle for a 64-year-old woman, were reported to police last night.

Miss May Howard, 1311 30th st. nw., a secretary at Georgetown House, 3224 N st. nw., said a man knocked her down at about 8 p. m. in front of 1254 31st st. nw., took her purse containing $8 and fled. She was given first aid by William A. Brown, of that address, a Brookings Institution economist, who called police. She was admitted to Emergency Hospital where her fractured ankle was treated.

Mrs. Mabel Libbey of 3600 Ordway st. nw., told police she was in front of 1238 31st st. nw., at about 7:50 p. m., Friday, when a man appeared from an alley, snatched her purse containing $15 and ran.

Police received four other reports of purse snatching Friday and early yesterday.

7 Parts of Tax Report Backed By Federation

The Federation of Citizens Associations last night approved seven parts of a report of its fiscal relations and taxation committee dealing with the District's tax structure.

In separate resolutions, the group approved a 2 per cent sales tax, an income tax on incomes of more than $5000 net, increasing the contribution of the Federal Government toward District expenses, increasing the liquor tax and raising District employes' salaries by $330 effective retroactively to July 1, 1948; and opposed increases in real estate and personal property taxes.

An eighth section of the committee report which would have opposed any borrowing of money by the District was withdrawn by the committee's vice chairman, Clifford H. Newell, after discussion.

The federation, on motion of J. Millard Hall, chairman of the constitution and rules committee, approved a provision for alternate delegates to act in the absence of regularly constituted delegates and approved without a dissenting vote the negative report on a motion which would have granted non-voting privileges of the floor to all former federation presidents who are not now delegates from a member association.

Extension of rent control "for not more than one year from March 31, 1949," was approved.

On motion of Chester F. Bletch, chairman of the zoning committee, the group opposed rezoning of a seciton near Massachusetts ave. and Anacostia rd. se., to permit construction of duplex homes; indorsed the principles of a zoning law change to clarify restrictions of colleges, schools, universities and nonprofit educational institutions in residential C and D areas, and opposed relaxing of regulations pertaining to use of commercial property in residential areas.

Mrs. Carl Spaatz, of the National Symphony Association, urged popular support of the National Symphony Orchestra. Music lovers alone cannot provide the necessary financial support, she said, and asked "civic minded" persons to aid the musical group on a civic basis.

Declaring it would be "so tragic, so dreadful" if the orchestra should fail for lack of financial backing, she likened such an eventuality to the passing of the live theater from the District.

Complete Job On Capitol's Roof Is Urged

Simultaneous remodeling of the Senate and House roofs next summer was recommended yesterday by Representative Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

A remodeling of the Senate chamber and roof is now under contract and slated to begin this year. Cannon disclosed that the House deficiency appropriations subcommittee has already completed its hearing on a $2,274,500 item for remodeling the House chamber and roof. Funds for the long-sought House face-lifting were urged in a presidential message to Congress last week asking six million dollars to do a top-to-bottom rebuilding job to the Capitol.

"This summer will be the first time since long before the war," said Cannon, "when prospects look bright for a long enough adjournment period to do an extensive job on the Senate and House roofs. It would be far more economical to do them both at the same time," he said.

New Machine Photographs Blood in Brain

A new machine that will enable doctors for the first time to study blood flowing through the brain will be put into use Monday at the Naval Medical Center in Bethesda.

Dr. Perez

The machine, the Sanchez-Perez Multimatic Seriograph, arrived here yesterday by plane from Los Angeles. Accompanying it was its inventor, Dr. Sanchez Perez of the University of Southern California, who developed it over a period of 15 years.

According to James V. Wallace, H.M.C., supervisor of X-ray technicians at the hospital, the machine will "revolutionize X-ray because it can do so fast and complete a job." It is said to take six pictures in 4½ seconds—10½ seconds quicker than the previous record.

How Machine Works

Frank Field, Washington representative for the Yates Manufacturing Co., Glendale, Calif., which is starting to put the machine into commercial production, explains the way the machine works this way:

The patient is given a local anesthetic. The doctor then makes an incision in the side of the head to reach a certain vein into which he injects an opaque solution which immediately circulates through the brain. The solution takes 4½ seconds to pass through the brain, and during this time the machine photographs it." There has never been anything fast enough to do this before," Field explains.

The significance of being able to watch the blood circulation in this manner, according to Field, is that it will lead doctors to the discovery of a brain tumor or any nervous disorder emanating from the brain.

Easy to Operate

The machine operates at the push of a button, and a doctor can learn to use the machine in about 30 minutes, he said. The machine can also be used in cardiac work, field said, because it will take pictures of the heart with all the blood vessels plainly showing.

"The angigram of the heart gives a true picture of the interior of the heart and blood vessels," he said, "where heretofore only pictures of the outside of the heart could be obtained."

The machine, the first one completed after the experimental stage, is being presented to the Naval Hospital, Field said, "because a survey showed its staff unusually well qualified."

Dr. Perez, a brain specialist, will participate with staff doctors in a brain and cardiac operation today, following which dedication ceremonies will take place.

Fringe Auto Lot Program Here to End On March 20

Deficit of 1 Area Was $500 a Month; Merchants' Action Opposed by Howat

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The District's fringe parking program, first major attempt at providing space for downtown shoppers, will end March 20.

The decision to close the six-month-old scheme was made by the Merchants' Parking Corporation, a firm of 13 prominent businessmen formed to direct it, after one lot showed a continuing deficit of about $500 a month.

P. Y. K. Howat, head of the District Motor Vehicle Parking Agency, who fathered the scheme, vigorously opposed closing down the lots, declaring that they had attracted thousands of customers into the F st. nw., area and the deficit was relatively small.

450 Spaces on Lot

The corporation leased the Cass-Heurich lot at 25th and E sts. nw., to provide 450 car spaces. Present plans call for closing the spot on March 20, when the six-month experimental period ends.

In addition, the firm has an agreement with the Arrow Parking Corp., for use of part of the block-long lot at 4th st. and Constitution ave. nw. near the Municipal Center. Bernard Segal, president of the parking corporation, said last night that he was "very much disappointed" over the decision to end the program.

Capital Transit Co., which operates shuttle buses between the two lots along the F st. artery, has permission from the District Public Utilities Commission to continue the bus runs to March 20.

The decision to end the fringe program and to make plans for dissolving the Merchants' Parking Corporation was made at a meeting Thursday on a unanimous vote.

Andrew Parker, president of Woodward and Lothrop Department Store, who is a member of the board of directors, said the corporation officers felt the "program hasn't been successful" and "wasn't bringing people downtown."

Half of $30,000 Spent

Parker said about half of the $30,000 subscribed by merchants, banks, utility and construction firms has been spent on the program and the remaining $15,000 will be distributed to contributors on a pro rata basis, depending on the size of their contributions.

Obviously disappointed by the action of the corporation, Howat noted, "I set up the corporation and picked a 10-million-dollar-a-year board of directors to run this $500-a-month business. I guess they didn't have the time to give it the attention it needed."

He said their decision would set back the principle of fringe lots here for several years.

His studies indicated the Municipal Center lot has handled nearly 33,000 cars in the period from the opening day on September 20, 1948, to January 29, 1949, with an average of 1.7 persons in each car. The Cass-Heurich lot has had an average of about 45 cars a day during the same period with the same average passenger load.

President of the corporation is Maj. Gen. David McCoach. Other officers are John A. Reilly, treasurer; Arthur J. Sundlun, secretary, and Joseph C. McGarraghy, counsel.

Analyzing why the program lagged, Howat said the downtown merchants after starting it in a blaze of advertising, failed to continue the educational program and proved unwilling to subsidize Cass-Heurich lots until it "caught on."

He said the Motor Vehicle Parking Agency experts will study the program thoroughly and prepare a report on why it failed to attract sufficient numbers of motorists to become self-supporting.

In the meantime, the agency will concentrate on encouraging private capital to establish parking facilities and on tying this in with street parking prohibitions to assure sufficient business for the facilities.

Third Degree Used on Boys, Mothers Claim

Police officials are investigating a complaint that two Thirteenth Precinct officers used third-degree tactics in questioning juveniles concerning a larceny.

The alleged third degree is said to have occurred January 19, while the two officers were questioning four boys in connection with a housebreaking at 255 V st. nw.

A formal complaint against the officers has been filed with Maj. Robert J. Barrett, police superintendent, by Delong Harris, an attorney who represent the mothers of two of the youths. One of the youths allegedly struck by the officers is 12, the other 14.

Both police officers yesterday referred questions on their status to Inspector Clarence H. Lutz, who is conducting an investigation.

One of the accused men said that while he could not comment on the charges against him, "I have never mishandled any juveniles."

Inspector Lutz said yesterday that he expected to complete his investigation early this week, and would make his report and recommendation to Major Barrett. It will be up to Major Barrett, he said, to decide whether to make the results of the investigation public.

In his letter to Major Barrett, Harris wrote, in part, ". . . In view of your very obvious duty in such matters, both to your department and to the citizens of the District of Columbia, it would seem that you would be quite interested in investigating the above related incidents of illegalities, brutality and violence against mere children by your officers."

Famed New York Hall Wrecked by Fire

New York, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—A five-alarm fire raged through Webster Hall today and left only the walls of the most famed meeting place in the city's history.

Webster Hall was a famous New York landmark dating back to before the nineteenth century. In past eras it was considered an elegant entertainment hall and was used for "uptown" balls and weddings, but toward the end of its life had been used mainly as a meeting hall for labor unions.

Merger Starts New Church of Christ

Cleveland, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—The United Church of Christ was formed today with the merger of the Congregational Christian Churches of American and the Evangelical and Reformed Church, but a small minority group of Congregationalists threatened court action to dissolve the new denomination.

By a vote of 757 to 172, the general council of the Congregational Church approved the union of the two Protestant churches which Dr. Louis W. Goebel, president of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, called "the greatest event since the Reformation."

The new church will have a membership of two million in the United States.

Anti-merger forces held a rump meeting and formed the "Committee for the Continuation of the Congregational Christiaan Churches of the United States."

Some 100 delegates issued a statement saying their attorneys in Chicago would be "instructed to proceed with appropriate actions."

This group had said earlier that "500 to 1000" individual churches opposed the union.

Georgetown Fund Drive Is Extended

National alumni of Georgetown University voted yesterday to extend the campaign seeking $600,000 for a new campus gymnasium honoring the late Rev. Vincent McDonough, S. J., former faculty director of athletics.

At a meeting of the alumni it was decided to extend the year-old campaign to June 30.

Austin F. Canfield, local attorney and acting chairman, said $501,304 has already been raised in cash and pledges and told President Lawrence C. Gorman, S. J., that the alumni are confident the goal will be exceeded. He said $21,304 was collected since the last meeting December 11.

Canfield, a national vice president, presided over the national officers and board of governors in the absence of Thomas C. Mee of Providence, R. I., the national president, who will arrive here today.

The alumni were dinner guests at the Shoreham Hotel last night and then attended the Georgetown-St. John's College basketball game.

A special mass will be celebrated at 10:30 a. m. today in St. William's Chapel on the campus for the alumni. The Rev. Richard C. Law, S. J., will be the celebrant.

Georgetown will honor 16 of its alumni in the Eightieth Congress at a reception from 5 to 7 p. m. today in Copley Lounge on the campus. Father Gorman and the national officers will welcome the five Senators and 11 House members invited and will be assisted in receiving by Mrs. James E. Colliflower and a committee of women.

The Senators are Dennis Chavez of New Mexico; Pat McCarran of Nevada; Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland; Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming and Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, all Democrats.

The House members are Representatives Boggs (R., Del.); Clements (D., N. Y.); Hall (R., N. Y.); Harrison (D., Va.); Hart (D., N. J.); Kilday (D., Tex.); Lemke (Ind, N. Dak.); Patterson (R., Conn.); Sadlak (R., Conn.); Simpson (R., Pa.), and Walter (D., Pa.).

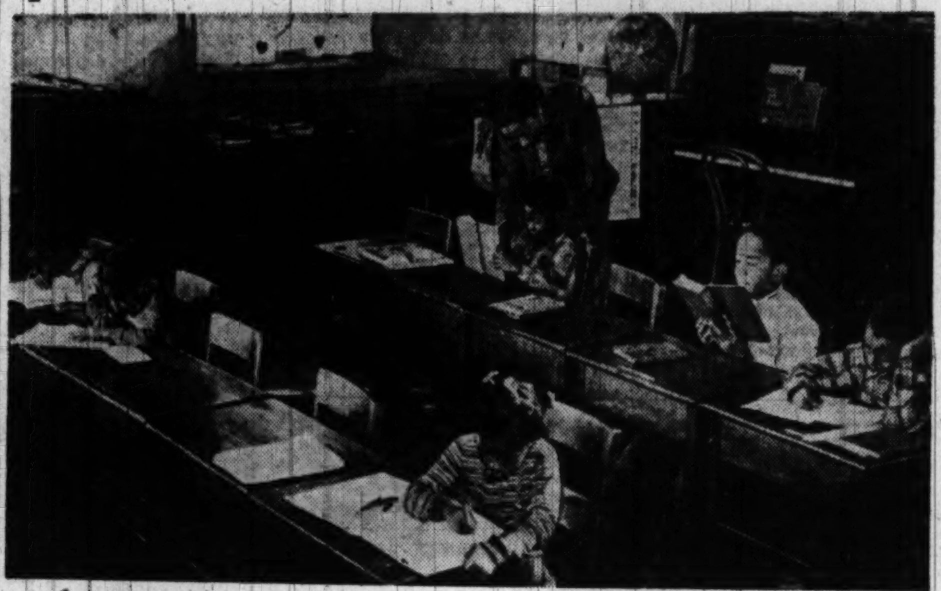
Space No Problem at Reno School . . .



By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

CITY'S SMALLEST—Some of the nine students who attend little Reno Elementary School at Howard and Fessenden sts. nw., work at their lessons under supervision of the teacher, Mrs. Flora L. Hill. Enrollment has dropped off gradually year by year, but the unusual school will continue in operation despite a recommendation that it be closed

Stanton School Plans Okayed

Plans to build the long-awaited 24-classroom building replacing the Stanton Elementary School have been approved by the District Commissioners and bids for construction will be opened March 1.

The structure, to be located at Alabama ave. and Naylor rd. se., was recommended by the Board of Education as a replacement for Stanton's two present buildings—a 4-room structure built in 1903 and a 10-room wartime temporary.

The present buildings are attended by nearly 600 children, although school officials feel they can comfortably accommodate 450. Parents of the Anacostia area organized a committee last spring to petition Congress and the Commissioners for a new building.

The section has changed in character in the past decade from a semirural to urban area as large apartment developments such as Naylor Gardens were erected. The parents' committee made a house to house survey which indicated the present school buildings will, in two years, have three times as many children as it has space.

The Strayer report on the District's school needs recommended a 16-classroom structure on the basis that the temporary building would continue to be used. Statistics of anticipated attendance in the next few years were shown to Dr. George D. Strayer and led him to favor the 24-classroom building recommended by a Board of Education committee.

The school is expected to cost about $631,000. Sealed bids will be received in Room 509 of the District Building and will be opened at 2 p. m. March 1.

Dr. Rush Forum Speaker

"The Bishops in Conflict with the Civil Powers" will be discussed by the Rev. Dr. Alfred Rush, history professor at Catholic University, at the weekly forum of the Study Guild Catholic Library, 1725 Rhode Island ave. nw., at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday.

Corning Urges Continued Use Of Reno Elementary School

The little Reno Elementary School that the special school survey recommended for closing received a new lease last week.

School Superintendent Robert M. Corning reported to the Board of Education that the school which now has an enrollment of nine students should be continued in operation.

Closing of the school at Howard and Fessenden sts. nw. would place a hardship on the Negro children who would have to use public transportation to reach another Negro elementary school, Corning said.

The Reno School is housed in a four-room stucco building a few yards from the large Alice Deal Junior High for white children and two blocks from the white Ben Murch Elementary School.

The Reno children now go over to the Alice Deal cafeteria where they purchase hot lunches to eat in their own classroom. In December they attended the Alice Deal Christmas play. Members of the Alice Deal Junior Red Cross returned the visit of the children bringing each a present.

The Reno School serves a dwindling number of Negro families living on Fort dr. and in the 4800 block of 41st st. nw.

The school was filled to capacity 20 years ago. Enrollment has dropped off gradually as Negro families moved out of the neighborhood. In 1947 there were 20 students and a year ago there were 12.

First, second, fourth and fifth grades are represented in present enrollment. Mrs. Flora L. Hill teaches all grades in one of the four rooms.

Dr. George D. Strayer, who has described the school as "the strangest I have ever seen," recommended in his survey that it be closed and the children transported to a larger school.

Dr. Corning said that he is reluctant to begin the transportation of able-bodied children. At present only students enrolled in sight-saving, hard-of-hearing and crippled children's classes are transported at public expense.

The closest Negro school for the Reno children, according to Associate Superintendent A. K. Savoy, is the Morgan, which, at 18th and California sts. nw., is across Rock Creek Park and 2 miles away.

FRESH BLOOD A MUST FOR FREE ENERGY

Do you feel like you are tied to a drag everytime you try to do something? If so, don't let a low blood count hold you down when you may release vibrant energy to every muscle, fibre, cell.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Cook Resigns As Garfield Administrator

Arkell B. Cook has resigned as administrator of Garfield Memorial Hospital, effective March 1, it was announced yesterday by William B. Castle, president of the board of trustees.

Cook

Crediting Cook with "pulling the day-by-day operation of the hospital out of the red," Castle said the administrator is leaving to accept a similar post, at a higher salary, with the Evanston Hospital, Evanston, Ill., a Chicago suburb.

Cook will be returning to a region where for 15 years he was with the University of Michigan Hospital at Ann Arbor, leaving when assistant director in 1945.

Cook, who is 43 and lives with his wife and four children at 4623 Butterworth pl. nw., came here July 1, 1947, after nearly 19 years in the business end of hospital work. For two years he was superintendent of Monmouth Memorial Hospital, Long Branch, N. J.

Castle, president of the District's Hospital Council and a former Undersecretary of State, said recently in his annual report as president of the 68-year-old hospital at 11th and Florida ave. nw., praised Cook's "almost miraculous" administration.

He said it had so improved the 364-bed hospital's financial operation that "we can now actually show month by month, a slight balance in our favor," although the books showed a deficit of $116,001 at the end of 1948, blamed principally on "inadequate payment for Community Chest and total indigent patients."

"Mr. Cook has done a superb job here, and we shall miss him greatly," Castle said yesterday.

Early Dental Check Urged For Children

That all children should receive early and frequent dental examinations is the gist of a message released yesterday by the District Dental Society in announcing the first Nation-wide observance Monday of National Children's Dental Health Day.

The District Commissioners in a proclamation urge "all groups interested in child health and welfare to lend their active support to a program that can provide better dental health for all children," in the belief that "the physical, mental and emotional health of our children today reflects the stability of our Nation's strength, leadership and economy in the world of tomorrow."

A step in the improvement of child dental health here is the sodium fluoride treatment now under way in the public schools, it was pointed out by Dr. A. Harry Ostrow, director of the Health Department's bureau of dental services. A United States Public Health Service dental team has completed the treatments at Bancroft and Kingsman elementary schools and is now at Bunker Hill School.

Parents are urged to take their children to the family dentist at the ages of 3, 7, 10 and 13.

Dingell Sees Bootleg Threat in High Taxes

By the United Press

Representative John D. Dingell (D., Mich.) warned States yesterday not to boost liquor taxes lest they give the bootleg business a chance to revive.

He said Federal liquor taxes are at an all-time peak of $9 a gallon, and State taxes range from 50 cents to $4 per gallon. He has introduced a bill to cut the Federal tax to $6. Dingell said bootleggers can make alcoholic liquor for about 50 cents a gallon.

Kemper Quiz Six Gets Perfect Score

A six-"man" quiz team from the Kemper School in Arlington, Va., made perfect scores on "Quizdown" yesterday to edge on their rivals from the Hoffman Boston School by 1200 to 1025 points.

It was only the second time this school year that a team has come through with all answers perfect on the half-hour weekly contest, sponsored by The Washington Post. Three members of the Hoffman Boston sextet chalked up perfect scores.

Despite the Kemper team's perfection, the friendly quiz bout, broadcast over WTOP from the Hoffman Boston auditorium, 1415 S. Queen st., Arlington, was close all the way and brought forth lusty cheers from the loyal suporters of both sides.

Eleven of the 12 first-round questions asked by Quizmaster Vern Hansen brought machinegun-like correct answers, the twelfth one drawing a 50 per cent tally from the judges. The halftime score stood at 600 to 550 for Kemper.

Delores (Little Thing) Marshall, 10, of grade 4A, Hoffman Boston School, started off the parade of nine perfect scores completed in the final round as she named the Empire State Building in New York as the tallest building in the world. "Little Thing" lives at 1705 S. 14th rd., Arlington.

Stephen Lowe, a 9-year-old Kemper upholder in the fourth grade, knew right away that the largest office building in the world is the Pentagon, which is situated, not far from where he lives at 2116 S. Lincoln st., Arlington.

Roosevelt Russell—who was not named for the late President, but for a member of his family—admitted he had just turned 11, and received a "Happy Birthday" song tribute from the audience before correctly answering his first-round question. "Tootsie," as he is sometimes called, lives at 1720 S. 14th st., Arlington, and is in Grade 5B at Hoffman Boston.

One Kemper contestant who didn't let a broken arm stop her from showing up was 11-year-old Ivary Langley of Grade 6, who lives at 2417 S. Lowell st., Arlington. Dressed in her Girl Scout uniform, Ivary breezed through her questions knowing that the Declaration of Independence was signed July 4, 1776, and that the sewing machine was what Elias Howe invented.

Other members of the perfect scoring team from Kemper School, which is at 25th and S. Lincoln sts., Arlington, were: Elwood Chinn, 10, grade 5-A, of 2605 S. Seminary rd.; George (Piggy) Johnson, 12, 6-A, 1919 S. Monroe st.; Barbara (Bobbie Sox) Vollin, 9, grade 4, 3104 19th st., and Yvonne Boswell, 10, 5-B, 1911 S. Lorton st., all in Arlington.

Other members of the Hoffman Boston six were: Ernestine King, 11, 6-B, 1203 S. Rolfe st., Barbara Lee (Pig) Frye, 10, 4-A, 1702 S. 14th rd.; Mildred Puryear, 10, 5-B, 1906 Fort Myer dr., and Albert Elworth Ross, 12, 6-B, 1318 S. Queen st., all in Arlington.

The benefit party will be sponsored by the Hyattsville Volunteer Fire Department and Ladies Auxiliary. About 500 persons are expected.

VISIT WITH TRUMAN—Surrounded by students from the Marshall Plan nations, President Truman plays host during the White House visit that highlighted their two-day stay in Washington. The 34 students from 17 countries left the Capital by bus yesterday for New York City on the final leg of their United States tour. They will return to their homes in March

New York Exhibit

News Photos Show History Of 100 Years

An exhibit of American news and documentary photographs from the past 100 years, selected by Edward Steichen from 10,000 prints, will open Wednesday at the Museum of Modern Art, 11 W. 53rd st., New York City.

Captain Steichen, dean of American photographers and wartime chief of Navy photography, is now director of the museum's department of photography. He assembled the material from the files of the National Archives, Library of Congress, Smithsonian Institution, press associations, newspapers and magazines, aided by the National Press Photographers Association.

The exhibition, occupying the museum's entire first floor, features a mural of an atom bomb explosion covering a wall 14 feet high and 30 feet long. From this the pictures range both in size and time to original daguerreotypes showing vessels abandoned in San Francisco harbor in 1849.

"In addition to spot news pictures, the exhibition includes feature pictures of the kind that document daily living," said Steichen. "The emphasis has been more on the penetrating quality of the reporting rather than on the importance of the news events . . . Today, the news picture generally appears as a supplement to the written word. As the quality of reportorial photography develops, and its use continues to accelerate, the written word may well become the supplement to the visual image."

Law to End Curb on News Asked by Press

Baltimore, Feb. 5 (AP).—The Maryland Press Association asked the Legislature today to adopt legislation barring restrictive court rules on crime news publication and named acommittee to push the program.

Closing the annual convention, the association again debated "Rule 904" of the Baltimore Supreme Bench, which prohibits publication of statements or actions by accused persons after their arrest.

The action taken was in opposition to any extension of the Baltimore rule to the State as a whole. A committee of the Maryland Court of Appeals has studied extension of the rule, but has made no decision.

Three radio stations and a news editor have appealed convictions for contempt in violation of the Baltimore rule.

Whether legislation will be asked at the current session in Annapolis will be up to the three-man committee.

The association elevated Blair Lee 3d, of the Maryland News, Silver Spring, to president, succeeding Glenn T. James of the Record-Observer, Centreville.

Mrs. J. Reed Bradley of the Record of Montgomery County, was named vice president for weeklies, and E. M. Jackson, jr., of the Annapolis Evening Capital, for dailies. Reelected were S. Ralph Hostetter of Elkton, secretary, and G. Bowie McCeney of Laurel, treasurer.

The Maryland News was adjudged best weekly of the year, with the Record-Observer as second. Other awards were:

Best editorial, Maryland News; editorial page, Maryland News; meritorious editorial promotion, Takoma Journal; original column, Havre de Grace Record; photographs, Maryland News; news story, Bethesda Record; front page, Record-Observer; feature story, Ellicott City Times; editorial promotion, Record-Observer; promotion of local industry, Maryland News; industrial advertising, Record-Observer and Maryland News; classified section, Ellicott City Times.

34 Students of ERP Nations Bring Stay in Capital to End

Thirty-four students of high school age from 17 European Marshall Plan countries concluded their stay in Washington yesterday.

Laughing and chattering, the group boarded a Greyhound bus about 9:30 a. m. at The Washington Post, co-sponsor with the Civic Education Service of their visit to the city, to return to New York. The New York Herald Tribune is sponsoring their visit to the United States.

High points of the visit to Washington for the group, which arrived here Tuesday from Detroit on a trip that had taken them into the South and West, was their meeting with President Truman and the organization of an international good-will association among themselves.

The President, smiling broadly, told the students that the proof of the people's running the country was his presence in the White House.

'Most Just' Government

"America is not known as the most efficient Government in the world," he told them, "but it is the most just. No one has too much power. The power is with the people, as they demonstrated in November."

In welcoming the students to the United States, he expressed the hope that every country would have a government of the people soon. "When you get as old as I am," he said, "I hope the United Nations will be functioning successfully and completely for a lasting peace."

The preceding day, the students amazed and pleased at their ability to get along together, had formed an international good-will organization of their own.

The group announced formation of the organization after Representative Sol Bloom (D., N. Y.), chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, had urged them to band together to tell what they had learned in the United States.

When Bloom learned that an organization had already been formed, he suggested that each of them write his impressions of the country upon their return to Europe and try to have it published. Bloom made his suggestion at a luncheon in the Family Dining Room of the Captol at which Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was also present.

Plan Round Robin Letter

The students plan a monthly round-robin letter orginating with the two American delegates. They are also exchanging names and addresses of friends in their respective countries, an exchange that they hope will form the basis of an international correspondence club.

During their stay here the students also saw the House in session, visited the Library of Congress and Mount Vernon, spent some time in local high schools and stayed overnight in the homes of high school student hosts.

Summing up the group's impressions, Rosemary Nugent, 17, of Dublin, Ireland, said "we've been deeply impressed by the great kindliness and warmth of the people of America, and the amount of opportunity there is for youth."

The group, which arrived in New York from overseas the latter part of December, will return to their homes in March after participating in the New York Herald Tribune Forum.

They were selected to visit the United States on the basis of an English language essay contest, held in each country, on the subject, "The World I Want."

Election Gains Give Jap Reds a Monkey Wrench

By Hessell Tiltman

Chief Far Eastern Correspondent for the London Daily Herald

TOKYO, Feb. 5.—With the convening of the newly elected Japanese Diet next Thursday, the developing pattern of Japan's postwar politics enters a decisive phase.

General MacArthur knows this, hence his recent statement lashing at "incessant and relentless" Soviet propaganda aimed at Japan. Hence also the warning of Maj. Gen. William F. Marquat, SCAP's economic chief, that if Japanese employers and workers do not support the measures necessary for economic recovery, "then the adoption of inflexible and positive measures of achieving the directed result is clearly indicated."

Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida, president of the victorious and misnamed ultra-conservative "Democratic Liberals," knows this, and immediately following his party's landslide success at the polls he appealed to the Japanese people to accept austerity measures in the staunch spirit displayed by the British.

Japan's Socialists, who lost nearly 100 seats in Japan's lower house in last month's election, know it, and their leaders have issued a statement blasting alike the Japanese reactionaries and the Japanese Communists, whose growing strength portends a "crisis in Japan's democratic revolution."

Japanese Communists know it, hence their elated cries that the Red dawn is at hand and the defiant declaration of Communist Secretary General Kyuichi Tokuda, Japan's No. 1 rabble-rouser, that the Japanese Communists will "vigorously fight" realization of Washington's nine-point economic stabilization program.

The jittery Japanese, who want a little peace and quiet, know it, and are apprehensive over the weakening of the moderate opposition forces, the nine-fold increase in the number of Communists in the Diet and the 250 per cent increase in the Communist popular vote in less than 18 months.

Hint 'Colony' Status

JAPAN'S COMMUNISTS are plainly out to sabotage the industrial rehabilitation of a Japan within the American orbit. To this end they are sponsoring a whispering campaign that the United States intends to transform Japan into an American colony (a charge sufficiently damaging to have caused military government officials to denounce the "lie"), and are plugging the Moscow propaganda line that Communist China will not do business with an "unfriendly" Japan which figures on the American side of the international strategic picture.

This last is a telling argument, for it is doubtful whether Japanese industry could keep the country's 80 millions employed and fed without access to the raw materials of Manchuria and North China now under Communist control.

In this situation many foreign observers and Japanese alike fear that the Communists may become the beneficiaries of the discontent that will arise when the austerity measures are enacted by the Yoshida cabinet. They fear a further drift of Japanese trades unionists into the Communist camp, and in turn a tendency among rightists to reply to left extremism by swinging closer to the prewar brand of reaction.

Hence the deep dejection of Japan's "middle of the roaders"—the moderate Socialists and People's Cooperative Party and the rest—at the prospect that the Communists might succeed in their initial aim, which is to establish themselves as the obvious alternative to the Democratic Liberals and the Democrats.

The Communists came uncomfortably close in the election, aided by three factors: the involvement of some top Socialists in recent corruption scandals; the improved rice collection initiated by the predominantly Socialist Katayama cabinet in 1947, which leaves the farmers less rice to peddle at high prices in the black market, and the courage of Socialist leaders in campaigning on a "sweat and tears" program of austerity for all. The Communists, meanwhile, promised pie in the sky, including the abolition of all taxes on workers, and even while the votes were being counted they were out on the streets urging workers to rally to the Communist banner for the coming fight to smash the "reactionaries."

Labor Leaders Enlisted

THE COMMUNISTS had every right to feel elated. Their total vote was higher than even their central executive committee expected. Their candidates were elected in all seven polling districts in Tokyo, and in four out of five in Osaka, Japan's second city. They polled heavily in some rural areas.

More importantly, several of Japan's best-known trades union leaders (including Katsumi Kikunami and Kazuyoshi Dobashi, two of the most prominent, who electioneered as Communists and won seats) have moved over into the Communist camp, a fact that bodes ill for future labor peace in Japan.

By no means all who voted the Communist ticket January 23 were Reds—or even pinks. A good many voters shifted to the extreme left in protest against the ineffectual showing made by the disunited Socialists. As the English-language Tokyo daily, Nippon Times, stated: "Most of those who voted for Communist candidates probably have no interest or understanding of communism, but they voted for the Communists in order to give vent to their dissatisfaction with the powers that be."

After making all allowances for the factors which favored the Communists, most impartial observers fear that the aftermath of the election may be a period of industrial strife sufficiently damaging to force the occupation authorities to invoke the "inflexible and positive measures" which General Marquat threatened.

A vast throng gathered outside the office of the Tokyo newspaper Asahi January 24 to hear the election returns. Communist Secretary General Kyuichi Tokuda, gesturing, took advantage of the occasion to thank the people for their support the previous day, when the Communist strength in the Diet was boosted from 4 to 35

GOP Factions Find Working Formula

By Robert C. Albright

Post Reporter

REPUBLICANS are cooking up a "deal" of their own. What it boils down to is a grand strategy for the session.

If it works it will knock the "Fair Deal" for a loop or make it look like GOP property.

The plan of action, so tenuous that the pattern is just beginning to emerge, is as simple as this:

Senate Republicans, Old Guardsmen and Young Turks alike, can practically write their own ticket if they stick together on basic issues.

It took an accidental vote in the Senate, on January 18, to convince them of that plain fact.

On that day, 41 Republicans, casually voting with 6 Democrats, turned up a 47 to 45 majority of the Senate.

None of them had particularly strong feelings about the ill-fated little measure defeated that day—tax exemption for inaugural tickets! But it convinced leaders on both sides of the familiar Republican Party division that if they can agree to agree on any least common denominator, they can turn the trick again and again.

Experience showed that on any even moderately controversial Administration measure they can count on at least half a dozen Southern Democratic desertions. But the neatest trick of all would be to keep those 13 Senate Republican Young Turks on the same side of the ballot with the so-called Old Guard. It seemed so patently impossible that few dared put it into words.

Then, a fortnight ago, an experiment was made. Who thought of it first isn't established or important.

But the fact is that the "Turks" sat down with Senator Robert A. Taft, against whose leadership they had rebelled, and together they agreed on a housing bill.

The real test is coming up now, on the Administration's labor bill. If it succeeds anything like the smooth housing trial run, most of the really controversial bills passed this session will bear the GOP's trademark.

For a labor bill "working base," Senate Republicans may go back two years to another weather vane vote, not so regarded at the time.

On April 17, 1947, the comparatively mild forerunner of the Taft-Hartley Act was reported out of the Senate Labor Committee by a vote of 11 to 2.

More stringent provisions were adopted on the Senate floor, but in the committee bill, at least, Young Turks and Old Guardsmen alike found that least common denominator.

Republicans voting for it besides Taft were Vermont's George Aiken, New Jersey's Alexander Smith, Oregon's Wayne Morse, Missouri's Forrest Donnell, Indiana's William Jenner, New York's Irving Ives and Minnesota's since defeated Joe Ball.

Taft, Aiken, Smith, Morse and Donnell now are minority members of the Democratic-controlled Labor Committee handling the Administration's new bill.

Ives was squeezed off the committee by the Democratic cutback, along with Jenner, but the New York leader of the Young Turks is no less a factor in labor legislation than he was as a committeeman.

Somewhere on the labor scales you may again find a point where those same seven Republicans agree. When and if you do, you can write off the "Fair Deal" for Republican dealer's choice.

Senator's Score Card

MICHIGAN'S Senator Homer Ferguson is an average golfer. On the rare days he can spare the time, he makes a beeline for Burning Tree.

He shoots regularly in the 90s and has become quite philosophic about it.

Ferguson's philosophy on golf:

"Between 90 and 100 is just right.

"If you shoot over 100, you get sick of the game.

"If you shoot in the 80s, you are neglecting your business."

"If you shoot in the 70s, you've got no business."

Scoop on a Silver Platter

AN OUT-OF-TOWN reporter, who didn't know the Washington ropes, has just scooped the Washington press corps.

The Kansas City Star's George Wallace said it was all very simple. You see, he knew the President when Harry Truman was a county judge and Wallace was a cub newsman on the beat.

Wallace came to Washington for the inaugural festivities and Truman wasn't long in finding it out. He invited him to do something few Washington corpsmen ever tried—join him on one of those 6 a. m. walks.

Wallace showed up on schedule, but found the sidewalks closely guarded by police. When he insisted he had an appointment with the President, police shook their heads, put him down as a character. The visiting reporter exhausted every argument, then shrugged and turned away.

Later the President spotted Wallace at a Missouri gathering. Mr. Truman chided him for not turning up for that early morning walk. Wallace told of his struggle to run the police blockade and Mr. Truman promised to "alert" the guards next time. He told Wallace to drop around at 8 o'clock next morning.

This time the police made it easy for him. They even escorted him into Blair House where the President was waiting. The introductions:

Mr. Truman: Hi George, have you had breakfast?

Wallace: Nope.

"Then we sat down and had the kind of breakfast chat we used to when he was county judge," said Wallace. "We talked about old times some more, walking over to the White House."

Friends asked him how it felt to be the President's honor guest.

"Well," said George Wallace, "it was nice seeing a fellow you hadn't seen for a long time."

Truman Finesses a Trick

PRESIDENT TRUMAN is beginning to develop some of Franklin Roosevelt's legislative finesse. He keeps closer tab on legislation than you think, doesn't hesitate to intercede personally with a Congressman.

It's not generally known, but last week he averted a serious Administration upset on the important export control bill by some close liaison work with the House Banking Committee.

Georgia's Representative Paul Brown was getting ready to offer an amendment clipping the President's authority to set agricultural export quotas. Brown, representing a powerful House farm bloc, wanted to vest the power directly in the Agriculture Department.

The amendment, rated a good chance of approval, would have meant more than a slap at the President. On the export control bill, with its ECA tie-ins, it might have had international trade and foreign relations repercussions.

White House telephones buzzed. House Banking Chairman Brent Spence (Ky.), talked with Mr. Truman and Mr. Truman talked with Georgia's Paul Brown.

The President told Brown he agreed perfectly with what he was trying to do, but not with the way he was trying to do it. He promised in effect to carry out Brown's objectives under authority already given him in the bill.

So when the legislation comes before the House Monday, Brown will not offer his amendment. Presidential intercession saved the day.

Probably an Oversight

IF THERE'S one thing Ohio's Senator Robert A. Taft hasn't got these days, it's White House influence. But at least one of his Ohio constituents hasn't found out about it.

An Ohio tile manufacturer jacked him up in a letter the other day for not landing him, of all things, a White House remodeling contract.

What 'Peace' Means to the Politburo

By William R. Kintner

Lieutenant colonel and instructor at the Command and General Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.; formerly with the Army Intelligence Division in Washington.

WHAT IS behind the current Soviet "peace offensive?" Are the Communist leaders pleading for cessation of the cold war or do they have other ends in mind as they call upon the peoples of the world "to save imperiled peace?"

There can be no question that the Soviet Union wants some kind of peace. But what sort? Does peace to Stalin mean the same thing it does to us?

If peace merely means the absence of a universal shooting war, peace is something that the United States and the Soviet Union both desire. Yet barring the conflict in China, the mere absence of overt military action is all that distinguishes our world today from a state of global war. The negative peace of 1949 is not what we went to war to attain.

Just a Stepping-Stone

THERE is little question that the Soviets derive certain benefits from the continuation of negative peace. This is not to imply that the Soviets regard such peace as an end in itself. They view it only as a stepping-stone to a stable Communist peace. Soviet doctrine holds that real peace is impossible as long as capitalism exists.

On the other hand, the peace which the United States seeks is one based on the harmonious relations of distinctive peoples. It is not based on the absorption or extinction of ideas (and the people that hold them) which may be hostile to our own.

Consequently, the aim of American policy with regard to peace and the objective sought by Soviet "peace offensives" are mutually contradictory. Molotov proclaimed the Soviet objective in an address on the thirtieth anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution:

"Under the banner of Lenin and the leadership of Stalin, forward to the triumph of communism!"

In the same address, Molotov also said:

"From the very first day of its existence, the Soviet Union took a special place in international affairs by assuming the lead in the struggle for peace."

Peace Through Struggle

A CURIOUS contradiction seems to exist in the Soviet struggle for peace and communism. Peace is to come about once the blessings of communism are spread around the world, but the Communists are candid enough to recognize that the global triumph of communism cannot be achieved without struggle. Yet the struggle, they assert, will not be of their choosing. Rather it will come because the rest of the world persists in living under outmoded economic and political concepts and has failed to recognize the historical necessity of retooling for communism.

If another overt war should break out, it would be the task of Soviet statesmen to lay the blame, in advance, on the decadent capitalist nations, according to a technique which Lenin was so adept at using:

"Is it so hard to understand that the decision that an armed uprising is necessary imposes the duty on one in all public utterances to lay not only the blame but also the initiative at the door of the adversary? Only a child could fail to understand this."

Lenin's remarks were made concerning the Bolshevik Revolution. The Communist reasoning was quite simple. They did not want to revolt, to wage an internal war. The revolt was forced upon them by their political opponents who refused to give in to Communist demands.

The technique of laying the blame on others for unpleasantries associated with Communist power expansion has been vigorously exploited by the Soviet propaganda machine. A recurrent theme in this endeavor has been the Soviet concern with warmongering.

The cry of "warmonger" was first heard two years ago in Vishinsky's bitter attacks on prominent Americans whose only sin was opposition to further Communist expansion. Initially, these charges seemed very perplexing to Western minds. What was the purpose behind these attacks?

Stalin himself explained the warmongering charges as long ago as 1927.

"We must go our own way, defend the cause of peace, demonstrate our will to peace and expose the predatory intentions of our opponents, pillorying them as warmongers. This is the only policy which will enable us to mobilize the whole population of the Soviet Union in one camp should the imperialists force war upon us, or rather, when the imperialists force war upon us."

Here is the gist of the Soviet "peace offensive." A more complete explanation of the Soviet meaning of peace can be found in the resolution of the Sixth World Congress of the Communist International entitled, "The Struggle Against the Imperialist War and the Tasks of the Communists." The program and resolutions of this particular congress are the Mein Kampf of the Kremlin.

The significant statement of Communist peace policy lays the blame for all modern wars on capitalist competition. When capitalism enters its dying stages, contends this resolution, capitalism degenerates into fascistic imperialism. Kremlin soothsayers claim the death of capitalism is just around the corner. During this stage of capitalist disintegration—the era in which we live—peace is just a breathing space between new wars.

War Plows the Ground

LENIN and subsequent Communist leaders have adopted as their own the famous aphorism of Clausewitz: War is a continuation of politics by other means. Lenin's idea, "That the politics which a certain country, a certain class in that country, pursued for a long time before the war are invariably pursued during the war," provides the key for understanding the Soviet peace policy.

As the authoritative resolution of the sixth Congress expressed it:

"The international policy of the USSR is a peace policy, which conforms to the ruling class in Russia, viz., the proletariat, and to the interests of the international proletariat."

But the main interest of the ruling class of the Soviet Union has always been to promote world revolution: "Forward to the triumph of communism!" While talking for peace, every Communist of importance has admitted that wars and their aftermath provide excellent soil for the planting of communism. Historically, there is no question that the world wars of the twentieth century have been a great boon to communism. The Bolshevik revolution in Russia was made possible by the First World War. World War II has immensely enlarged the frontiers of Communist power.

Wars are useful to communism because they create conditions which make revolutions possible: "The ruling class must be in a state of crisis, for example, as the result of military defeat."

War a Last Resort

WITH these teachings in mind, we may fairly ask, Does world communism seek to cause war or to prevent war? Following the Communist answer to this ques-

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky was merely carrying out a mandate laid down by Stalin in 1927 when he began a recurrent tirade against American "warmongers" at Lake Success in 1947. These three camera studies were made at a press conference, between General Assembly committee meetings, at which he read a 10-page statement amplifying his charges against John Foster Dulles and others. He said they should be "enchained"

Experts Labor To Send 'Home' Looted Bells

By West Larsen

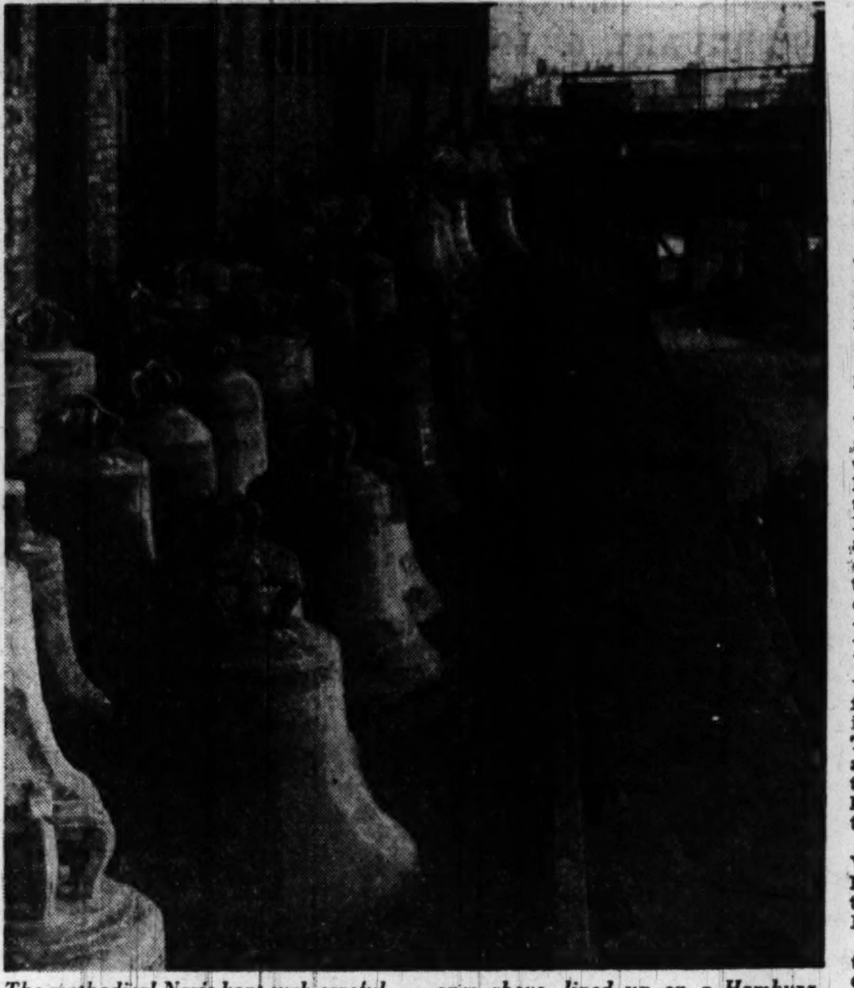
IMAGINE A LITTLE village in northern France—Time, 1942, the country overrun with German invaders. Half a mile outside the town is a small white church.

This morning there is some unusual excitement. A crowd of troubled villagers is milling about—what is wrong? Anyone in the gathering will answer with a quiet nod in the direction of a heavy Wehrmacht truck parked nearby.

These sturdy people have doggedly withstood the ravages of war, the ignominies of occupation by the hated Germans, cold and hunger; but this—the violation of the church sanctuary and the carrying off of their beloved bells—this is almost more than they can bear!

"Der Fuehrer demands the confiscation of all church bells. He needs the metal for the great Reich war machine," a German officer coldly announces to the stunned townspeople. They can't understand how these bells—whose chimes had in happier days meant celebration and worship, and in darker days solace and courage—could be cold instruments of war!

This incident was repeated at thousands of churches, from tiny chapels to great cathedrals, in France, Poland, Holland, Italy, Belgium and Germany itself. More than 30,000 bells ended in the melting pot to add to Hitler's war production.



The methodical Nazis kept such careful records of the larger bells they stole from churches all over Europe, that the Hamburg Bell Administration has been able to identify many of them. The ones above, lined up on a Hamburg pier, have been cleaned of mud and verdigris and are awaiting shipment to the churches from which they were taken early in the war

Survivors of Krupp

IN THE RESTRICTED Hamburg Port Area are five large church bell "graveyards," filled with bells still not melted when the war ended. They are of all shapes and sizes, from 5-pound prayer bells to mammoth bells weighing 12 tons.

Thick, green verdigris and rust cover their shoulder friezes, and a layer of mud hides the delicate figures and ornaments.

The Germans seemed to sense the precious nature of these copper bells beyond their potential as a mere source of metal for bullets. An elaborate "bell code" for identification was worked out by German art historians.

One of the German supervisors, Prof. Kurt Schussinger, explained the bell code. He pointed to the giant bell, "Gloriosa," from the Frankfurt Cathedral.

"Do you see the white letters, 17-33 D, on the side of that great bell?" he asked. "The 17 represents the seventeenth Main District—all Germany and German occupied countries were divided into numbered districts. The 33 means that it was confiscated by the Thirty-third Wehrmacht District Labor Group. The D explains that it belonged in Class D, bells of highest historical value."

(Class A: bells of least value—these were all melted. Class B: the precious bells. Class C: the most exquisite, artistic bells. Class D: bells of highest historical value.)

Protected From Bombs

THE GERMANS carefully guarded this cache of bells, shifting them from time to time for more security against air raids. One time when they were being moved to a safer place, the boat sank. Divers worked two months salvaging the cargo.

Today the Hamburg Bell Administration has a difficult task in returning the remaining bells to their churches, as many of the identification numbers cannot be read. But the methodical Nazis left other data that help.

The most precious bells were photographed, detailed descriptions were filed and recordings were made of their chimes. In addition, plaster casts were made of all Class D bells.

In this way, a German official explains, Germany could have returned the bells if they were not needed.

Today, after painstaking work by the bell experts, a group of the survivors stands on the pier—war veterans returning home. Once again they are clean and shining, with their fine ornaments and designs standing out in bold relief. Some have already been shipped, and wherever they have arrived back home they have been received with festivals of celebration.

Soviet Plays Waiting Game in Vienna

By Sonia Tomara
New York Herald Tribune News Service

VIENNA, Feb. 5.—All is peaceful here in Vienna. There has been little or no change in the past year.

Like Berlin, Vienna is an outpost of the West behind the Iron Curtain. Although Austria has its own government, it is still occupied by the Big Four. But, unlike Berlin, the Soviet government does not seem to mind our presence in Vienna.

American visitors reach Vienna by train without being molested by Russian guards, who ride the train as it rolls through the Russian zone of Austria. The train commander inspects papers and shows passengers' identity cards to the Soviet guards, but these guards have no orders to check luggage.

Our social contacts with the Russians in Vienna are few. The Russians apparently are not allowed by Moscow to mix socially with the Westerners. They are not even allowed to mix or "fraternize" with the Austrians, lest such contact contaminate them. But our official contacts with the Russians are "correct." Meetings of the Allied Council take place twice a month and are attended by generals, diplomats, jurists and economists of all four nations.

Hotels Are Sacrosanct

IN THE very center of Vienna, which was made an international district, one can frequently see a police car with four men in it, one from each of the occupying powers. The Russian hotel for senior officers is half a block from ours. We cannot enter it and they cannot enter ours. But we run into Russians in Viennese stores, restaurants and theaters.

We go freely into the Russian sector of Vienna, just as we did a few months ago in Berlin. The Russian zone around Vienna is taboo to us, however, as the country around Berlin has been for some time.

There is no friendliness between us and the Russians in Austria, no more than in Germany, and virtually no cooperation, but also there is no open conflict. At their semimonthly meetings, the Western and Soviet representatives practically never agree on anything. Often they fling accusations at each other. But Gen. Vladimir Kurassov has not yet walked out of a meeting, as General Sokolovsky did in Berlin last spring. Frequently the Russians kidnap Austrian officers or citizens alleged to be doing intelligence work for us.

Any person familiar with the Berlin situation wonders why the Soviet tactics in the two capitals are so different. Had the Soviets wanted to throw us out of Vienna, they could have done so easily. We have no airport of our own and must use the field in the Soviet zone outside the city. Thus, if the Russians stopped our trains, we could not even maintain a garrison in Vienna.

On the Dotted Line

THREE reasons are given here for the continuation of the quadripartite cooperation in Venna. I personally believe that these are mere pretexts and that the real explanation lies deeper. But here they are:

1. Our diplomats and commanders, who negotiated with the Russians the occupation of Vienna, were wiser than those who did the same job for Berlin. They put on paper our right of passage to Vienna, instead of trusting the Soviet word.

2. On paper, at least, Austria is a liberated and not a defeated country. The Russians themselves set up the Austrian government, which is still in power. The four powers are supposed to be advisers more than rulers. Although divided into four zones, Austria is economically still one country, much more so than Germany has been since her defeat.

3. The United States is virtually feeding the Austrian people and is supplying Austria's industries with many raw materials and fuel. Last year America shipped in 60 per cent of Austria's food, which was distributed in all four zones. The Soviets import nothing, but take out of Austria or resell to the Austrian government Austrian oil, some food produced on the land they have seized and goods manufactured in plants they have taken over as former German assets. Economically, the Soviets draw advantage from the present setup. We pour money into Austria from one end; the Russians draw some from the other.

Government Criticized

ARE these reasons sufficient to make the Soviets prefer the status quo? The breaking of a written agreement would hardly have stopped the Russians, if the "line" of the Politburo had required it. The Austrian government is definitely anti-Communist and frequently is accused by the Soviets of leaning westward. A coup d'etat could easily be carried out on the lines of the one that took place in Czechoslovakia.

In such a case, economic interest would not matter much. German reparations to the Soviets have been hit hard by our counter-blockade of the Soviet zone of Germany, where production is lowered by lack of Ruhr coal and raw materials.

It seems to me that the Soviet government is pursuing a long-term policy in Austria and waiting for the outcome of the battle in Berlin. For one thing, Austria is a small country, of much less weight in Europe than Germany. Its significance, however, is in conjunction with the whole Danubian basin of southeastern Europe.. Geographically, economically and spiritually, Austria is a part of this Europe, which it dominated under the Hapsburgs. It can only be self-sufficient if its trade and production are channeled toward that area.

Austria is now almost entirely supported by European Recovery Program allotments of food and raw materials from the west. Were these allotments stopped, her recovery would collapse and she would once more be in the grip of hunger and misery. The Soviets know it and we know it, too. Both sides are playing a game of waiting. We want to keep Austria alive and on our side. The Soviets don't mind our pouring money into Russia. They know that if they eventually get Germany, our situation in central Europe would be extremely difficult.

Status Quo Preferred

SOME experts on the Balkans predicted that a Soviet federation of southeastern countries would be created by the Kremlin. Austria would most probably have been drawn into it, if that had been the case. With Russia, such a federation could have become a powerful economic unit. Czechoslovakia and Austria would have contributed industrial production, the other countries agricultural goods; Poland has coal, Romania oil, Yugoslavia non-ferrous metals, Bulgaria tobacco.

The experts' predictions were wrong, for obvious reasons. The Kremlin was afraid of forming a mighty realm bordering on the U. S. S. R. Yugoslavia's defection has doubtless justified such fear. It is better for Russia for the present to maintain the status quo in central and southeastern Europe. Most observers in Vienna believe that the Russians will continue to maintain it and will not choose to sign a peace treaty for Austria.

So far all negotiations for such a treaty have been fruitless. The Soviets have insisted on an agreement which would make Austria their economic vassal. Neither we nor the Austrian government could agree to this. We have offered to resume our talks with the Soviets February 7.

An Insurance Policy

NO ONE here can see what advantage the Russians could draw from signing a peace treaty and withdrawing their troops from Austria. They maintain at this time from 40,000 to 50,000 men in this small country, which feeds them. The presence of this army permits the Soviet Union to have troops also in Hungary and Romania. Should these armies return home, other countries might follow the example of Yugoslavia.

The Austrian government naturally wants a treaty and the restoration of its sovereignty. But not at any cost. Thus it is likely that the present situation will prevail through 1949 and that things will come neither to a clash nor to a settlement. But nobody could predict with certainty the course which the famous zigzagging "line" of the Kremlin's Politburo will take. Austria is but a small pawn in the Soviet's global game.

Eastern Europe's Bogey Man

By William L. Ryan
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—The eyes that peer from behind the Iron Curtain evidently see an awe-inspiring dragon in the garb of an American intelligence agent.

The dragon is everywhere. He pries into the innermost secrets of "people's democracies," an eastern European term meaning Communist dictatorships. He organizes rings of agitators. He wreaks havoc with sabotage. He plots mayhem against the defenders of the "true freedom" as handed down by Moscow.

If the pronouncements of the Soviet satellite governments are to be believed, he has done a prodigious job. Washington is modest about it, though. The habitual retort from Washington is the diplomatic equivalent of "baloney!"

Frequently the "agent" is referred to only as a representative of a "foreign power." By "foreign power" the accusers do not mean Russia. For consorting with this ubiquitous agent, men have been sentenced to death, thrown into jail for long terms or bounced out of countries under the Moscow wing.

The latest manifestation of the "agent psychosis" comes from Czechoslovakia, where the police of Prague have just rounded up some 60 Slovaks and are out hunting for more who they say worked with American intelligence units.

This is simply a continuation of what has been going on since Czechoslovakia joined the Moscow colors. Right next door to the American zone of Germany, the Czech government officials are sure their country is a happy hunting ground for Western spies. Recently a group of Czech army officers was arrested for plotting with an "agent of a foreign power." An army major was sentenced to death.

A Roundabout Warning

THE pattern is monotonous, and just as monotonous are the denials from the West. These are just some samples:

Soviet-occupied eastern Germany: The Soviet-licensed press charged last September that Russian officials smashed a spy ring of Germans organized by American intelligence agents. Washington said it looked very much like a Communist expedient to warn the German public of the danger of opposing Communists.

The Soviet zone of Austria: The Russian news agency Tass distributed a story charging American intelligence men with hiring Austrians to spy for them. The United States said this was utterly untrue.

Hungary: The Communist-dominated Hungarian government arrested the Roman Catholic primate, Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, and charged him with, among other things, plotting with Americans and British against the government.

Bulgaria: Bulgaria's fright over American agents became manifest with the trial of the Agrarian leader, Nikola Petkov, subsequently executed. He was charged with working for a "foreign power." Guess which.

Later, the Bulgarians brought up another Agrarian—the Agrarians opposed the Communist government—on charges of trying to foment an uprising to coincide with a British-American invasion of the country. A number of others have been jailed for spying for "a foreign power."

Romania: Last December, Romania threw out two American and two British diplomats they charged with operating as "spies and saboteurs." Washington said the whole thing was ridiculous, and threw out two Romanians in return. Romania has tried numerous persons and sent them to jail on charges of plotting with Americans and Britons.

Yugoslav Jitters Ease

YUGOSLAVIA: Since the Yugoslavs got into the Soviet doghouse, they have not found so many evidences of British-American skullduggery. Before that it was a regular occurrence. One such was the roundup of a group the Yugoslavs described as former Nazi Gestapo men trained to spy for "a foreign power."

Poland: Poland looks upon the American Embassy and the United States Information Service office in Warsaw with suspicion. Washington has charged that Poles are arrested if they so much as enter the Information Service office.

Poland frequently has arrested prominent Catholic Church leaders and editors. Last April the Poles arrested two assistant military attaches of the United States Embassy and questioned them. Washington protested.

Russia: Last August the Soviet press and radio blared out a story about an assistant United States naval attache who already had left Moscow. The press and radio said he had been caught receiving secret information from a Russian and was sent home by demand of the Foreign Ministry.

The United States State Department reported that the attache had been framed and that the whole thing was aized in Moscow for internal political reasons.

Russia has had other spy stories, such as the one last July when her press warned railroad men to be on the alert, but generally Moscow confines itself to blanket statements about "agents of imperialism" who go about the world trying to upset the ordered Communist way of life.

They reject as calumny the insinuation that they encourage wars "in order to accelerate the advent of the revolution." On the contrary, the Communists "wage a persistent fight against imperialist war and strive to prevent imperialist war by proletarian revolution."

What, therefore, is the peace policy of the USSR? Russia's main international objective is the extension of communism. If this can be achieved without open warfare there is no reason for the Soviets to risk a test of arms. Revolutionary strategy may gain its objectives by cold war as well as the more established means of warfare. Although blundering conduct of the cold war might lead to open conflict, there are few grounds to suppose that the Kremlin planners want this to happen.

For this reason the Soviets are the most articulate champions of peace, but the peace policy of the USSR is of a kind which "provides the best basis for taking advantage of the antagonisms among the imperialist states." However, "The peace policy of the proletarian state does not imply that the Soviet state has become reconciled with capitalism . . . It is merely a more advantageous form of fighting capitalism, a form which the USSR has consistently employed since the October Revolution."

Hypocricy Is One-Way

ANOTHER part of the Communist creed holds that "imperialist attack against the Soviet Union is inevitable." Hence it is the primary duty of the Communists to "make all necessary political, military and economic preparations" for this war. Yet while sharpening their own swords, Communists discern "a glaring contradiction between the imperialist policy of piling up armaments and their hypocritical talk about peace." As might be expected:

"There is no contradiction, however, between the Soviet government's preparations for defense and for revolutionary war, and a consistent peace policy. Revolutionary war of the proletarian dictatorship is but a continuation of revolutionary peace policy by 'other means.'"

These excerpts, all taken from the peace resolution of the Sixth World Congress, describe the same aggressive pacifism as Hitler employed so successfully in his early bloodless conquests. This is the Soviet meaning of peace. Armed with this knowledge we can see through the Soviet charges of warmongering and avoid being lulled to sleep by recurrent Soviet "peace offensives."

In short, we must come to understand that in Soviet eyes any attempt of the non-Communist world to defend itself from Communist expansion will always be seen as the most merciless sort of aggression. But the aggression inherent in the battle cry, "Forward to the triumph of communism!", is the Soviet meaning of peace.

Canada Testing Jet Plane for Airline Hops

By Robert Bunnelle
Associated Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, Ontario, Feb. 5.—Canada may become the first country to use jet-propelled airliners in regular intercity passenger service.

Canadian experts say this country's wide expanses and relatively uncrowded airports are ideally suited to jet transports. And the first of these designed from the outset for commercial use is scheduled for test this spring.

The plane is the C-102 jetliner, designed and built by A. V. Roe Canada, Ltd., at its Malton plant near here. Planned to cruise high above the weather at 400 miles an hour, it's a metal low-wing monoplane looking much like the ordinary airliner.

Special Winter Equipment

IT USES a tricycle-type landing gear, has a wingspan of 98 feet 1 inch and is 82 feet 5 inches long. It is powered by four Rolls-Royce Derwent five-jet engines. It has special de-icing equipment against Canada's bitter winters. And it is designed to carry from 36 to 40 passengers in a cabin pressurized to keep them comfortable at heights of 5 to 7 miles.

Its normal range is figured for hops of around 400 to 600 miles or so, since it is to be used in intercity, rather than overseas, service.

M. D. Miller, assistant sales and service manager of A. V. Roe Canada, says the company hasn't any orders for the jetliner and it won't try for any until the plane's been fully tested. But it is known that the company consulted with Canada's government-owned Trans-Canada Airlines when it began work on the designs.

Trans-Canada Airlines, which flies the long cross-continent route, told the designers what it needed for such trips. The C-102 embodies these features. If the experimental plane is successful, it can be expected that Trans-Canada Airlines will put it into service.

Airports Aren't Crowded

THE TCA experts say they think jet passenger planes may be found especially useful in Canada because its cities are so far apart, its population so thinly strung out. Four-hundred mile hops are quite average in TCA's cross-country flights. Where cities are closer together and queues for landing on crowded airports quite normal, the present types of jet plane wouldn't be so useful.

C-102 isn't the first jet airliner, but it is the first, its makers say, to be designed from the start for intercity passenger service. Two jet-powered transports, not so designed originally, already are flying in England. One is the Tudor 8, built by Avro Manchester with which A. V. Roe of Canada is affiliated. And the other is the Vickers Viking.

Israel Masks 'Foreign Legion'

By James M. Long
Associated Press Staff Writer

TEL AVIV, ISRAEL, Feb. 5.—The story of the foreign volunteers who helped the fledgling army of Israel win the battle of Palestine is one of the hardest here to tell. It's a problem of censorship.

At the outset it was not permitted to write about foreigners in the fighting forces. As recently as two months ago, censors wanted to cut out all references to Gentiles in the Jewish army. Even now, correspondents are not permitted to speculate on the round numbers of, for example, Americans who are in military service here.

For one thing, the Israeli state does not want to be accused of importing mercenaries, or bringing in adventurers. Undoubtedly, some did come here for both reasons, but it was felt here that these were not representative.

For another: Many of the volunteers, again for example, the Americans, risked loss of their own citizenship by serving in the armed forces of another nation. The state here did not wish to heighten that hazard.

It can be said, however, that the number of volunteers who came here and fought—many now have gone back to their homes—ran well up into thousands. Of these, some hundreds were Gentiles.

Americans, although they constituted a considerable number of the actual combat volunteers, were not the most numerous of the several large groups of foreigners. They did, however, furnish a good number of officers.

The service with the most foreign volunteers, of course, was the Israeli air force. This is the service under the greatest security secrecy, the most difficult of which to write.

But it can be said, at least, that at the start of fighting there were virtually no Israeli pilots. The only ones available were the few—and these without combat experience—who had completed RAF training courses just as World War II ended. There were only about 30 of them.

But even in the air force, which attracted many Americans, they were not as numerous as the British and British South Africans. These constituted the largest group of the men who flew for Israel.

Top-Secret 'Moonlet' Is Nothing New to Science

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—A man-made moon, maybe the size of an ocean steamship, is a top secret of the first report of Defense Secretary Forrestal. Two sentences cover the entire project.

But it is no secret in science.

The idea is to set up a sort of flying platform out in space for several uses. Four such satellites have been considered in scientific publications: one about 400 miles above the earth, another at about 5000 miles, a third at nearly 200,000 miles. The fourth is the moon itself.

This moon idea comes from the British Interplanetary Society. The moon platform has one great advantage, that it already exists.

All four are still purely theoretical, but the basis for the Forrestal report is practical. The satellite project is listed under "Guided Missiles." These missiles will fly in the outer edges of the upper air. Satellites, too, will have to fly in this mysterious top blanket.

If the flying platforms can be sent up outside the air, they will help guided missiles below them. But that will be merely an extra dividend.

Meteors Have Trouble

BOTH satellites and guided missiles first must overcome several obstacles. One is evaporation of their metal skins if they travel too fast. Meteors evaporate in just this way. Another is a mysterious lumpiness in the top air, also revealed by shooting stars. A third is heat. One known upper layer is hotter than boiling water, and some calculations say it would make steel red hot.

A fourth is collision with shooting stars. At present this is reckoned a minor risk. But recently the Canadian Dominion Observatory, using radar to detect shooting stars, found five times more than had been spotted by eyes and cameras.

If the satellite gets out in space, the shooting star danger is a little greater. Conservative estimates indicate there might be one serious hit on the average each 15 years.

Ohio State University men this winter reported they had perfected a hydrogen-oxygen fuel able to fly a rocket to the moon, if the rocket ship were big enough to carry the fuel. They did not say how large.

The world has a naive idea that atomic power will fly space ships all by its lonesome. That is not true. Atomic power is only ordinary heat. Heat by itself never moves anything. The atomic rocket ship still must carry fuel.

The atomic rocket engine, however, has one very important advantage. It can use pure hydrogen, not to burn, but merely to expand in the atomic heat. Hydrogen so used will drive a rocket about 10 times farther than the same weight of hydrogen fuel that is burned. This saves carrying oxygen, which is 16 times heavier than hydrogen.

Atomic power is not now in sight because sufficient heat comes only from reactors of enormous size.

Neutralizing Gravity

ONCE out in space, the moonlet cannot merely float where earth's and moon's gravitational pulls are equal. This space ship is also a satellite of the sun, subject to capture by the sun's gravitational pull. To avoid this, it must keep moving. The motion probably will be around the earth, and fast enough to counterbalance the earth's pull. If close to earth, that speed will be very high.

The first military use is radar to guide flying missiles down in the atmosphere below. A handicap is that a radar beam is a cone. This cone would be about 40 miles wide if shot from 5000 miles up.

Atomic rockets might be launched from the platform. The little space ship probably could aid navigation. Its radar signals would not be stopped by clouds or fog. Reconnaisance is another possibility.

But reconnaisance faces the handicap of inability to see clearly through the earth's atmosphere. Even the greatest telescopes have this trouble. All objects on the other side of the atmosphere are blurred by the motion and light reflection of air particles. It is no different when you are outside trying to look in.

German pioneers proposed a huge burning glass, several miles in diameter. It would not be glass, but a dish-shaped reflector made of thin sheets of lightweight sodium metal. These would be prefabricated, and carried by rocket ships to be set up on the space platform. The Germans said this beam would melt almost anything it touched on the face of the earth. They did not say why the atmosphere would fail to draw most of the heat sting, as it does from the sun's rays.

Hole for Death Rays

THE German scientists envisioned a satellite in several parts, traveling as a family like the separate meteors in a comet's head. One part would be powerhouse, another the living quarters, a third the burning glass. Men would move from one to another simply by carrying pistol-size rocket guns to propel themselves.

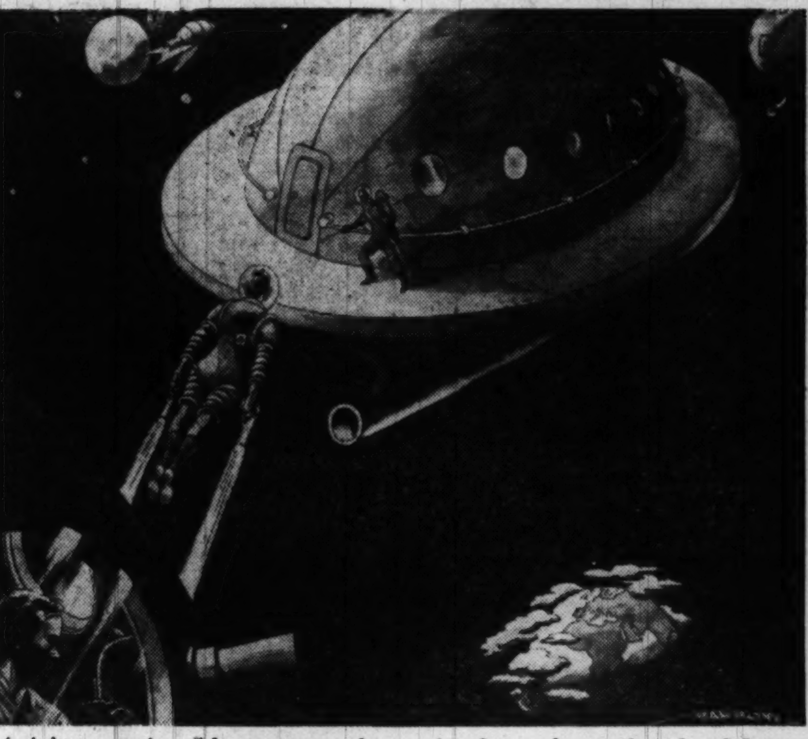
There have been fantastic suppositions of tearing a hole in the earth's atmosphere, so that the burning glass would send down to earth the sun's ultraviolet rays. These are real death rays. All but the least dangerous are screened out by the atmosphere. Thin clothing, glass and many other substances stop them completely. They would not be a great risk to space men properly clothed. But science knows no way to make a hole in the atmosphere.

Men on a satellite might weigh almost nothing, if far enough from earth. What this would do to their health is unknown. It is proposed to make living quarters in a revolving globe. Here the centrifugal force would act the same as the missing gravitation.

Minor complications are many. Garbage tossed outside would presumably travel right alongside the ship.

The surface of metal facing the sun would be hot enough to sear the flesh. The shaded side would be cold enough to take the skin off a moist fingertip. The two extremes would be used to provide comfortable interior heating.

But there would be no such heat while in the earth's shadow. The ship might avoid night altogether by circling the earth nearly north to south, at right angles to the path of the moon.



Artist's conception of how a man-made satellite might look, floating in space between the earth and the moon. German scientists envisioned clusters of such moonlets, each with a different purpose, with crewmen moving from one to another by pistol rocket. The sketch is by AP Artist Hank Barrow

Cloture Poor Muffler for Filibusters

By Robert E. Geiger
Associated Press Staff Writer

THE ancient and honorable custom of filibustering is based on the proposition that a Senator may talk himself to death if he chooses.

American legislators have been taking advantage of the filibuster "right" ever since the Nation was born, but now some Senators think it's time to put an end to it. Sponsored by Republicans, a proposal to change Senate debate rules also has support from some Democrats.

If they have the voice and constitution, Senators may now, under certain circumstances, talk as long as they wish. Senators have kept the floor for hours or days and—in relays—for weeks and even months to defeat a proposed law.

They don't talk, necessarily, to persuade opposing Senators. They may just talk to make the opposition so weary it will give up out of boredom.

The fabulous Huey Long from Louisiana read the Bible, offered advice on love affairs, told how to fry oysters and make "pot likker," read a biographical sketch of Frederick the Great and quoted Victor Hugo.

Long was supporting an amendment to the National Industrial Recovery Act in June, 1935. He talked 15½ hours but lost the debate.

Roll Call Recesses

ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE, sr., of Wisconsin set the record for holding the Senate floor back in 1908 when he held it for more than 18 hours against a currency bill. He lost, too.

Long probably talked more than La Follette, and actually talked longer. La Follette had the floor longer but was interrupted by 32 roll calls.

The longest continuous filibuster session was in 1915. A group of Senators kept the Senate in session from noon February 8 until 6:10 p. m. February 10. They were debating a ship purchasing bill.

The longest filibuster occurred in 1846, but it wasn't continuous. It lasted two months, with the Senate recessing regularly. It was about the act placing Oregon under sovereignty of the United States.

George B. Galloway of the Library of Congress Legislative Reference Bureau has made a study of the Senate's talk problem. He points out that the House has 30 rules for limiting or prohibiting debate and hasn't had a filibuster in recent years. The Senate has rules, too, but they have loopholes.

The strongest of these is the cloture rule, passed in 1917 after President Wilson was angered over a filibuster that killed his bill to arm merchant vessels when the United States was on the brink of World War I.

The cloture rule says a motion may be introduced at any time to end discussion of pending bills. But the motion must be signed by 16 Senators and one day must elapse before a vote is taken on it. Then it must be carried by a two thirds majority and every Senator still may talk an hour.

Senator William Langer of North Dakota swabs his brow after speaking for 4 hours and 33 minutes in a filibuster against the peacetime draft bill last June 19. He teamed with Senator Taylor to hold the floor 17 hours

Approved Four Times

FOR these and other reasons, cloture hasn't stopped filibustering. It has been proposed only 19 times and approved by two thirds on only four occasions.

Senators have proposed from time to time that the rule be amended to place it in effect when only a simple majority votes for it. They also have proposed that Senators stick to the subject under debate.

The most spectacular filibuster of recent years was the one by Senators Taylor (D., Idaho), and Langer (R., N. Dak.), against the peacetime draft. They lost after 17 hours and 2 minutes.

Taylor also teamed with Senator Morse (R., Oreg.), in 1947 to filibuster an effort to override President Truman's veto of the Taft-Hartley labor bill. The Senate was in session 30 hours and 52 minutes, longest in 20 years. Taylor talked steadily for 8 hours and 25 minutes and Morse for 10 hours.

No Props Permitted

SENATOR REED SMOOT (R., Utah), spoke for more than 11½ hours against the Ship Purchase Act in 1915. The presiding officer wouldn't even let him lean on his chair during the speech. He had to stand erect.

In 1893 there was an unsuccessful 42-day filibuster against repeal of the Silver Purchase Act.

In 1914 the Panama Canal tolls bill was debated 30 days and passed.

In 1942, 1944, 1946 and 1948 there was a series of filibusters against Federal antipoll-tax legislation and fair employment practices legislation. All were successful.

Senator Huey Long's son, Russell, has just begun his first term in the Senate. He and other Southerners have hinted they may try to tie up Congress with filibusters if the President's civil rights program is presented.

The 59-Cent Dollar Is 15 Years Old

By Sigrid Arne
Associated Press Staff Writer

A WHOLE generation of younger Americans has never found a gold piece in its Christmas stocking. It's illegal for a private citizen to own a gold coin (except that bona fide coin collectors may hold them as rare items).

The law that made it so was one of a series of events that reached its peak 15 years ago this week when President Roosevelt reduced the gold content of the dollar from 100 cents' worth to 59.05 cents' worth.

Over preceding months Roosevelt had exercised emergency powers to forbid banks to give gold in exchange for paper money. Holders of gold coins were asked to turn them in to Federal Reserve banks, and people had to get a Treasury Department permit to send gold out of the country. (Congress later passed laws covering these same points.)

It was said we had "gone off the gold standard." Actually, Government economists say that was only partially true. Economists generally say the United States still is on an "international gold bullion standard."

This means that our world trade has gold behind it. And—even though Americans can't get gold for it—our paper money is still backed by gold in Government vaults.

So what is the "59-cent dollar"? What did it do? Why was gold called in?

High-Priced Dollars

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT entered the White House when millions were out of work. Prices were dropping. Employers hesitated to hire anyone because profits were uncertain.

Roosevelt and his advisers determined to send prices up again. Among other steps, they took one which they said they hoped would stop our losses of foreign markets. Here is where the 59-cent dollar and the gold embargo come in. And here we must understand how people pay bills in foreign markets.

When an American owes $100 to a Londoner, say, he must buy British money (sterling) to pay. Sometimes sterling is high in value and the American must put out more dollars to meet his bill. Sometimes sterling falls, and then the American puts out fewer dollars.

In 1933 the whole world was having money troubles. Sales were dropping off between nations. So a good many nations had "cheapened" their money in one or more of several ways.

That was all right for the American who wanted to buy in those cheapened moneys. He had to pay fewer dollars. But it was bad for a Britisher—or a Swede or Italian—who wanted to buy here. He had to put out more of his money to get our dollars.

So the foreigner shifted his purchases to countries where the money, and therefore goods, were cheaper. Americans lost sales abroad, in particular American wheat farmers.

Also, large American buyers were finding it cheaper to buy some goods in Europe than here at home. So they went to other countries, too.

Still Worth 70 Cents

AT FIRST, in spite of the Roosevelt program, the dollar remained expensive in foreign markets. Big operators were still able to buy gold and ship it in payment of foreign debts. The dollar still looked very good abroad.

So the President forbade all export of gold, except through the Treasury and to settle just governmental debts. Then the dollar really began to slip in relation to other moneys.

But in mid-July, 1933, a dollar in London still brought the old equivalent of 68 cents. By mid-October the dollar had edged back up to 70 cents.

So, President Roosevelt announced a plan to buy gold abroad. This brought gold here and put dollars into foreign markets. The more dollars abroad, the cheaper they became.

Meanwhile, the President had been granted authority by Congress to cut the gold content of the dollar as much as one half. January 31, 1934, he exercised this power, cutting it to 59.05 cents.

For several years he could have cut another 9.5 cents. He never did. However, the power was there, and presumably it restrained other nations when they thought of cutting their money more.

Wheat Had Help

DID this monetary juggling, together with other measures, increase our sales abroad?

Wheat sales to other nations went from $18,600,000 in 1933 to $61,400,000 in 1939. (In 1938 wheat exports had been given further help by a 25 cents a bushel export subsidy.)

But cotton, another big export, fell.

Sales abroad of machines and vehicles more than doubled in that time, and sales of metal manufactures trebled. They were helped in 1939 by the start of British war orders.

Government gold experts now say there is no way to estimate how much effect the cheapened dollar had. They suspect it had really little effect on increasing exports during the '30s but think it probably had one good immediate effect: it put a stop to Americans losing sales abroad.

Barnstorming Ends For Aerial Fireman

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

THE Forest Service is going to quit showing off.

A few years ago it started permitting some of its employes to demonstrate smoke-jumping and cargo-dropping operations at county fairs and other public gatherings. They were graphic demonstrations of how parachuters are used to fight fires in our great Western forests.

Because the requests have become so numerous in recent years that the firefighters were spending most of their time jumping at fairs, the FS had to stop them all.

Since the smoking-jumping force was first established with 10 jumpers in 1910, the corps has become an increasingly effective arm in fighting forest fires. Last year the service employed 244 jumpers. They were dropped from planes on 94 fires in inaccessible territory, making 566 individual jumps.

Bison Knew Best

YEARS AGO much of the grazing land of the Southwest was covered with a native grass known as "sand love grass." It was the chief ration of antelope and bison. But when cattle raising came in, ranchers turned to newer types of grass.

Recently, Agriculture Department agronomists started experimenting with sand love grass again. They have discovered what bison and antelope apparently knew years ago. It is, a report this month says, "one of the more palatable and nutritious grasses." It is being used chiefly to bring abandoned Southern Great Plains land back to good range.

Range pastures of sand love grass consistently produce the highest cattle gains, investigators report. Cattle prefer it to seeded grasses.

The Rural Electrification Administration has listed 400 uses to which farmers put electric power. On some tasks, such as scooping grain into an overhead bin, one kilowatt-hour of electricity, costing a few cents, will do the same amount of work as a strong man working hard for three days.

Do chiggers bother you? The Agriculture Department has developed two compounds to "chigger-proof" your clothing. They will last as long as the clothes, and will withstand dry cleaning, department experts say.

Experiments to find chigger-proofing for clothes were started at the request of the Army. Several types were found, but the most recent and most efficient are listed as phenyl carbonate and "x,x'-dichlorodyphenyl ether." No commercial application of the compounds has yet been made.

Last year, from 15 to 20 thousand acres of apple orchards were sprayed from airplanes with hormone sprays or dusts to prevent pre-harvest dropping of the fruit. The airplane spraying, says L. P. Batjer of the Agriculture Department, isn't as effective as ground spraying, but is commercially satisfactory.

Figures reveal that since the war, 95 per cent of the wool in the world market crosses the Equator from the Southern Hemisphere to the Northern. The five principal wool exporting nations are Australia, Argentina, New Zealand, Union of South Africa and Uruguay, with Australia supplying as much as the other four.

Mothproof Winesaps

The day is fast approaching when it will be safe to eat apples in the dark, the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine says. The apple worm—or coddling moth—problem is on its way out, the bureau says. DDT is gradually exterminating them.

But DDT doesn't get other apple pests. It doesn't control apple mites. The mites don't make apples wormy, but cause them to be smaller and of poor color.

Agriculture experts now have developed a new insecticide, parathion, which is making a showing against all apple pests. Not in general use yet, it is being tested for possible hazards to public health.

The Agriculture Department is recommending a wafer made of potatoes and skim milk. They see in this wafer an outlet for plentiful potatoes and surplus skim milk. Here's how it is made:

"Boiled potatoes and skim milk are thoroughly mixed and seasoned. The mixture is then extruded as a ribbon, which is dried and toasted to a light brown. They have a cheese-like flavor and the texture of potato chips."

White House Lone Run-Down Shrine

CONTINUOUS use and the dry rot of time have evicted the President of the United States temporarily from his official domicile.

But what of the hundreds of other historic buildings in the Nation? Are they, like the White House, disintegrating from lack of attention and funds for repair?

None of the primary historical buildings and monuments in the care of the National Park Service is in a serious state of disrepair, officials say. The service, however, is concerned with unsightly conditions surrounding such places as the Gettysburg Battlefield, Washington's birthplace (not his Mount Vernon home) and a few other spots.

The Nation's bill for the upkeep of five important national shrines in the neighborhood of Washington—not including Government buildings and the White House—runs to less than $200,000 a year and they are visited by more than three million people every year.

The service's comparatively recent acquisition, the Hyde Park, N. Y., home of Franklin D. Roosevelt, has a $150,000 annual appropriation and is kept in apple-pie order for the benefit of almost 500,000 visitors a year. The popular and dramatic Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor is now in the process of a thorough going over and soon will be given a well-landscaped island base.

Illinois recently spent considerable money repairing both the home and tomb of Abraham Lincoln in Springfield. A leaky roof over the tomb was fixed at a cost of $40,000 and plans are completed to floodlight the tomb. General repair work costing $12,000 already has been undertaken on the home, and the State plans to spend another $15,000 to restore the second floor rooms. Both shrines are in good general condition.

Philadelphia's Independence Hall is kept in a good state of preservation. In the last year the city put new shingles on the roof and gave it a complete outside—and partial inside—paint job. The city fathers who watch over the building are unable to estimate without considerable research how much its annual upkeep costs.

Alamo Well Preserved

ANOTHER well cared for shrine is San Antonio's Alamo, Franciscan mission which was the scene of the great Texas massacre in 1836. A group of women, the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, stepped in and rescued the old building from decay. Ample funds for its preservation—and the addition of museum and library wings—are obtained by sale of souvenirs and other merchandise. Last year about $64,000 was raised this way.

The congregation of St. John's Episcopal Church in Richmond, Va.—where Patrick Henry delivered his "give me liberty or give me death" speech—recently authorized repainting and repair of the building.

New Orleans' ancient Cabildo—State-owned and maintained—is in fine shape under a $70,000 yearly appropriation for maintenance, along with its twin Presbytere, the Pontalba apartment buildings, and Mme. John's Legacy. It was in the Cabildo in 1803 that Louisiana was transferred from Spain to France—and later, in the same building, was transferred from France to the United States.

The Cabildo now houses the State Museum and is open free to the public. Mme. John's Legacy is now being restored and refurnished. Local legend says the building figured in the pirate schemes of Jean Lafitte and received its name because a former owner named John left the place to a quadroon consort and her child. It dates back to 1726. The Pontalba buildings—red brick and two blocks long, are called the first apartment buildings. They were once the property of the Baroness de la Pontalba, built during the 1848 French Revolution.

Historic Boston has many shrines still in fine condition after centuries of use. Faneuil Hall burned in 1762, leaving nothing but brick walls. It was rebuilt and enlarged in 1802 and made fireproof in 1898. It is still used as a public meeting place.

Paint Job Under Way

BOSTON'S oldest public building, the old State House, dates back to 1713. It was restored in 1882 and leased permanently to the Boston Society as a museum. At the moment the exterior woodwork is being painted cream color "as in the days of royal governors." The Paul Revere House, where the patriot raised his 13 children, has been refurnished for museum use.

The San Juan Capistrano Mission, built in 1776 in Southern California, is one of the few historic buildings still used for its original purpose. Priests at the mission say the buildings have been kept up with funds from admission fees and donations. No major reconstruction or repair work is necessary or planned.

One of the oldest buildings in the Nation is St. Augustine's Castillo De San Marcos, known to Floridians as The Fort. Last year the Federal Government spent $5000 in rehabilitation of the edifice started in 1672 by the Spaniards. The Spanish Fort Matanzas, 15 miles below St. Augustine, was rehabilitated to the tune of $10,000 last year.

The Block House, the only portion of Pennsylvania's Fort Pitt left standing, is in satisfactory condition. It is owned by the Fort Pitt Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution of Allegheny County which a few years ago put a shingle roof on the 1764 redoubt. The 600 members of the organization contribute a dollar each annually and report it is plenty to cover the upkeep.

The principal historic shrines of Colorado are Central City's opera house and Teller House, a pioneer hotel. They are in good shape, and kept that way at a cost of about $10,000 a year. Wyoming has a state commission spending $30,000 to reconstruct the main barracks at Fort Bridger. It was founded by Scout Jim Bridger in 1843 as a supply post and became a military post 14 years later. The State took it over as a museum in 1930.

Thinking As A Mayor

Some of the Senate "mayors" Washington has endured have not shown much appreciation of District interests as justification for their titles. We expect better things from the new District committees in Congress. For instance, we cite the remarks of Senator Humphrey, a new member of the District Committee and himself a former Mayor of Minneapolis. "Someone has got to put in more time on Washington municipal affairs," he said, "or else we've got to give the District some form of home rule so that it can attend to its own affairs."

The focal point of Senator Humphrey's comments was the pay of municipal employes and the unfair omission of District workers from the Federal pay raise last year. Noting that he hadn't gotten over "thinking like a mayor," he observed that one of the first things he learned in Minneapolis was that "you cannot get good service, particularly in the public service fields such as the police, fire and health departments, unless there is a fair rate of pay." This is abundantly true. Senator Humphrey might have gone further and pointed out that in the whole scope of local government—facilities, budget, taxes and Federal payment—the District is floundering because of the system of absentee ownership.

We hope that more members of both houses of Congress will be moved to think like Mayors of Washington. The more they delve into local problems, the more ridiculous they will find a situation that compels them to take time away from issues of national importance to deal with matters that the people of Washington should be settling.

Merci Train

Forty-nine railroad cars arrived on a single cargo vessel in New York Harbor last Wednesday. The ship was the French freighter Magellan, and the cars, one for each State and the District of Columbia, made up France's thanks "in kind" for the Friendship Train initiated last year by Mr. Drew Pearson. Our share in this reciprocal expression of friendship is on display today on the track beside the Bureau of Engraving recently occupied by the Freedom Train.

The name "Gratitude Train," as it has been translated, is not as fortunate as it might be. It seems to imply that France is in the position of a recipient of alms. In the project of the Friendship Train, Mr. Pearson's idea, and that of the many Americans who supported it, was, we are sure, to emphasize the bond of friendship. Doubtless this is the motivating spirit of the Merci Train. However, that is a minor matter. Certainly it does not detract from the welcome we give to this tangible message of fellowship that comes from the hearts of the French people. They have given as they could the things that are dear to them. We accept the gifts in the same spirit, and humbly.

Recognition

Better late than never is the general rush to recognize Israel, but the sad fact is that the recognition is testimony to Israel's power, not to world statesmanship. Thus the action may or may not be a moderating influence at Tel Aviv. The test of statesmanship lies in the choice that is made between the short and the long view. The long view for Israel is to do its share in binding up the wounds of conflict and in cultivating neighborliness. In this connection two tasks loom ahead for Middle Eastern nations. One is the settlement of the Arab refugee problem, the other the initiative of a river conservancy scheme for the whole area.

Israel has been unjustly accused of creating the problem of the Arab refugees. Most of the Arabs in Palestine bolted when Israel was attacked. Reluctance to encourage their return is natural, in circumstances which have not yet produced an armistice, let alone peace. How can the Israelis be sure that returnees are not fifth columnists? As soon as peace returns, the opportunity will be present for an exchange of populations, at least till time brings about toleration. Iraq, for instance, could accommodate willing Arabs in return for Israeli accommodation of Jews willing to leave Iraq. As for river conservancy, a sort of pilot plan is practicable for the Litany River, which makes one part of the Lebanese-Israeli border.

The recognitionists include the United States, which is now in de jure relations with Israel, as well as with Transjordania. This latter development is very welcome; doubtless Dr. Bunche's work at Rhodes has benefited from this double-barreled action. Abdullah always has been anxious to come to terms with Tel Aviv, and he has been encouraged by American recognition to throw his influence on the side of pacification. American recognition will also put our representation at Tel Aviv on a level with Soviet Russia's. The Russians have made the most of their period as the only great power in de jure relation with Israel—much to the embarrassment of the Israelis. Yet Russian singularity does not appear to have had the slightest effect on the political orientation of the Israelis. One of the myths about Israel is that it is potentially Communist. The trouble may be that it is just the opposite, viz, stridently nationalistic. Indeed, there is every indication that Moscow is realizing another of its diplomatic blunders in acting as if Israel was a seed-bed of communism.

Loyalty's Reward

Like a certain well-advertised soap, Government employes now have been found to be 99-plus per cent pure, politically speaking. The FBI reports that of 2,387,253 persons checked for loyalty, 2,378,763 have been cleared. Full investigations have been ordered in only 7996 cases, and it is a reasonable assumption that some of these persons have been absolved of disloyalty. Investigations are now on a current basis covering new employes. In view of this heart-warming testimonial to the allegiance of Federal workers, we suggest that the time has come to call off the dogs—to abolish the elaborate loyalty check procedure and return such screening as still may be desirable to the Civil Service Commission operating under redefined standards of procedure.

The very size of the percentage of employes to whom no suspicion has attached is in itself reason to ask what all the shooting has been about. For inevitably the mass loyalty investigations have brought with them an atmosphere of inquisition and near hysteria that has done profound damage to the morale and efficiency of the Federal service. This is the sort of atmosphere, aided and abetted by irresponsible charges from Capitol Hill, that has led to such abuses as the smearing of a highly trusted Commerce employe because his estranged daughter worked for a Russian news agency. The smears and hounding attending the loyalty program have had a stultifying effect on initiative; they have made Federal workers wary about saying anything that even a casual bystander might suspect. The whole tendency has been to make Government employment unattractive to persons of independent mind and independent convictions.

This atmosphere has developed despite the sincere efforts of many officials connected with the loyalty program to be fair. No matter how scrupulous the investigations, the system has put a premium on tattle, spite-talk, hearsay, and informerism. It has made the lives of thousands of Federal employes miserable. It has held above their heads a constantly suspended sword of Damocles. Charges often have been of the vaguest sort, and the burden of proof has been, not on the accusers, but on the accused. Indeed, congressional and public pressures have made it almost impossible for loyalty boards to exercise discretion in cases of reasonable doubt. Too often the line of questioning has revolved around conformity with prevailing mores in personal habits and personal opinion. Defendants and witnesses have been asked questions with little or no bearing on loyalty—for example, what the person charged thinks of the segregation of blood in blood banks, whether he has any sympathy for the underprivileged, whether he has intelligent and clever associates, what he thinks of conscription or even of the loyalty program itself.

Some of the loyalty investigations have been grossly unjust on their face. For instance, an American civilian employe in Japan was charged with disloyalty because of a statement he made at a conference on agricultural products and ways of eliminating the black market. He advocated that in return for fertilizer being given to farmers they be required to turn in a certain portion of their produce to the government for distribution. An Army officer retorted: "That sounds like Communist doctrine," and on that basis the employe was charged. A woman employe was accused of disloyalty because, at the time of siege of Stalingrad, she collected money for Russian war relief (she also collected money for British and French relief). In yet another case the basis for a charge of disloyalty was that an associate had heard that the defendant's mother-in-law was pro-Russian.

A charge of disloyalty is perhaps the only "crime" in the United States in which the defendant cannot confront his accusers. In cases ranging from treason to purse-snatching, this is an elementary right under the American juridical system. Jurisdiction over loyalty, however, is outside the judiciary, and persons given a broad set of charges against which to defend themselves are told that it is impossible to bring their accusers to light because of the necessity of protecting the FBI's sources. The result of this process often is to punish a man not for his acts, but for what he conceivably might do. This process, moreover, has given rise to the nebulous and frightening term "security risk" under which persons are discharged or denied employment without reference to actual loyalty.

Even if one accepts the thesis that no one has a "right" to a Government job, it is impossible to condone practices that result in proscribing a person for both public and most private employment with either the implication or charge of disloyalty based on evidence that would not stand up in court. If some sort of screening for Federal jobs is to be continued under the Civil Service Commission, we think there ought to be a complete study of standards by some eminent and disinterested figure. Basic to any new set of standards, in our opinion, should be a requirement that the evidence be of a nature acceptable in a court—for certainly the charges are just as serious as any made in court.

Furthermore, we believe there ought to be a complete redefinition of what constitutes sensitive jobs, for it is these that are the primary concern of loyalty investigations. It would be pertinent to know just how many of the two million-odd cases investigated by the FBI were related to positions actually important to national security. For the cost of the loyalty program has been extravagant in terms of both money and morale. No American can afford to close his eyes to the subversive designs of the Communists. The question is whether these cannot be met by methods that do not generate division, suspicion, alarm, and confusion that themselves play directly into the hands of the Kremlin.

Overtime On Overtime

Last June the Supreme Court upheld a wage-hour administrative ruling that certain so-called overtime payments for work done by stevedores at night and on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays were really premium payments for working at undesirable hours and must be included in computing regular rates of pay which become the basis for determining overtime rates for work in excess of 40 hours per week. This so-called overtime-on-overtime decision has resulted in claims for back pay that stevedoring companies claim will bankrupt the industry. A bill to bar such suits is now being considered by the House Committee on Education and Labor, and it is to be hoped that it will be rushed to speedy passage. As one of the witnesses appearing before the committee stated: such remedial legislation would be simply "an effort to correct a misinterpretation of congressional language." For it is highly improbable that Congress had any intention of invalidating agreements that have prevailed for many years in the stevedoring industry.

It is also worth noting that union officials as well as company heads unite in urging remedial action to prevent the scrapping of highly advantageous collective bargaining contracts calling for premium pay other than overtime. Congress has already passed legislation of a retroactive character to prevent collection of huge sums claimed under the portal-to-portal decisions. That act also protects employers in the stevedoring industry to some extent against claims for overtime back pay. But the extent of the protection afforded is uncertain, and in any case the ruling stands as an obstacle to negotiation of the kind of wage agreement between stevedoring unions and employers that, as Justice Frankfurter has pointed out, are of "long standing and socially desirable."

Turn In The Tide

Government officials have been quick to point out that the current drop in employment and the downward movement of commodity prices [illegible] no cause for alarm. So far, certainly, there is nothing to worry about in the rise in unemployment, which, judged by prewar standards, is still at low levels. Prices for basic farm products have already undergone a sharp deflation that has been salutary rather than otherwise, while the much-advertised drop in retail prices has been extremely limited, bringing living cost indices only three points below the peak level reached a few months ago.

The prevailing uneasiness is due chiefly to a belief, supported by an abundance of confirmatory evidence, that the period of scarcity and consequent booming prices is coming to an end. That had to happen some time and there is good reason to be thankful that it seems to be taking place while employment and consumer incomes are still at high levels. However, the shift from an economy characterized by scarcity to a more normal peacetime economy of comparative abundance in which the seller no longer has the upper hand entails some hazards. As backlog demands for durable goods are satisfied, for instance, some industries have to curtail their operations, others feel the effects of seasonal declines in buying that were once taken for granted, and marginal high-cost firms may be forced out of business by inability to market their products at profitable prices.

The inevitable result of such changes [illegible] an increase in layoffs and dismissals. If these adjustments are sufficiently limited in scope, the corrective process need not be costly. But if unemployment becomes widespread and is reflected in a sudden pronounced shrinkage of buying, serious price deflation and business depression will assuredly follow. That is why the current business situation will stand close watching, as Chairman Nourse of the President's Council of Economic Advisers points out.

In this transitional stage it is especially important to avoid the injection of new elements of instability into the business structure. For that reason the AFL's demand for a fourth round of wage increases seems particularly ill-advised, since it might, if successful, touch off a new cycle of production-cost increases that in the face of growing buyer resistance to high prices could not be shifted to consumers. The result would be declining business activity, less employment for workers in affected industries and shrinkage of consumer income. The wise course is not to rock the boat when a storm threatens.

Transit Radios

When the Capital Transit proposal to install radios in cars and buses was first made public, I shared the reactions expressed by several who have sent letters of protest to The Washington Post.

However, I later began to wonder whether there was not something to be said for the other side. I have come to the conclusion that there is and simple fairness induces me to set them down. Here they are:

Money. Under the proposal the company will get money. Music. The cash customers will get music. Intellectual diversion. The commercials, it is promised, will be of a new type, neither irritating or revolting. Riders can use ingenuity here by listening carefully to the messages and comparng them to those heard over their home radios, thus providing themselves with intellectual diversion.

Assuming some of the music will be from the eighteenth century, the era of elegance, a gentleman will sometimes have the opportunity to rise, bow low and offer his seat to a lady to the appropriate strains of Mozart or Handel.

This item is for the unreconstructed rebels and rugged individualists who resent progress, no matter how much it does for them. Just consider how good it will feel, after enduring the discomfort of listening to what you don't want to listen to, for anywhere from 10 to 60 minutes, of finally disembarking!

Stalin's Answers

I am all burned up with these newspapermen who are eternally trying to scoop one another by sending questionnaires to his excellency, J. V. Stalin, get them answered by his excellency, and thus cover themselves with glory.

The latest questionnaire is particularly worthless, meaningless and stupid—both as to questions and answers.

The remarkable similarity in literary structure of questions and answers causes one to wonder whether questions and answers haven't passed over the same desk.

Oleo For Butter

Mr. Charles Ellsworth's agonized appeal (letter published February 1) for the safeguarding of the public from threatened substitution of oleo for butter, expected to be perpetrated in public eating houses, is pathetic enough to wring tears from even an oleo manufacturer. He, of course, makes no claim that the butter has one particle more or better food value than the oleo.

Of course, he would allow you to believe that the oleo manufacturer does not go to the farmer, also, for the materials with which he makes this despised substitute for butter. Why should one class of farmers have a discriminatory tax assessed against their products for the benefit of another class?

Suppose the restaurant where I ate my lunch today did serve oleo in place of butter. I didn't look around for a sign, as the matter was one of the utmost indifference to me. I have eaten oleo for years when I ate at home and shall continue to do so until and unless the price of butter gets down very close to the price of oleo.

Incidentally, it would appear that the butter people should get together. In the same issue of The Washington Post, Drew Pearson quotes a letter from Kingsdale Dairies of New York City which unqualifiedly recommends the removal by the Congress of all taxes and all restrictions on oleo.

"Farm Statesmanship"

The fallacy inherent both in your January 29 editorial, "Farm Statesmanship," and in the theory of the sliding support price for agricultural products is that the lower the price the less farmers will plant. A careful study of production figures in relation to price will show the opposite.

Like other producers, farmers usually attempt to counterbalance lower unit prices by increasing the units produced. Thus, the net effect of lowered support prices will be simply to reduce income to farmers. It is even possible that failure to support farm prices at "high" levels will cost the Treasury more than otherwise.

If no controls are imposed and each farmer races to see how much he can produce in order to keep up his income despite the lower price, then the bottom may indeed drop out of farm prices. The public expenditure such a condition would necessitate might be far more than that of an orderly adjustment at present or higher support prices.

It should be pointed out that the principal device for supporting agricultural prices is the Commodity Credit Corporation loan. Under the terms of this loan the farmer may withdraw his cotton or wheat if the market price exceeds the loan, sell it, and keep the difference. On the other hand, if the price remains below the loan level, he may leave the wheat or cotton in the hands of the Government, which then may hold it for later price rises or sell it and pocket the loss. Thus, good prices at the farm mean that the Government will not be left with unmanageable supplies, whereas low prices at the farm may mean just that, even if the support price is reduced to 60 per cent of parity.

Moreover, it should be noted that the present "high and rigid" support prices referred to in your editorial place a 90 per cent floor under most commodities. The word "parity" is intended to denote a price that will yield to a farmer a return that is commensurate with that earned by the average worker or producer in other segments of the economy. In other words, parity means simply a fair deal in prices, or in income, if applied to the latter.

What reason is there, then, for arguing that less than 90 per cent of parity, or, for that matter, anything less than 100 per cent is fair? If the formula by which this parity is determined is not adequate, then it should be changed. But the argument that the national interest requires less than fair treatment for them is not one that farmers can be expected to accept readily, even if the term "farm statesmanship" is applied to that view.

Two other misapprehensions, it seems to me, appear in your editorial. The first is that, "under the stimulus of high price supports, yields per acre have risen amazingly." Advances in agricultural technology, including conservation practices, and its application, have primarily been responsible for increased yield, along with acreage controls. The other is that "rigid systems of price support lead inevitably to a regimentation of agriculture that deprives the farmer of freedom of initiative." It remains to be proved yet that you are less regimented at 60 per cent of parity than at 90 per cent.

As for loss of initiative under the "regimentation" of the last 16 years, I refer you to the vote on November 2 in the "Republican" farm States. However, much farm "leaders" may explain it away, that was a vote for "high and rigid" support prices as time will show.

To sum up: It is entirely possible to obtain needed adjustments as between crops with a relatively "high" floor for farm prices, the spread between farm and retail price is widening and is far more deserving of consumers' target practice than are farmers' prices, and an unacknowledged farm depression like that of the early '20s inevitably will sow the seeds of general economic collapse.

Diplomacy Or Propaganda?

By Andre Visson

New Stalin Interview

THE cool reception by American official circles of the first "peace-loving" interview he gave to J. Kingsbury Smith did not prevent Stalin from carrying on his peace-loving line in the second interview.

This should not come as a surprise to anyone. Whether Stalin's first interview was just another propaganda flurry—which is the prevailing opinion in American and western European diplomatic quarters—or whether he is really prepared to discuss conditions for peace—as some people both here and in Europe would like to believe—it was to Stalin's advantage to pursue his present peace-loving line.

If he really wants peace he will naturally continue to explore the possibilities offered him by the American press. If, on the other hand, his action was dictated primarily by considerations of propaganda, it would have been very foolish for him not to exploit the wonderful opportunity so generously offered him by the democratic press.

Knowing that every word of his is front-page news, the Soviet dictator is delighted to be able to use the democratic press to such good advantage. His past record shows that he is a master in this game. He never gives press conferences. He makes foreign correspondents submit their questions in writing. These questions he answers in such a way that his words can always be exploited for propaganda purposes even if they fail to help him attain his diplomatic objectives.

STALIN'S diplomatic objectives at this very moment are pretty obvious. He is playing for high stakes. He wants to block the consolidation and expansion of the Western European Union and the proposed North Atlantic Pact.

He knows that he cannot declare this publicly. So he lets the press in the Soviet Union and in the satellite countries, as well as the Communist publications on this side of the iron curtain describe the Western Union and North Atlantic Pact as "aggressive, imperialistic moves, threatening the security of the Soviet Union and endangering the peace of the world."

The diplomatic objectives which he puts on record, however, are much more modest. He asks only for postponement of a western German state. This is certainly very shrewd. He knows that the majority of the French people—and many other western Europeans as well—view a western German state with considerable anxiety. He hopes to win their support.

To be sure, that is not so easy today as it was a year ago. Soviet actions during the last two years—especially the coup in Czechoslovakia—have made the overwhelming majority of western Europeans, including the French, reach the conclusion, however reluctantly, that Stalin is not a "dependable character." It is significant that the well-known French commentator, Pertinax, who for many years was one of the stanchest European advocates of cooperation with Soviet Russia, now has few illusions left about Stalin's good-will.

Commenting on Stalin's latest interview, Pertinax writes in France Soir: "Stalin's statement does not amount to a softening, but on the contrary, to a stiffening of the Soviet attitude, because what was before only a personal wish—namely, the postponement of a western German state—has now become a condition."

THIS stiffening is also revealed by the Soviet note to Norway. While the Soviet dictator tenders in one hand an olive branch to 145 million Americans, he shakes his fist at 3 million Norwegians, warning them not to join the North Atlantic Pact.

His warning does not appear to have frightened the brave people of Norway. Their decision to join the North Atlantic group appears to hold fast. It can only be hoped that the olive branch tendered by Stalin to the people of the United States will not confuse them nor our Allies and friends in western Europe.

Secretary of State Acheson has analyzed with brilliance and with exceptional skill the substance—or rather the lack of substance—in Stalin's latest interviews. He has reassured those Europeans who feared that bilateral American-Soviet talks might affect their vital interests. And while he was frankly and almost bluntly critical of Stalin's statements, Secretary Acheson took care not to slam the door in Stalin's face.

The most important feature of the suggested meeting between President Truman and Marshal Stalin is not the place, but the topics to be discussed. Such a meeting without an agenda previously agreed upon would not only be purposeless, but dangerous. But it is not for newspapermen to work out such an agenda. It is a job for the diplomats to be done behind closed doors.

Talks With Russia

President Truman would have to have a great deal of courage to agree to new talks with Russia. A public opinion poll would no doubt indicate that most people are skeptical about such a venture. Opinion is high places is probably even less favorable. However, during the recent campaign the President demonstrated surprising ability to mold events. Leadership can change minds, even Russian minds.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

West Coast Embraces the Nisei

By Drew Pearson

IT hasn't been overly advertised, but a racial revolution has come to the Far West.

Few groups have taken a worse shoving around from their neighbors than the Japanese-Americans of California. Laws were passed forbidding them to own land or to practice some 500 professessions. Signs were hung in windows proclaiming, "No Japs Allowed." Newspapers and citizens' leagues took up the cry of "yellow peril" and peaceful Japanese-Americans were shunned and taunted and even terrorized by hysterical neighbors.

The climax came after Pearl Harbor, when 110,000 American citizens of Japanese ancestry were thrown off the West Coast and herded inland behind barbed wire fences.

This bitter sentiment is changing. Los Angeles, once the capital of Japanese hatred, is taking the lead in ending discrimination. The Chamber of Commerce not only welcomed the Japanese-American colony back to the West Coast, but formally urged the United States to permit first-generation Japanese, now barred from citizenship, to become naturalized and even to grant immigration quotas to Asiatic countries.

"The elimination of this special Asiatic racial discrimination," declared the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, "is of significant importance in the light of the present struggle between free people living under the democratic system and those of state-controlled governments. It is recognized that any discrimination legalized by democracies provides powerful ammunition for propaganda on the part of the Communists. . . ."

When hoodlums burned the home of a Japanese returning to California, neighbors who had once refused to speak to him helped rebuild his house and care for his family.

Meanwhile, Utah quietly repealed its alien property law, setting the pattern for the West to restore equal property rights to the Japanese. Also, after pressure from the West, the Eightieth Congress reimbursed Japanese evacuees for personal and property losses suffered as a result of their wartime exodus.

President Truman by executive order revoked "limited passports" which for 41 years had prohibited Japanese residents of Hawaii from coming to the mainland except for limited stays. Congress also opened the doors to Oriental brides who had married GIs overseas.

Back from battle, the Japanese-American 442d Regiment marched in honor down Washington's Pennsylvania ave. Known in Italy as the "Purple Heart Regiment," this outfit won more decorations than any other comparable unit in World War II. On one occasion alone, charging to the rescue of the Lost Texas Battalion, the 442d lost more men than it rescued. But it pushed through, and Texas made every member of the regiment an honorary citizen of the Lone Star State.

So now Japanese-Americans have discovered the true meaning of democracy . . . regardless of "race, color or creed."

Note: Scattered incidents of discrimination still crop up, however. The latest was a refusal by Chicago cemeteries to bury Japanese-Americans—including the bodies of Japanese-American war heroes shipped home from Italian battlefields.

Merry-Go-Round

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has ordered the War Department to curtail purchases of Argentine beef, to favor the West instead. The order came after George Luckey of California urged Truman to let American cattlemen supply Army meat. Luckey is the California cattleman who handed Truman a 10-gallon hat during the inaugural parade . . . Interesting quote from George Kennan, State Department expert on Russia, at a recent meeting with Congressmen: "Too many people interpret the Russians by their experience with other people. You have to live with these people (the Russians) to know how they think. Then you know that the only thing that impresses them is firmness and power. They interpret being a good fellow as a sign of weakness." . . . Chief Pentagon spokesman for appropriations before the House Armed Services Committee recently was not Defense Secretary Forrestal but Prof. Dwight Eisenhower. Apparently Forrestal thought he was more popular . . . Just as big business claimed there was no need for regulating steel, Great Lakes Steel—subsidiary of National Steel—hiked the price of steel for Quonset huts 10 per cent.

Long-Shot Benton

DURING the recent political campaign, Bill Benton, former Assistant Secretary of State, made out personal checks to aid the campaigns of 18 of his friends in both political parties. They were all running for high public office.

Benton wasn't looking for any political pay-offs; in fact he put most of his money on candidates who were fighting a losing cause—President Truman, Chester Bowles and Adlai Stevenson. With the odds about 20-1 against his friends, Benton was considered a "sentimental sucker."

But when the political smoke cleared on the morning of November 3, Benton found that every one of his 18 long shots had won—some by the narrow margin of one-fourth of 1 per cent of the total vote.

One of Benton's friends who plays the horses did a little figuring last week. His conclusion: "If Bill had taken my advice and parlayed his 18 candidates, there wouldn't be a solvent gambler operating in the country."

Hunters' High Horse

REAR ADM. J. J. "JOCKO" CLARK pulled his rank the other day to hitch a free ride in a Navy plane from Quonsett Point, R. I., to Corpus Christi, Tex. He went not on official business, but to go hunting with friends.

It should be noted that the plane was making the flight anyway, but it stopped at Washington to pick up Clark's former naval aide, Herman Rosenblatt, now an attorney in New York City. As a Naval Reserve officer, Rosenblatt is entitled to ride in naval aircraft—if he is in uniform.

"Sure I was in uniform," Rosenblatt assured this column. "I wore a khaki shirt."

Compliments of Carnegie

PENNSYLVANIA'S Senator Frank Myers and California's handsome Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas, attending a Baltimore dinner under the auspices of Americans for Democratic Action, were surprised to find a fancy string ensemble playing at such a serious function. Many of the people running the dinner were also surprised, but said nothing.

Two hours after the dinner started, a woman rushed into the room and demanded of the orchestra leader: "Were you hired for the Dale Carnegie dinner?"

"Isn't this the Dale Carnegie dinner?" said the orchestra leader.

"No," replied the lady from the Dale Carnegie Institute, and almost dragged the musicians out by their ears.

The Career of Dr. Harry Stack Sullivan

D. C. Doctor Pitted Psychiatry Against War

By Otto Allen Will, Jr.

ON JANUARY 14, in Paris, there died a man referred to by a fellow American as "one of our important, largely unutilized, national resources." Dr. Harry Stack Sullivan, psychiatrist, teacher and searching student of human affairs, was in Europe to participate in an executive board meeting of the World Federation for Mental Health, in the development of which he had played an important role. For some years he had been ill with a severe disorder of the heart, and his sudden death at the age of 56 was not entirely unexpected by him or by those who knew him well.

Dr. Sullivan was an esteemed psychiatrist, an excellent therapist and clinician, an original and brilliant theoretician. His interests and thinking extended beyond the hospital, the physician's office, the classroom and the often narrowly defined limits of a medical specialty to include an active investigation of the group tensions that may be disastrously important factors in the initiation and continuance of international conflicts.

To facilitate the study of irrational motivations associated with such tensions, he promoted the collaboration of people in a variety of disciplines, becoming a colleague not only of the psychiatrist, but of the anthropologist, economist, sociologist, theologian and other workers in the long-neglected, rapidly expanding study of human relationships. His association with the World Federation for Mental Health was a natural development of these interests.

Worked With White

HARRY STACK SULLIVAN was born of Irish Catholic parents in Norwich, N. Y., in 1892. He early determined to become a physicist, but his interest in the behavior of things was supplanted by his increasing curiosity about people and their relationship with one another. He turned to the study of psychiatry and received his M.D. degree from the Chicago College of Medicine and Surgery in 1917.

For a time after graduation he worked in industrial medicine, in the Medical Corps of the United States Army in World War I, as a psychiatrist in the Public Health Institute and as United States Veterans Bureau liaison officer at St. Elizabeths Hospital here. There he came to know Dr. William Alanson White, leader in psychiatric education and investigation.

The next 17 years were spent in research and education. He was director of clinical research at the Sheppard and Enoch Pratt Hospital, Towson, Md., was associate professor of psychiatry at the University of Maryland School of Medicine, and for a short time was professor and head of the department of psychiatry at Georgetown University Medical School.

In 1940 he became the consultant in psychiatry to the director, Selective Service System. Of this work, Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey said to Dr. Sullivan: "Your energy, your vision and your knowledge have been appreciated by everyone familiar with your almost single-handed effort to energize a system, a profession and a nation to the necessity of understanding the importance of mentality and personality qualifications in the selection of registrants for military service."

Dr. Sullivan was first president of the William Alanson White Psychiatric Foundation, director and president of the Washington School of Psychiatry and editor of the journal "Psychiatry." In addition to membership in a number of medical and social science groups, he was a member of the Central Commission on World Citizenship and Mental Health of the International Preparatory Commission for the Third International Congress on Mental Health, of the Executive Board, World Federation for Mental Health, and served as consultant to the UNESCO Tensions Project. His writings are numerous, but to date only one of his books has been published—"Conceptions of Modern Psychiatry."

An Urgent Necessity

DR. SULLIVAN rejected the social philosophies of despair that described man as a relatively unalterable product of heredity and constitution, as the slave of vicious instincts leading to conflict with society, or as "naturally" hostile, perverse and sinful. Rather did he consider man as a most remarkably complex representation of his culture and experience, probably always falling tragically short of anything like a full realization of his potentialities.

In 1938, impressed by the rapidly growing threat of war, he said: "Man is far more a product of culture, of the forces that make up civilization, than he is a creature of the natural sciences. We need to know all we can about his heredity, physical make-up, nutrition and physiology. But even more important in these days of alarm and excursion, of international misdemeanor and crime, we must hurry to an understanding of man living as a person among others." Now, 10 years later, there is no lessening of this need for haste.

Psychiatry might be defined in part as the study of human loneliness and isolation. A common characteristic of so many of us in the world today is our guarded behavior with other human beings—as if we did not dare look closely at ourselves or our associates. Dr. Sullivan's life was largely devoted to the study of these crippling and costly isolating tendencies of modern man.

In 1933 he wrote: "We know so little about the persons with whom we spend our lives that nowadays we have no friends, only illusions . . . We go about with a great many people, with more than our forefathers, but they are careful about revealing anything, just as we are careful; consequently the other person is to us nothing more real than what we happen to imagine.

"The answer is that we have to create an almost new art—of dealing on a realistic basis with other people, of appraising human personality. So far that is the occupation of psychiatrists. But it should become the technique of everybody."

In the years at the Sheppard and Enoch Pratt Hospital Dr. Sullivan studied those frightened and suspicious human beings who have come of necessity to assume a most solitary way of life—the schizophrenics who populate the psychiatric hospitals or pass their lonely course unnoticed in their communities. He found that such people were disastrous products of their life experiences, and as such could be understood and often become subject to useful change under psychotherapy. Through these observations he was increasingly convinced of the importance of social factors in explaining the presence or absence of mental health, and took an active part in forwarding the collaboration of the physician and the social scientist.

Secondary Isolation

THE years from 1931 to 1939 were spent in New York City in the study of the so-called obsessional neurotics—persons frequently successful in terms of position, income and apparent social conformity but distant and remarkably restricted in their relations with others.

In all of these disorders of living, the central problem was manifesting itself as isolation secondary to man's chronic misapprehension of himself and his fellow. To Dr. Sullivan, psychiatry was becoming the study of "interpersonal relations" and of the role played by anxieties in disrupting and distorting the development of satisfactory relationships between human beings. "The purpose of psychiatry," he wrote, "is the understanding of living to the end that it may be facilitated."

Later years were spent in the study of irrational factors in group behavior and the possibility of modifying these as a means of promoting international peace and understanding. The study of the forces isolating men was leading to consideration of the forces isolating nations.

In June, 1948, in Paris, Dr. Sullivan, with a group of eminent social scientists from several countries, meeting under the auspices of UNESCO, issued a joint statement which concluded: "The social scientist can help make clear to people of all nations that the freedom and welfare of one are ultimately bound up with the freedom and welfare of all; that the world need not continue to be a place where men must either kill or be killed. Effort in behalf of one's own group can become compatible with effort in behalf of humanity."

Dr. Harry Stack Sullivan lived in Bethesda, Md., in recent years, but he had broken through the barriers and was at home wherever man lived. He was an honest and often caustic critic, a stimulating leader and a dearly beloved friend. He did not fear life or his fellows. He died in an effort to promote further the greater recognition and more adequate use of the world's most neglected natural resource—man.

'Fever' Heralds Crime

By Alton L. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Reporter.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—The best way to keep kids in your town from crime and delinquency is to spot the first danger signals of emotional fever.

Your eyes can be the thermometer to detect these signs. When they appear, get a doctor. Act against incipient emotional sickness as you would against a fever that might be a forewarning of a bad cold, measles or flu.

This advice comes from two experts in the study of crime. The basic cause of crime, they hold, is emotional illness. It drives people to criminal or antisocial acts, even when they don't know they're being driven, or why.

The experts are Dr. Ralph S. Banay, psychiatrist and director of research on social deviations, Columbia Universty, and Edwin J. Lukas, executive director of the Society for the Prevention of Crime.

This approach, they say, would do far more to control crime than the burning of comic books, banning gangster or sexy movies, punishing parents of delinquents or abolishing slums.

The commonest danger signals to look for, say Dr. Banay and Lukas, are:

Continued aggressiveness, or excessive shyness. Hostility. Hatred that grows like cancer. Habitual lying, or cheating in school. Willful disobedience. Fire-setting. Stammering and stuttering. Sexual experimentation beyond normal curiosity. Complaints of vague aches and pains.

These are fever signs only if they continue. Any child may show some of them at different times.

They start because the child feels unloved, rejected, ashamed, ridiculed, hurt by indifference or brutality or for kindred reasons, Dr. Banay said.

He once studied 100 children, 7 to 17 years old, who had committed murders. Each one was emotionally sick, he found.

Criminals won't admit that they are emotionally sick. They would rather admit being criminals. For the public thinks of people as either sane or insane, with no shades of mental health in between. The public thinks of mental illness as a stigma. Actually, there is no more stigma to mental or emotional illness than to tuberculosis or other diseases.

If children show these early signs of emotional illness, it doesn't mean they are bound to become delinquents.

"Everyone has a varying degree of psychological resistance, just as he has physical resistance to bacterial infections," Dr. Banay says. "Some will be able to compensate for their needs in socially-approved ways. They may become neurotic, but not antisocial."

Lurid comic books, gangster movies and other influences can affect the susceptible child. Bad environment can have the same effect. But the great majority of children in poor areas never become delinquent or criminal.

There are practical steps that can be taken now to combat delinquency.

"In schools, we examine children's teeth and strive for dental health," Dr. Banay says. "But it would be far better to have trained psychiatrists or psychologists make annual examinations of children's mental and emotional health, and to bring treatment to those who need it."

"One of the greatest needs is better parents," Lukas declares. "It takes skill to be a good parent. Few people learn the job in time. We need to start training children in adolescence to become skillful parents. The best time to start is in high school."

Matter of Fact

Swedes Fear Finland Occupation

By Stewart Alsop

THERE have been two major events in the past week—Josef Stalin's "peace offensive" and the decision by Norway to join the North Atlantic Pact, thus refusing to knuckle under to Soviet pressure. The meaning of these conspicuous events can be better understood against the background of what has been happening, most inconspicuously, in Carlsbad, Czechoslovakia, and Stockholm, Sweden.

The pressure which the Soviets applied to Norway took the form of an official note addressed to the Norweigian Foreign Office. The note was, in effect, a formal warning to Norway not to join the North Atlantic Pact, a warning which the Norwegians have courageously disregarded. It can now be reported on good authority that a less formal but much more tough and specific warning has also been delivered to the Swedes.

Soviet representatives in Stockholm have bluntly told the Swedes that Swedish adherence to the Atlantic Pact would be regarded in Moscow as an "aggressive act." Moreover, the Russians have warned that the most probable Soviet reaction to this aggressive act would be full Soviet occupation of Finland.

Britain Has a Stake

THERE is no solid information to indicate that any actual preparations have been made by the Russians to carry out this threat. Few preparations would be necessary, to be sure, since by the terms of the peace treaty the Russians already have a military stranglehold on Finland. But the threat is taken so seriously in Stockholdm that the Swedes deeply fear that independent Norwegian adherence to the pact, which now seems definitely in prospect, may cause the Russians to carry out their threat. This would place Sweden in a terrifying military position.

The Russian threat may be wholly empty, as Russian threats, notably to the Iranians, have proved in the past. Full Soviet occupation of Finland would be an enormously dangerous step, since it would clearly break the peace treaty with Finland, and Britain as well as Russia (though not the United States) is a signatory to the treaty. But that the threat was made at all suggests how seriously the Kremlin takes the North Atlantic Pact.

Further evidence pointing in the same direction is to be found in the rally which has been going on in Carlsbad, the famous Czechoslovak spa. Andrei Vishinsky, the Kremlin's hyperthyroid troubleshooter, was originally scheduled to preside over this rally. But the most reliable information indicates that Vishinsky has in fact suffered a genuine and complete nervous breakdown. He is believed to have been removed from the Carlsbad Sanitarium immediately after his presence there was reported.

However, Georgei Zarubin, Soviet Ambassador to Britain, is known to have gone to Carlsbad. There are unconfirmed reports that he either has been or soon will be joined by Andrei Gromyko and by a Soviet marshal. A Polish delegation, believed to be headed by Polish Foreign Minister Zigmund Modzelewski, has joined the rally, and there is a similar Czech delegation.

Bitter Dose for Czechs

ONE OF the assignments of Zarubin, who was involved in last year's coup in Czechoslovakia, is reportedly to settle the row which has broken out in Prague between the "illiterate" faction of Czech Communists, headed by President Gottwald, and the "activist" faction, headed by Rudolf Slansky. Slansky is already considered the real ruler in Prague and it is possible that Zarubin will order a purge of Gottwald and his allies.

But the main purpose of the Carlsbad rally is to dragoon the Czechs and Poles into accepting eastern Germany as a full-fledged partner and "people's democracy." The Czechs and Poles are not likely to accept the Germans as political brothers with good grace; one Czech Communist told this reporter last spring, "You can't trust any German—even the German Communists are fascists under the skin."

But the step undoubtedly appears necessary to Moscow, as a prelude to setting up an "Eastern European Union." Such a union, to embrace the entire satellite area, including eastern Germany, is expected to be the Kremlin's answer to the North Atlantic Pact, if the current "peace offensive" fails either to break up the pact or to reverse the policy of the western powers in Germany.

Both of these moves, the threat to Scandinavia and the rally at Carlsbad, are direct consequences of the North Atlantic Pact. The pact in turn is the consequence of Soviet policy since the war and is designed to prevent the Kremlin from achieving its ambition of dominating all of Europe. Neither threats nor "peace offensives" can be allowed to divert the United States and the countries of western Europe from this purpose.

The Gallup Poll

Health Insurance at $3 a Month

By George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

WITHIN the next few weeks, hearings are scheduled to start in Congress on the national health insurance bill. Bitterly opposed by the American Medical Association, which is raising a special fund to fight the measure, medical insurance promises to be one of the major controversies of the Truman "Fair Deal."

At this stage of the fight, approximately three out of every five of the Nation's voters have heard or read about the idea of Government health insurance, Nationwide questioning of voters shows.

The persons interviewed said they would be willing to pay, on the average, approximately $3 a month if they could be assured of complete personal medical and hospital care. Presumably they would be willing to pay somewhat more than this for medical and hospital coverage of the entire family, which is the plan envisioned in the Senate bill.

So far as the medical profession is concerned, a major issue in the controversy is whether health insurance ought to be handled by the Government or by private medical organizations similar to those now offering hospital insurance. Future surveys by the institute will test public attitudes on that point.

12 Per Cent Free

IN TODAY'S survey, the following question was put to all persons, whether they had heard of the proposed national health insurance program or not:

"If you were assured complete medical and hospital care (excluding dental care) for yourself, how much would you be willing to pay per month for such service?"

The following table summarizes the results. The median average of all sums named was $3.10.

Under $1 a month	2%
$2-2.99	15
$3-3.99	10
$4-4.99	5
$5-7.99	18
$8 or more	9
Not willing to pay anything	12
Don't know	17

The survey is not a test of the degree to which the voters approve or disapprove of Government health insurance, but simply a test of what the individuals questioned might be willing to pay for such a service if it were offered.

The medical insurance program proposed in Congress envisions a monthly rate, which would include the families of persons enrolled, of up to about $54 a year or $4.50 a month on the first $3600 of wages, with the employer paying an equal amount. Discussion of the exact sums is still going on.

Physician Choice

FUTURE surveys by the institute are scheduled to probe public attitudes on many other aspects of the proposed program; to find out, for example, how well informed the average American is about the medical services he would get under the program if passed, and whether he thinks he would have free choice of physicians to treat him.

Meanwhile, a point of considerable interest in the medical profession is how much the average American now spends a year on medical and hospital services.

According to an estimate by the American Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, the per capita expenditure in 1947 for personal medical and hospital care was $38.74. According to a study by Frank G. Dickinson of the American Medical Association, the Nation's total health bill for 1946 was 5.6 billion dollars, which would be about $40 per capita. These figures are not confined to doctor and hospital services only, but include drugs and dental care.

Fishers' 'Lobby' Clicks in Japan

TOKYO (AP).—Japan's uneducated fishermen have given their legislators a lesson in politics. The result is a law eliminating wartime control associations which tightly regimented the one million coastal fishing workers. The new act also authorizes organization of cooperatives to help finance fishing.

Occupation officials said Japanese officials were pushed into writing and passing the act by a bombardment of letters and telegrams from fishing communities. They said also that it was the only important piece of reform legislation which Japanese have largely originated and carried through by themselves since the occupation began. Lieut. Col. Hubert G. Schenck, chief of the occupation natural resources section, attributed passage to a new awareness that a bloc of one million potential votes could not be ignored.

The act eliminates 43 prefectural federations and 2911 village associations in which membership was compulsory and which placed fishing under bureaucratic authority.

A Newswoman Writes of Capital With Warmth of a Letter Home

By J. R. Wiggins

WASHINGTON BY-LINE, by Bess Furman. Knopf. $3.50.

IT IS hard to decide whether this book will be enjoyed most by people who know a lot about Washington or by those who know little about it. Both should like it.

To those who know a lot about the Capital, reading this book will be like rummaging through their own notes and diaries. Each of Bess Furman's recollections will stir a host of associated memories. Each of her word pictures of an event will prompt the reader to recall the point of vantage from which he witnessed the same occurrence.

For those who know less of the Capital and the events that have transpired in it in the last 20 years, reading this book will be a rewarding experience. The flavor of the period is captured in its pages. There is a bit of autobiography in it, but not enough vertical pronoun to get in the way of the view of events.

This is a piece of eyewitness historical writing of the most valuable kind. You can see and hear and feel the exciting episodes of the period just as the writer saw and heard and felt them. While it is history of a sort, the book is as warm and personal as a letter to the homefolks.

BESS FURMAN
. . . She got what she wanted

Seldom Critical

THERE aren't many "inside" stories in this volume. It does not pretend to give you the lowdown, behind the scenes, unrevealed background of events. It deals, for the most part, with things about which Bess Furman, as a correspondent, already has written thousands of words for newspaper readers.

The author, as AP correspondent, syndicate writer, Government public relations employe and member of the New York Times Washington Bureau, had good vantage points from which to view our life and times. For the most part, what she saw pleased and thrilled her. She found something worth praising in most of the individuals she observed in public life. Just a trace of resentment and regret at the tactics of some public person appears here and there.

The mildest sort of criticism of Jim Farley is allowed to intrude into an otherwise warm and cheerful tale. The only moment of real bitterness and the only vestige of real reproach comes in the description of her venture into wartime Government public relations work. Most of her colleagues will find even this soft indictment an example of restraint.

Bess Furman doesn't formally rate public figures in the order of their greatness. It is pretty easy to believe, however, that if she did score them, Mrs. Roosevelt would be pretty near the top. It is less difficult to perceive the former First Lady's real political stature than it was at intervals during her White House tenure. It is clear that Bess Furman was immediately impressed by Eleanor Roosevelt and plain that she never has changed her estimate.

THE account of Mrs. Roosevelt's efforts to deal with Washington's slums and alley dwellings, inadequate schools and insufficient hospital and health facilities is well told. She was finally driven to observe: "I never knew a place where things moved more slowly." One gets the impression that they would have moved a little more swiftly if she had possessed authority.

One of the closing paragraphs reflects very well the spirit and philosophy of this entire book. Summarizing her 20 years in the Capital, Bess Furman writes:

"Well, I got what I wanted, and I wanted what I got. Many people complain about Washington on the ground that here it is impossible to see the forest for the trees. This is in a measure true. But it is also true that the place to study wildlife is undoubtedly in the forest.

"Here one can completely understand why no person is immune from the long arm of politics. I have learned that politics deals with an onlooker as Nature deals with a vacuum. Here I see the thousand and one ways in which the Federal Government reaches down into the lives of the people. I see also the equal pressures that the people put upon the various aspects of the Federal Government.

"I see how the man in the White House is checkmated or bolstered by the men on Capitol Hill. I witness the interplay between President and departments; and between Congress and departments. Thus national and international policies are made by an ever-shifting cast of characters."

Music of Forgotten Orchestras

Fragile Novel Brings Back a Pleasant Past

THE SPRINGS. By Anne Goodwin Winslow. Knopf. 227 pp. $2.50.

THE QUESTION may well arise how a woman born in Tennessee and reared near Memphis could have escaped every social, racial and economic problem throughout her life and have lived to write such delicate and unperturbed novels.

But in an era of brawling realism, slashing satire and Messianic propaganda, it is indeed a relief to spend a few hours with a woman of culture whose memories are as satisfying as violin music heard by moonlight.

This is Anne Goodwin Winslow's fifth book of semiautobiographical fiction. The plot is ephemeral and the characters need the willing aid of the reader to become three dimensional. Yet so haunting is this aquatint of life at "The Springs" (in the days when "Tell Me Pretty Maiden" was a daring song for a swain to sing) that few who read will quickly forget.

In simplest outline, this is the story of Alice Macgowan and her sister Rose, near whose home (presumably in Tennessee) bubble the springs where both girls had dabbled and waded. Promoters discover the waters to be medicinal, thus changing the lives of the incredibly naive, romantic and gracious girls.

ANNE GOODWIN WINSLOW
. . . Recaptures a mood

The Deerings from Chicago come to manage a resort hotel built beside the springs, and new forces and characters wander into the consciousness of the two innocents.

An extracurricular romance and "justifiable" shooting touch them lightly and briefly when a married woman falls in love with a local Romeo who dies for his indiscretion.

Three men mean much to Alice: A young engineer; an impoverished and perceptive young Southern gentleman, and finally the Englishman she marries. Readers may feel that Alice should have married the second of this trio rather than the third, since it was he who first made her aware of the beauties of nature and of poetry. But the author has plotted otherwise.

It is surprising that with such an obvious plot the book can seem important. Its value lies in its overtones.

Strains of music from forgotten dance orchestras, leaves blown across the deserted veranda, and modes and moods of an almost forgotten era haunt this novel of manners which is as fragile as bird song and may prove as enduring.—S. N.

Kinsey Translation A 'Smash' in France

NYHT NEWS SERVICE

PARIS, Feb. 5.—In the country where plain talking and writing about the facts of life is conventional, a translation of the "Kinsey Report" has made what French bookshops call a "bon depart."

This good sales departure, according to the trade, makes the study of the sex life of the American male look like a promising best-seller. The first week's demand for it has been lively in all the Paris bookshops.

Proprietors, accustomed to handling books that never could be printed in the United States, did not regard the "Report" as a racy document.

"There is a general interest in all American things," they explained. "Frenchmen want to know the Americans better."

Hutchinson Creates A Fantastic World

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE. By R. C. Hutchinson. Rinehart. 658 pp. $3.75.

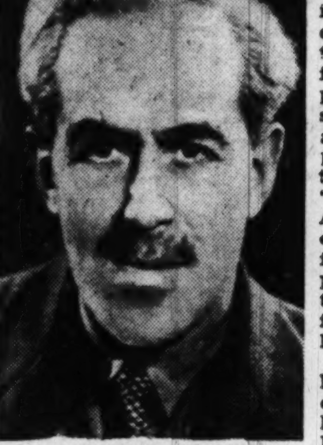
I HAVE been lost for some days now in a world as remote from my own as the one Alice found behind the looking glass.

Balzac and Dickens created such separate worlds. So did a very few other great and fecund novelists. But seldom in recent times has any author held me spellbound by such obvious grotesqueries made pulsatingly real through craftsmanship and wile.

In simplest outline, "Elephant and Castle" is the story of Beauty and the Beast. A charming, well-bred London girl pursues and marries an East End moron, presumably to civilize him. Their tragic mesalliance culminates in a brutal crime. In the end, the reader is not sure which of these two creatures is really the beast and which the beauty.

Such a plot sounds utterly improbable in stark skeletal form. It is improbable, even when bolstered by numerous subplots and (literally) 100 characters, every one of whom is three dimensional.

But seldom if ever in these 655 closely packed pages does the reader even momentarily evade the magic of this super-thriller. I defy the most sophisticated cynic to start this book and then fail to finish it.



R. C. HUTCHINSON
100 three-dimensional characters

Fantastic Wedding

YET there are scenes in this novel overdone to the point of burlesque or melodrama. Three that come to mind are:

The fashionable wedding of Armoral (Susie) Cepinnier and her illiterate ape, Gian (Toughie) Ardree, attended not only by Armoral's embarrassed friends among the gentry but also by Gian's fantastic, gross mother and pitiful father and well meaning, loutish friends from the East End.

The birth of Armoral's first child in Gian's filthy home, with reeking midwives, an Indian quack and a fashionable Harley Street physician in attendance, while a sister-in-law has hysterics, the grandfather and his friends get reeling drunk and the doctors threaten to fight with their fists.

And finally the death of Maria, Gian's mother, stroking her pet chickens and slitting their throats with barbaric satisfaction.

Hogarthian is the word for this satire of appalling manners. Gothic is the term for this continuous chamber of horrors. Rococo is the adjective for the plethora of interscrolled plot.

In fact this novel is virtually unreviewable, since it would take at least ten thousand words to summarize briefly the plot and subplots, another ten thousand to do thumbnail sketches of the important characters and ten thousand more to explain how the author makes any of this witches' brew into believable fiction.

Dickensian Insight

IT IS probably enough to say that Hutchinson has taken the roofs from the houses of London as Balzac took the roofs from the houses of Paris. That without Dickens' sentimentality, he has shown modern England as Dickens showed nineteenth century England. That he has much of Trollope's interest in people, something of Doestoevsky's mania for studying crime and punishment and a little of Tolstoy's universal human sympathy (to know all is to forgive all).

Hutchinson puts reverse English on the common device of making unlovable characters lovable as the novel progresses. In Susie, he paints an admirable young woman who, when examined carefully, is a villainess—with redeeming characteristics. Our sympathy at the end is with her homicidal husband Gian.

Perhaps the only real clumsiness in the book is the plot twist involving Gian in two crimes he never committed and hanging him for the second one. That is carrying coincidence too far even for a Hutchinson novel.

But such is the author's power that few readers will begin to criticize this structural flaw until hours after reading the last page of the novel.

It is hard to decide whether this should be hailed as the "one-man renaissance in English fiction" as some critics across the Atlantic have claimed. But this much is certain; it contains the elements of great story telling long lost by anaemic moderns—the ability to induce "complete suspension of disbelief."

Notes on the Margin

By Lee Grove

TWO Washington authors, both published by Knopf, will be guests of honor at afternoon "coming out" parties Monday.

The Francis Scott Key Book Shop is having an autographing party for Mrs. Anne Goodwin Winslow, occasioned by her new novel, "The Springs."

Miss Bess Furman will be guest of honor at a party at the Arts Club to announce "Washington By-Line," her story of life as seen by a newswoman. Invitations to the party cleverly reproduce the jacket of the book.

Miss Furman's lively book, incidentally, in the preface contains a neat description of an institution not unknown in writing circles: "The Library of Congress, where all that is past is present." It has the ring of a toast, a toast that would have pleased the heart of Thomas Jefferson, that great believer in the library.

Apropos of the Library, anyone interested in the larger aspects of copyright law will be interested in Librarian of Congress Luther Evans' lecture on "Copyright and the Public Interest," given at the New York Public Library and reprinted in its January bulletin.

Spate of Nostalgia

IF TWO books constitute more than a coincidence, there is probably a trend developing in anthologies of juvenile magazines. Random House brought out an anthology edited by Henry Steele Commager of selections from the St. Nicholas Magazine in time for Christmas. Now Crowell is announcing that Franklin M. Reck is editing an anthology from the American Boy. (Let's see, there's the Youth's Companion left, and . . .)

Farrar, Straus is bringing out another novel, "The Valley of St. Ives," by Arthur Herbert Bryant, former Alexandria, Va., resident, on February 18. Bryant, who attended the University of Virginia, served in the Navy during the war and is now living in New Jersey. His earlier book was "Double Image," published in 1946.

The first annual volume of the Papers of the Bibliographical Society of the University of Virginia has just come out, by the way. An exceptionally handsome volume physically, it is edited by Fredson Bowers, associate professor of English at the university, who also contributes a technical article to it.

Appropriately, the father of the university, Jefferson, is the subject of the opening two articles, by Joseph M. Carriere, professor of French, and Jessie Ryon Lucke, a graduate student at the university.

The Folger Shakespeare Library staff is also well represented with an article on three cleverly pirated, eighteenth century editions of Shakespeare plays, detected by Giles E. Dawson, and an informative account by James G. McManaway of the Folger's unique copy of Sandys' "The First Five Books of Ovids Metamorphosis," 1621, a book that was thought nonexistent until its discovery a year ago.

Dr. McManaway also says that the 1626 edition of the book was not the "first published verse in the English language written on the mainland of North America." The priority goes to a ballad, "Good Newes From Virginia," written two or three years earlier. The "Good Newes" featured massacre by the Indians.

Remember Truman Capote, the young man on the lounge? Random House is following up his miasmic "Other Voices, Other Rooms," with a collection of his stories, "A Tree of Night," due February 14. They have a new photograph to go with it, too.

A Personable Tractor

MRS. EVELYN LEVOW GREENBERG of 4602 Calvert rd., College Park, Md., is the author of an unusual juvenile, "The Little Tractor Who Traveled to Israel," published by Behrman House.

Mrs. Greenberg, whose husband is Rabbi Meyer Greenberg, director of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation at the University of Maryland, dedicated the book to their two sons, Saadia, 5, and Jeremiah, 2, and says "they are very proud of the dedication."

The story was originally made up to tell the children, and the tractor was made the hero because "while I gather other children are more imaginative, mine are interested only in mechanical things. After it was written," Mrs. Greenberg says, "we found the little tractor's personality much like Saadia's."

RAISED EYEBROWS DEPARTMENT, as The New Yorker would say. According to the newspapers, one of the two Bibles on which President Truman took his inaugural oath was a facsimile of the Gutenberg Bible purchased by the Independence, Mo., Chamber of Commerce for $5000.

Heartbreaking Memoir of a Boy

DEATH BE NOT PROUD: A Memoir. By John Gunther. Harper. 261 pp. $2.50.

WHEN John and Frances Gunther's only child Johnny died of tumor of the brain at 17, the world lost a potential genius.

Johnny's IQ was fantastically high. He had already composed interesting music and given recitals of his own compositions. He had progressed far enough in nuclear physics to be in correspondence with Einstein and was making independent speculations in the general realm of the "unitary field" theory. And up to the day of his death he was performing far advanced chemical experiments, well aware that he had little time to finish "all the work he had to do in this world."

JOHN GUNTHER

The death of a Keats or a Rupert Brooke at the high tide of young manhood has been universally conceded to be tragic. But at least they left behind them poems that will be read while the English language is spoken.

Johnny Gunther, who would have entered Harvard in the autumn of 1947, left behind only a memory in the minds of his father and mother, his friends and the 32 doctors, including some of the world's greatest surgeons, who worked desperately to save his life.

It is this memory which John Gunther has attempted to preserve in a memoir heart breaking in its quiet simplicity and restraint.

Began With Stiff Neck

IN MANY ways Johnny was a normal child. He collected stamps, sailed a boat, swam well, was sometimes sloppy about his clothes, loved his father and mother and was deeply disturbed by their divorce. His letters show him to have been a thoughtful and loving boy with more than social adequacy in all human relationships.

When a sudden stiff neck was diagnosed as evidence of brain tumor, John and Frances Gunther rushed him from Deerfield (where he was in his third year) to the Neurological Institute at Medical Center in New York. There, in a dangerous and delicate operation lasting for more than six hours, half of a tumor the size of an orange, was taken from his brain. Removing the rest would have been immediately fatal.

Then for 14 months of nightmare, during which Johnny finished his work at Deerfield and progressed brilliantly with his independent research, the frantic parents fought to save a life which could not be saved. Virtually every top specialist on brain tumor in the world was consulted. Painful and even dangerous new methods of treatment were tried.

He Had Fortitude

AND through it all, Johnny's letters and his diary show that his major concern was to keep his parents from worrying and to get on with his "work."

Despite the devout teachings of his mother, Johnny did not believe in life after death. Nor was he unaware of the probable fatality of his malady. Yet he did not complain or whine or despair. He "took" it.

This memoir, in less loving, intelligent or restrained hands, could have been unendurable. It could easily have been in bad taste. It could have seemed masochistic.

It is none of these things. It is, instead, a book which should make every one of us say when we look at our children, "Thank God they're alive."

In this little volume (all the proceeds of which will be donated to cancer research for children) John Gunther has done what may prove to be his best and most difficult piece of reporting.—S. N.

Two Outspoken Women Debate Faults of U. S.

Pearl S. Buck and Eslanda Goode Robeson, pictured at work on their "talk book," are both violent in their feminism

AMERICAN ARGUMENT. By Pearl S. Buck with Eslanda Goode Robeson. John Day. 206 pp. $3.

THIS is the fourth and most important of the "talk books" in which Pearl S. Buck seeks to lay bare the fundamental social and political problems of our time.

Previously she has talked about Russia, about Germany and about mass education with suitable conversationalists. This time she has raised the discourse to the level of a spirited debate with Eslanda Goode Robeson, wife of Paul Robeson, the singer.

Both are strong-minded, outspoken women—passionate feminists, internationalists, believers in racial equality. Both agree that America has somehow missed its opportunity to provide the spiritual leadership expected of us in 1949. But on several fundamentals they differ radically.

'Good' Dictators

PEARL BUCK believes in evolution. Mrs. Robeson seems to believe in revolution.

Pearl Buck hates violence of all kinds, including war and capital punishment. Mrs. Robeson also "hates" violence but is in favor of liquidating "mad dogs" of reaction in any society.

Pearl Buck admits that she could not live in a country of secret police, slave-labor camps and dictatorship. Mrs. Robeson says quite passionately that she would prefer dictatorship if the dictator were a "good" man and if the regime honored minorities and spread social benefits.

Both Pearl Buck and Eslanda Robeson feel deeply (from opposite sides of the color curtain) that Jim Crow laws, lynchings, economic and social discrimination and other forms of persecution are corrupting America and seriously menacing our relationship with millions of non-Caucasian people who will eventually by sheer weight of numbers rule the globe.

Pearl Buck is concerned, sympathetic, conscience-stricken. Eslanda Robeson is bitter, assured, hopeful.

Family Trouble

BUT the talk begins to get pretty strong on page 189:

Pearl Buck: "Can't you see any advantage in being an American?"

Eslanda Robeson: "No, but I am an American, as American as anyone else in this country . . . It's like being a member of a family; you don't have to like your family if they aren't nice people . . . When Americans treat me and my people like Americans, then I'll like it and find advantage—and pride—in being American—not before!"

As Pearl Buck points out, if this college-educated chemist, pretty, healthy and wealthy, married to a fabulously successful singer feted throughout the world, feels that bitterly about the way her race has been treated, how must the very poor and really suffering members of the minorities feel?

This would have been a stronger and better balanced book if Pearl Buck had vigorously defended the best aspects of American culture or vigorously attacked the worst aspects of Soviet culture. It would have been a better book if at least one of the women had not been so violent in her feminism. It could have been much better organized and better written.

Incidentally, it might be well to remind both authors that any book which criticized Russia as this one criticizes America, would have landed its collaborators in a Soviet slave labor camp (had the manuscript been penned in Moscow).

Good, stimulating and frequently irritating talk by a pair of women who are about as "submerged" as the Queen Mary.—

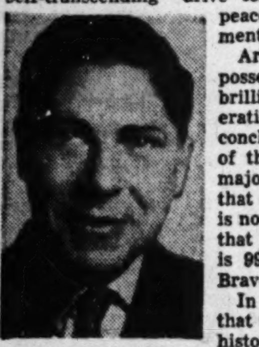
A New Evolutionary Theory

The Calamity Howlers Rebuffed

By Sterling North

INSIGHT AND OUTLOOK. By Arthur Koestler. MacMillan. 442 pp. $5.

WILL the egoistic "self-assertive" drive of Western civilization destroy the world in one vast atomic conflagration? Or will the cooperative "self-transcending" drive lead us eventually to peace and world government?



ARTHUR KOESTLER

Arthur Koestler, who possesses one of the most brilliant minds of our generation, has come to the conclusion that "survival of the fittest" is not the major road to survival, that Spengler's pessimism is not wholly justified and that Freud's "death wish" is 99 per cent nonsense. Bravo!

In fact, Koestler insists that throughout the whole history of life on this planet (from the unicellular plants to Einstein) the social, self-transcending drive is the force which has assured survival of the group as a whole.

On the other hand, the self-assertive drive of rampant individualism is rapidly propelling us toward obliteration of the human race.

The supreme importance of this new and all-inclusive evolutionary theory lies in the fact that it gives intellectual ammunition to the creative, scientific and moral forces in our civilization working toward permanent peace and world government. It may yet wipe the cosmic sneer from the face of the disenchanted.

The cheap, cynical pseudo-intellectuals who have been quoting Darwin and Freud out of context and have been parroting Spengler and Pareto without reading their works, have just about convinced themselves and the rest of despairing humanity that the jig is up.

Now comes Koestler with a brilliant refutation. Drawing upon his extensive reading and research in psychology, neurology, biology, ethics and aesthetics, this rational young man shows us how the self-transcending activities of the scientist, the artist and the philosopher may yet save us from the fanatical self-assertion of the ruthless leaders driving us toward war.

For we are making progress! It is incontestable that human history shows consistent movement from the smaller social unit to the larger and even in this century approaches a peaceful planetary federation.

This book is not wholly or even principally political. It analyzes the self-assertive quality of laughter and the self-transcending quality of tears and tragedy. It shows how "bisociation" affects all forms of writing, painting, drama, music and the other arts. It explores science and the evolution of science. It looks into our biological past and future. It studies psychology in terms of neurology and vice versa.

But it always returns to the major ambivalence—the twin drives dramatically counterpoised which on the one hand may destroy us, or, on the other hand, may save our species.

Readers should spend not hours, but days, weeks and even months with this thoughtful, well-integrated, "self-transcending" volume. It is not easy reading, but it is consistently informed, luminous and stimulating. And it is undoubtedly one of the most important contributions to human thought in several decades.

Jacket design for "Queen Street Story," by Anne Paterson (Doubleday, $2.75). A novel of Philadelphia in the 1880s, it is the story of a young doctor just out of medical school, told against a waterfront background. The author, now an assistant editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, once was secretary to a psychiatrist

In a Nutshell

THE MADRONE TREE, by David Duncan. Macmillan. 230 pp. $3.

THE MADRONE TREE'S outer bark is reddish pink, but this scales off to leave an undercoat which is satin-smooth and tan—like skin. It grows to 60 or 70 feet, but the lonely specimen around which Duncan builds his eerie story is dwarfed by the grove of giant redwoods surrounding it. He also builds his story around a frustrated schoolteacher, Edward Spence, the only commonplace name in the book. The most conservative nomenclature in the rest of the gallery of eccentric characters is that of the Rev. Manley Foxx, the preacher who borrows from Zorosatrianism and demonology to bind the remote California village in a straitjacket of superstition. Duncan's tale contains a mystery, but essentially it is a psychological study of the effects of primitive tabus on a small community. The fruit is perversion—flagellation, to be specific. A good horror story which also ought to fill the bill for devotees of psychological mystery fiction.

Jacket design for "The Madrone Tree," by David Duncan

IF I WERE YOU, by Julian Green. Harper $3.

THOMAS MANN'S latest has hardly had time to gather dust, and here is Dr. Faustus back again, in the person of a poor, ailing and dissatisfied clerk in a French village. He wants to write a novel, and feels that he could do it if only he were in someone else's shoes. A stranger gives him a magic formula which will enable him to move into the body of anyone he wishes, and he starts on a dizzy journey through the hearts and minds of his fellowmen. Green's mature and confident writing sustains the sense of mystery and eeriness to the end, and in place the unbelievable becomes uncomfortably real.

THE WAR OF 1812, by Francis F. Beirne. Dutton. $5.

AMERICANS made fools as well as heroes of themselves in the War of 1812, Beirne makes plain in this first-rate story. We once had two generals in the same command. Our militiamen quit in the heat of battle if their short enlistments happened to run out at that moment. President Madison packed two pistols and rode dauntlessly out to the defense of Washington, with Secretary of State Monroe as scout. And an American ship fell to the enemy after its crew went on an all-night binge on captured wine. But thanks to the Constitution, the Wasp and the United States, we made a fine showing at sea.

THE FAMILY ON GRAMERCY PARK, by Henry Noble MacCracken. Scribner. $2.75.

"NIBS" MacCRACKEN'S father was chancellor of New York University, and Nibs was sternly advised to stay within the home preserves of ultra-respectable Gramercy Park and play London Bridge. Nibs preferred to play with, and fight with, the "gang" around on Third ave. They battled with sticks, stones, snowballs, fists and feet, and these memoirs of a boy of 8, 10 and 12 years are mostly written in the slangy English they use. The author's one resolution was to grow up to be a postman, or at least not to follow in his father's footsteps. Beginning in 1915, MacCracken was president of Vassar for 32 years.

FROM DAY TO DAY, by Odd Nansen. Putnam. $5.

SON of the Norwegian explorer, the author was arrested in 1942 and held as a court hostage at Oslo, Tromsoe and, finally, Sachsenhausen in Germany, until May, 1945. This is his diary, written for his wife alone and often at great risk. It is not a war story, stressing adventure and bravery or even misery and death. It is about the persistence of humane instincts even behind barbed wire, about brotherly love that will not be bludgeoned into extinction. It is the only thing of its kind to come out of World War II.

MAC'S CROFT, by Wendy Wood. Dutton. $3.

WENDY AND MAC, parents of grown children, move back in middle age to the Scottish highlands where they grew up. They learn to love the isolated farm that dips down to the Atlantic, and in this charming record they make you love it, too. The animals on the place are their comedians, and occasionally their tragedians. Wendy and Mac go whelking; they thatch the roof; they go to town for a sale or a dance. This book is rugged and healthy and flavorsome fare, a lot different from the dream houses and chicken ranches that find their way into print from the American countryside.

Rivers Lend Their Surge To a Volume

EARTH'S GRANDEST RIVERS. By Ferdinand C. Lane. Doubleday. 305 pp. $3.50.

FERDINAND C. LANE, the best popularizer of geography since Van Loon, here chooses for his subject what is probably the most romantic physical feature of our planet, our great rivers.

Having previously explored and written books on the vast salt seas and the world's great lakes, he now turns to flowing water, which by very definition is more dramatic.

The book is crammed with information, much of which will be new to the lay reader. I did not know, for instance:

That 15 of the Amazon's tributaries are more than 1000 miles long and one is 3000 miles in length.

That the ice-choked Yenisei, crossing half of Asia (like its sister rivers, the Lena and the Ob), is far greater than our own Mississippi, and despite the frigid wastes it traverses on its way to the Arctic, is becoming an important highway of commerce for Soviet Siberia.

That the Mackenzie, which drains two lakes larger than Lake Erie, cuts through coal seams which have been blazing since the man for whom it is named first descended its icy rapids.

That the drainage area of the Congo, second only to the Amazon, receives enough water to fill a basin the size of Lake Michigan each year.

Mr. Lane is not content to give his readers merely geographical river lore. He offers besides a refresher course in geology and a sprightly series of essays on regional history.

Thus, in telling of China's rivers he traces their dragon-like windings through 4000 years of Chinese culture. And he furnishes similar integrated material for the Nile, the Amazon, the Congo, the Mississippi, the Volga, the Rhine, the Danube and other arteries of commerce and culture traversing six continents.

Unless you are among the purists who scorn Wells, Van Loon, Will Durant and other hard-working and talented popularizers, you will enjoy both the well-organized substance and the fluid style of this book. It surges along from page to page like the rivers it concerns. A thoroughly delightful volume.

Beveridge Finds Role For Private Charity

By John J. Corson

VOLUNTARY ACTION, A Report on Methods of Social Advance, By Lord Beveridge. 324 pp. and appendices.

WHAT is left for private charity to do in a social welfare state? Six years ago Lord Beveridge proposed that the British Government provide "cradle to the grave" security. Since then, the British Socialist Government has adopted most of his proposals and provided still other health, education and welfare services for all the people. Hence, what remains for the church, the trade union, the philanthropist and the private social agency to do?

Beveridge believes, as fervidly as ever, in the importance of a guarantee to every citizen of all essential social services. But he is, too, a realist; he recognizes very clearly the contribution that philanthropists and everyday people, banded together in clubs, churches or mutual aid societies, have made to the richness of British life and the welfare of the people.

Significant Motives

IN the first third of this book he describes the contributions made by people associated together in the Britis' "friendly societies," orders, collecting societies and trade unions. Secondly, he pictures what philanthropists have done to ease the lot of many unfortunates by creating homes, schools and organizations. These word pictures will be of especial interest to British readers who are familiar with these agencies and the benefactors whose lives he depicts. But every student will appreciate his observations as to the significance of the "mutual aid motive" and "the philanthropic motive" in a Democratic society.

In the final third of the book he spells out jobs that remain for private effort and private philanthropy. More, he says, than a prosperous economy and the equitable distribution of money is needed to insure the happiness of a people.

The aged, for example, need homes fitted to their peculiar needs, nursing attention and recreational opportunities. The handicapped need specialized training as well as medical care and subsistence. Unwed mothers need psychological rebuilding, as much as shelter from the gaze of the world. Discharged prisoners need acceptance and retraining for a useful place in society. And the adolescents particularly, but their elders as well, need institutions and advice which will stimulate the constructive use of the increasing amount of leisure time available to all.

A Lofty Challenge

BEVERIDGE may be accused of offering a fanciful bit of pie-in-the-sky which is far beyond our present grasp. But this beak-nosed, ascetic Britisher is one of the great social philosophers of our times. And his three "reports" on "social insurance and allied services," "full employment" and now "voluntary action" constitute a challenging contribution to the economic and social philosophy of all lands which maintain a democratic, free enterprise society.

In 1942, his famed "Beveridge Report" contended that every society must so distribute what purchasing power it had as to assure that no individual would have less than a minimum of subsistence. In 1945, he argued that every society must create full employment that there shall be a maximum of purchasing power to distribute.

Now, he reasons that no matter how wealthy a country may become, and no matter how well that wealth is distributed, there are still many nonmaterial services that are needed to insure a happy society.

"This third report is concerned with private enterprise not in business but in the service of mankind, not for gain but under the driving power of social conscience. The need for private enterprise in that form," he concludes, "is beyond debate."

Doubts Still Plague Scholars

Myth Clings to Lincoln Papers

By Alexander R. George

Associated Press Staff Writer

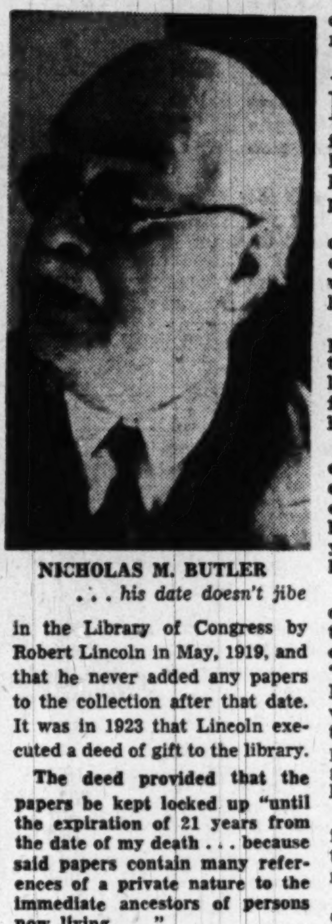
MYSTERY and myth still spur a search for more information about Abraham Lincoln, who was born 140 years ago next Saturday in a backwoods Kentucky cabin.

Although more than 4000 books have been written about Lincoln, three things have created confusion as well as sharpened interest in the Lincoln story:

1. The long-time secrecy imposed by Robert Todd Lincoln on his collection of his father's White House papers.

2. Assertions by some writers prior to the opening of the papers that they contained evidence of conspiracy by high Government officials in the assassination of President Lincoln.

3. The apparent misunderstanding of Robert Lincoln's handling of the collection even by his intimate friend, the late Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler.



NICHOLAS M. BUTLER
. . . his date doesn't jibe

Interest was further quickened by the dramatic opening of the papers in the Library of Congress July 26, 1947. At one minute past midnight, Librarian Luther Evans opened five safes containing the collection of 18,000 documents before a group of eager historians and scholars.

So far none of the Lincoln scholars who have been studying the papers has reported finding any new sensation or major items of history-changing evidence. The quest, however, goes on.

Unlikely Action

LINCOLN Biographer Carl Sandburg says that sensation-seekers incessantly have asked, "What's the lowdown on his ancestry and on the murder conspiracy in his Cabinet?"

David C. Mearns, director of the Library's reference department, says, "Myth and misunderstanding have clustered around the documents ever since President Lincoln's secretaries, John G. Nicolay and John Hay, started collecting them at the White House a few days after his assassination."

Mearns is author of the recent book, "The Lincoln Papers."

Since the opening of the papers, at least one writer has intimated that Robert Lincoln suppressed ancestral records showing Abraham Lincoln's mother to have been illegitimate. Mearns says in his book that it is not likely that a man like President Lincoln would keep records "of a grandmother's philanderings."

Mearns also scoffs at suggestions that the papers ever contained evidence that members of the President's Cabinet conspired in his assassination.

"It is nonsense," he says, "to suppose that a man of Robert Lincoln's character and family devotion would ever have protected accomplices, or the most remote accessories, to the assassination."

Dates Conflict

NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER'S connection with the Lincoln papers received considerable publicity in the 1930s. In a letter to Emanuel Mertz, author of "The Hidden Lincoln," Butler told how in 1923 he had persuaded Robert Lincoln not to burn a collection of his father's papers.

Mearns says in his book that the Lincoln papers were deposited in the Library of Congress by Robert Lincoln in May, 1919, and that he never added any papers to the collection after that date. It was in 1923 that Lincoln executed a deed of gift to the library.

The deed provided that the papers be kept locked up "until the expiration of 21 years from the date of my death . . . because said papers contain many references of a private nature to the immediate ancestors of persons now living . . ."

Mearns says it seems certain that Robert Lincoln did destroy some Lincoln letters at some time. His family has told how his granddaughter, Mary Lincoln Beckwith, once watched him as he threw some on the grate, but whether they were official or private was not disclosed.

Mearns says that at one time Lincoln retained a bookstore proprietor to collect for him letters written by his mother so he could "erase the pathetic testaments of her madness."

Accidental Addition

MEARNS declares that Mrs. Abraham Lincoln flatly refused to permit her letters from her husband "to go out of her hands" because they were of "too private a nature."

One letter from President Lincoln to his wife is still in the collection. It was the one in which the President wrote about his son Tad's "nanny goat."

Family correspondence, Mearns points out, did not belong with the White House papers. He believes it reasonable that the one family letter was left in the collection by accident.

Mearns doubts that Robert Lincoln made any "purge" of the collection as some persons have charged. He says it is unlikely he would have imposed the 21-year secrecy ban if he already had "purged" it.

"The outstanding contribution of the Lincoln papers comes from the materials which were addressed to him," says Mearns. "Hitherto seen only by John G. Nicolay and John Hay, and only very sparingly reproduced by them (in their 10-volume biography), these are the papers which give background and substance to his own (Lincoln's) writings."

"From them," Mearns adds, "it is possible for the first time fully to understand the meaning of his responses."

A total of 1,911,475 microfilm copies of items in the collection have been ordered from the Library of Congress. School children, housewives and businessmen as well as historians and political scientists have inquired about the collection. A set of 7200 prints was sent to Oxford University in England.

Historic Annapolis a Casual Host to First Annual Legislature

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

ANNAPOLIS, MD., Feb. 5.—A bustling legislative session of the Maryland General Assembly—its roots buried deep in 250 years of American history—is again under way in this city of picture postcards and ancient bricks.

Legislators from the Free State's 23 counties and populous Baltimore City yesterday wound up their fifth week of the current 90-day session.

This is the first regular annual session in the history of the State. Regular sessions have traditionally been held every two years. But Maryland voters last fall approved a constitutional amendment providing for the yearly meetings.

Shouting their "ayes" and "nays" on matters affecting the more than two million residents of the Nation's forty-first State (in size) are businessmen, lawyers, farmers, merchants and manufacturers from a region stretching from the Appalachians to the 180-mile long Chesapeake Bay.

Capital Since 1694

NOW a city of about 25,000 persons in its metropolitan area, Annapolis became the State capital in 1694 when archives were moved here from St. Mary's City, the first capital.

At that time, according to one document, there were "about 40 dwelling houses, 7 or 8 of which can afford a good lodging and accommodations for strangers."

Two early State Houses were built. The first was destroyed by fire in 1704. The other, built in 1706, fell into disrepair. In 1772, construction was begun on the present structure after the General Assembly appropriated 7500 pounds sterling for the purpose.

General Washington was a frequent visitor to Annapolis before and after the Revolutionary War. On December 23, 1783, he surrendered his command of the American Armies to the Continental Congress then in session in the old Senate chamber.

In the original plan of Annapolis, the circle of ground on which the State House now stands was a perfect circle from which streets radiated. According to one historian, the Annapolis plan of radiating streets "was a conspicuous part of the plan of Sir Christopher Wrenn for the rebuilding of London after the Great Fire of 1666."

And, the historian also relates, upon the suggestion of George Washington the same plan was adopted by L'Enfant in his scheme for the new National Capital at Washington.

Settled by Puritans

THE witness of many important events, Annapolis was first named Providence. It was settled in 1649 by 10 families of Puritans from Nansemond County, Va., who sailed up the Chesapeake Bay to escape religious persecution.

Best known for the United States Naval Academy, founded in 1814 under President James K. Polk, Annapolis is also the home of St. John's College. The latter was an outgrowth of "a free school" completed in 1701 during the reign of William and Mary.

Annapolis is a tourist and resort town, with a million dollar yacht industry, but 75 per cent of its residents are supported directly or indirectly by the Navy.

It is periodically enlivened by the Naval Academy's colorful "June Week," when parents and sweethearts of the midshipmen descend on the city. And, to a lesser degree, it brightens up when the legislators appear and with them an assorted entourage of lobbyists, politicians, ax-grinders, officeholders and more than a score of newspapermen who set up typewriters and teletype machines to grind out the legislative news.

But the city, according to a recent visitor unimpressed by historical tradition, is one in which "the natives maneuver like goats over the mountainous brick sidewalks which break the ankles of ordinary mortals." "Apparently," he added, "the natives view concrete sidewalks as a creation of the devil."

As in Charleston, S. C., and Alexandria, Va., old traditions are jealously guarded and the citizens are justifiably proud of their architecture and heritage. And the city, according to Carl N. Fuller, local telephone company executive and president of the Chamber of Commerce, likes the Legislature.

One Favorite Rendezvous

ATTRACTED to the city when the Legislature convenes are some 250 "regulars," most of whom spend Monday through Friday sleeping, wining and dining in the somewhat limited facilities.

Suffering from pangs of conscience, Fuller says, the Chamber of Commerce recently took preliminary steps to map a program "to make the stay of the legislators more comfortable."

Local businessmen and merchants, except for hotels, bars and restaurants, profit little from the legislators' stay, Fuller says. But to Carvel Hall, the town's leading hostelry and once the home of Maryland's third Governor, William Paca, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, the Legislature is a bonanza.

The great and near-great of the State frequent the hotel and, according to some observers, "almost as many laws are passed in Carvel Hall as in the State House."

Last Wednesday, most of the legislators and Gov. W. Preston Lane, jr., feasted at Carvel Hall on oysters on the half shell, brought from Dorchester County on the Eastern Shore. The legislative routine that day was hastened. In fact, a threatened Senate filibuster was postponed.

When the current session began January 5, the lawmakers walked into a glistening "new" State House refurbished at a cost of more than $525,000. The major improvements, first since 1854, according to Governor Lane, included restoration of the dome, addition of new offices for all Senators and county delegations, construction of a tunnel between the State House and the Maryland Court of Appeals Building (in which the Senate offices are located), soundproofing of the Senate and House chambers and improved lighting.

A Shaky Top-piece

IN THE dome restoration, unsafe conditions similar to those at the White House were discovered. State Engineer John Funk reported that bearing walls bulged, hand-hewn beams—mortised, tenoned and dowled—were splitting and the entire dome was at least 5 inches off center.

Work was hastily suspended in Governor Lane's office until shoring could be erected.

During demolition, workmen found many relics hidden in walls, including old bayonets, water jugs, newspapers and an old proclamation of the House of Delegates.

While working on the original dome, whose construction was delayed by the Revolutionary War, Thomas Dance of London, who had contracted to do the plastering and art work, fell from a scaffolding and was killed just as he had finished the centerpiece. His widow petitioned for funds but her claims were never paid.

Partly out of tribute to Dance, almost forgotten and whose burial place is unknown, artisans last fall placed the following testimonial in a bottle and buried it in the wall:

"We, in the year of our Lord 1948, have endeavored to completely remodel this beautiful dome—the original being conceived by one of our craft long ago named Thomas Dance, of London, England, in the year 1796. We have left this as a record—hoping in the future years it may be found and held as a memory of and to our craftsmanship. Sincerely yours, the undersigned."

Machine-Gun Legislation

GALLERY visitors to both houses, which are on opposite sides of a marble corridor, are frequently surprised when they see how both the Senate and the House conduct voice votes.

Speaker C. Ferdinand Sybert, of the House, or President Joseph D. Byrnes, of the Senate, says rapidly: "All those in favor say aye; all those opposed no; the ayes have it." And the action is passed without any voice raised.

On non-controversial measures, the reading clerk also resorts to the so-called quick roll call as a time-saving device. Only a few names are read, and if no member demands the floor the measure is declared passed.

What the visitors overlook is that each legislator is familiar with the legislative action of the moment, and if he wants to record his vote he can, and often does, demand a slow roll call.

Of the approximately 200 bills introduced in the House thus far this session, the most controversial was one which, oddly, affected only a few persons.

The measure, still awaiting final passage, would make it grounds for divorce if 18 months of a three-year prison term had been served by a spouse. A bitter fight against the bill by a large minority was attributed to religious principles against divorce in any form.

Trend to Baltimore

MOST administrative functions of the State are carried on in Baltimore. A proposal is pending to purchase an office building in Baltimore to house scattered State agencies there. Annapolis boosters say they will fight the plan.

There is some difference of opinion on what effect, if any, the new annual sessions will have on Annapolis. But most say it will be negligible, because in recent years special sessions have been called in between the biennial meetings.

At least one delegate, House Majority Leader LeRoy Pumphrey, Prince Georges County Democrat, takes a dim view of the new annual sessions.

"They will be fine for people who want to spend a lot more money," he told a reporter. "It used to be respectable to encourage economy in government. Some day it will be again—after we're broke."

But in Maryland, as elsewhere, unprecedented demands must be met—demands undreamed of by the legislators of 1774 when they adopted a strongly worded resolution demanding that the British Parliament repeal the duty on tea.

Governor Lane recently submitted a record annual budget of almost 131 million dollars to the Legislature. It is predicted that he will request millions more in a supplemental budget dealing with increased State aid to counties hard pressed for new school construction, and with improvement of the State's mental hospitals.

Daily the legislators are confronted in the State House elevator with the Calvert motto—"Fatti Maschii Parole Femine"—Manly deeds, womanly words; or, more strictly, Deeds are males; words, females.

Three of the 152 Legislators are women, but their deeds belie the old Calvert creed.

Breeder Lauds Shenandoah as Beef Country

By Bill Garrard

WINCHESTER, VA., Feb. 5.—Edward Jenkins, former vice president of General Motors Export Co. and today one of the Nation's noted breeders of Aberdeen-Angus cattle, is convinced that the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia has the finest natural conditions for beef cattle in the world, and should be the leading beef-producing area of America.

EDWARD JENKINS

Jenkins is owner of Red Gate Farm in Clarke County, 12 miles southeast of Winchester, where he started his Aberdeen-Angus breeding herd in 1934. In 1941, at the age of 50, he retired from General Motors and took over active management of Red Gate.

Today the Red Gate herd of 112 brood cows and 3 stock bulls has a top rating wherever these black Scottish beef cattle are bred, and is estimated to be worth $250,000.

Jenkins was born and reared in New York City, but he always wanted, he said, to own a farm from which he could look at mountains. The Blue Ridge Mountains are a short distance east of Red Gate Farm and the Shenandoah River winds for a mile along the border of its 720 acres.

When Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins returned to the United States in 1930, after several years in France and England, he was only 39, but he began to plan for his retirement at 50. He made a study of all parts of the United States which might be suitable for cattle breeding and country living—with a view of mountains. Some filled all his requirements except one: they had no limestone soil, which meant no blue grass, on which beef cattle thrive.

Stettinius' Suggestion

JENKINS said his friend, Edward R. Stettinius, jr., who was also a vice president of General Motors, was the first to call Virginia to his attention. (Stettinius, a graduate of the University of Virginia, is now rector of the university.)

In 1931 Stettinius took Jenkins to see farms in Orange and Albemarle Counties. They both especially liked one at Rapidan known as the Horseshoe, and Stettinius urged Jenkins to buy it. But there was no limestone soil and the mountains were too far away.

Stettinius himself bought the Horseshoe, and makes his home there.

Jenkins finally decided upon Red Gate after a search of the Shenandoah Valley that took him to as many as 12 and 15 places a day. The brick house, built in 1790 by Joseph Fauntleroy on land granted by Lord Fairfax, had been enlarged and modified over the years. The Jenkinses restored its colonial lines and furnished it with antiques.

APART from its limestone soil and lime-impregnated water, Jenkins gives these reasons why the Shenandoah Valley has the finest natural conditions for beef cattle in the world:

Four distinct seasons, comparatively cool in summer and not too cold in winter, yet cold enough to kill ticks, other insect pests and some bacteria harmful to cattle;

Its grazing season of virtually 12 months a year;

Its river-bottom land, on which all necessary feed and hay crops can be grown (as is done at Red Gate Farm).

Asked why the blue grass section of Kentucky didn't equal the Shenandoah Valley as a beef-growing region, Jenkins said the climate wasn't as good: too hot in summer and not cold enough in winter. He investigated it back in 1931, before he decided on Red Gate.

The two chief breeding bulls at Red Gate Farm were purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins in 1946 on a trip to Scotland, original home of the Aberdeen-Angus breed. The bulls, Kinsman of Gloagburn and Prince of Rowley, cost $10,000 each. The farm's third principal sire is a native of the place, Eventuator of Red Gate.

Adm. Whelchel Named Redskins' Coach

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

A TEAM OF ARMY boxers from Guam, headed for the world-wide Army boxing tournament at Fort Myer later this month, is stranded in California after their flight over the Pacific . . . because the Army is strapped for air transportation since dispatching hundreds of planes on the foodlift to snowbound humans and livestock in the midwestern States.

When the hard-pressed New York Football Giants invited the homeless Boston Yankees to share their National League Football territory, it was at a price that will help offset recent Giant losses . . . now it is learned that Ted Collins agreed to pay the Giants $250,000 as tribute, the payments to be spread over 10 years.

POVICH

Newly elected Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, in addressing the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce at St. Joe, Mo., said: "In the field of politics some get to be champions in dubious ways . . . for example, when I was a student at the University of Tennessee I tried for the football team and was a pretty fair substitute . . . a few years later as a candidate for Congress, I became a star player. Still later when I was running for the Senate, I noticed I had been a member of the All-Southern team . . . so, six years from now if I seek reelection, you can prepare to receive news that I was an All-American, with complete understanding of how a politician gets to be a champ."

VERILY, Washington and Lee University got its new football coach, George Barclay, out of the salt mines. Barclay's first job upon graduation from North Carolina as an All-American guard in 1935 was with the Philadelphia Salt Mine Co. . . . Bill Maceyko, North Carolina's right halfback who intercepted two Maryland passes for touchdowns last season, has signed a $5000-a-year contract with the Detroit Lions.

Before trading Mickey Vernon to Cleveland, the Nats turned down a deal with the Yankees on the advice of former Yankee Manager Bucky Harris who warned Clark Griffith that a couple of Yankee players mentioned in the trade lacked guts.

Texas golfers have won all four of the big pro tournaments staged thus far this year, including the first four places in the Long Beach Open. In that one, Ben Hogan was first, Jimmy Demaret, second, and Lloyd Mangrum tied with Jack Burke, jr., for third. Fred Corcoran, former PGA tournament manager, attributes such dominance to the fact that golf is a year-around game in Texas weather and that Texans learn to play the game in wind, rain and sunshine.

PLEASE DONATE to the Washington Heart Association's campaign against America's No. 1 killer, heart disease, which claims more lives than cancer, accidents, Bright's disease, tuberculosis and pneumonia combined . . . while World War II was causing 325,000 battle deaths among Americans, heart disease struck down two million fatally during the same period.

Clark Griffith would like to sign George Myatt, a holler guy, as the Nats' third-base coach to succeed Sam West and may yet relieve Myatt of his post managing the Chattanooga farm team . . . that latter move may be a bit embarrassing, though, because when Myatt was threatened with the loss of his Chattanooga job last fall, the fans of that city set up a successful clamor of protest.

Jim McNamara, the Irishman who has been athletic director of the Jewish Community Center since its dedication 23 years ago, will be honored on February 17 with an honorary membership in the B'nai B'rith . . . The New York district attorney will provide a bodyguard for David Shapiro when the GWU cocaptain goes to Manhattan to testify against the four men on trial for attempting to bribe him to throw a basketball game.

RAY FLAHERTY, who will install the single-wing system with the Chicago Hornets, is not exactly a holdout against the T formation. He states his position very clearly by saying: "If I thought the T formation was better, I'd junk the single-wing, but I'm not convinced as yet" . . . two years after the Chicago Bears' T beat Flaherty's Redskins, 73-0, Flaherty's Redskins won the league championship from the Bears.

The Redskins have named a new head coach, but naming a man head coach of the Redskins does not make him head coach of the Redskins . . . if Joe DiMaggio gets his $100,000 salary demands from the Yankees, he will be earning exactly four times as much as his kid brother, Dom, gets from the Red Sox. And long since it was agreed that Dom is now the better defensive outfielder.

The St. Louis Cardinal ownership is sitting on a million-dollar fund accumulated over the years and earmarked for the construction of a new stadium . . . the money may be subject to heavy taxes unless used for a stadium, but present construction costs are so high a million dollars would build only 10,000 seats and the stockholders are in a dilemma.

Ray Lumpp Gives Bump To Caps for N. Y., 83-73

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

A fellow named Lumpp gave the Caps their lumps last night.

Lumpp, first name Ray, poured in 19 points, a contribution mighty enough to enable his New York Knickerbockers to thrash Washington, 83-73, before a Uline Arena assembly of 4323.

Lumpp had to share scoring honors with Teammate Johnny Palmer, but the former did his sharpshooting when the Knicks needed it most—in the stretch.

LAST NIGHT'S RESULTS

Baltimore 87	Indianapolis 75

With five minutes to play and the score knotted at 69-69, Lumpp swished in two straight baskets to give the Knicks the impetus they needed to score their first victory of the season over the Caps.

Caps 8½ Games in Front

Last night's defeat, the fifth in the last seven games for Washington's fading Eastern Division leaders, still leaves them 8½ games ahead of the second-place New Yorkers.

Lumpp, former NYU ace the Knicks obtained only last week from Indianapolis eluded Freddie Scolari, one of the league's best defenders, to pump in his climactic two baskets. He hooked in a difficult one-hander from side court for the first score and followed with a set shot from 30 feet out for his second.

That sounded taps for the Caps who were able to score only one basket from the floor after Bones McKinney had shot them into the 69-69 tie.

Caps Lead at Half

It was a typical New York-Washington game, tight practically all the way. Lumpp, who collected 11 of his 19 points in the first quarter, collaborated with Lee Knorek to put the Knicks in front, 25-20, at the end of the first quarter.

Making a few of the shots they missed in the opening period, the Caps staggered to a 38-37 advantage by halftime.

Except for the first quarter which saw the Knicks surge in front by ten points and at the finish, never were there more than five points separating the embattled clubs.

Nichols Gets 15

Big Jack Nichols was Washington's most effective performer. The 6-foot 8-inch star from Washington hammered home 15 points with his versatile hook shots. In the third quarter and in the opening moments of the last period, it appeared that Nichols would personally shoot the Caps to victory.

He hooked in a basket which cut the Knicks' lead to two points and collaborated with Scolari to bring the Caps a 66-62 advantage a bit later on. But Washington's meager domination came to an abrupt end as Princeton's Palmer and sidekick Lumpp started plunking away in earnest.

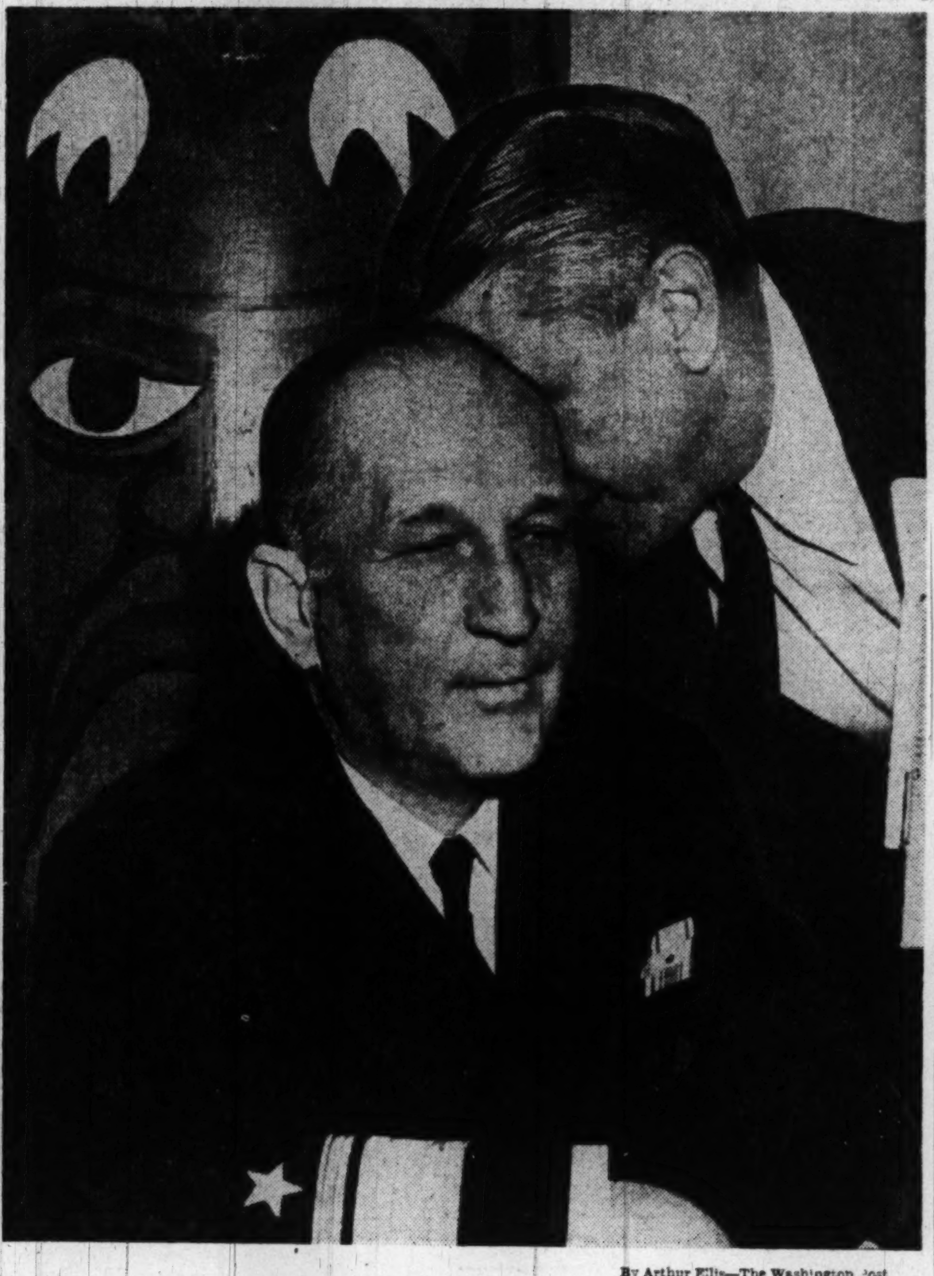
The Admiral Gets His Orders . . .



By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

Former Navy Skipper Surprise Choice, Out Of Football 5 Years

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Rear Admiral John Esten (Billick) Whelchel, USN.

That is the name of the new head coach of the Washington Redskins, succeeding Turk Edwards.

After a two-month search, and with one of the gaudiest buildups ever accorded a sports figure, the Redskins signed him to a five-year contract yesterday.

Surprise was the reaction in all quarters.

Whelchel is the coach the Redskins called "the greatest thing ever to happen to pro football" before his name was released.

On the less superlative side, Whelchel is a former Western High quarterback who starred at the Naval Academy until 1919, and since has served as either head coach or assistant coach at Annapolis during 11 seasons.

He has been out of football for five years. Since acting as head coach of the Middies in 1942 and 1943, he has been on sea duty.

He is NOT a T-formation coach, although he announced the Redskins would continue playing under that system.

Whelchel's signing, after most of the country's top T-formation experts had been mentioned, took place in ceremonies not unlike a Hollywood premiere. Newspapermen, photographers, radio men and just plain fans jammed the Redskin office to preserve the event for posterity.

Whelchel's most interesting statement was: "The main change I expect to make is to give Washington a winning team."

He said he would retain Backfield Coach Wilbur Moore and Chief Scout Herman Ball because "no better assistants could be found." He also said Edwards might be called on to help coach the line.

Whelchel came to Washington in 1900 from his birthplace in Hogansville, Ga. After attending local grammar schools and Western High, he played at Navy under Jonas Ingram and Gil Dobie, the latter keeping him on as an assistant after he was commissioned.

Served Under Larson

His other service as a Navy aide came in 1920-24 under Bob Folwell, 1925-26 under Ingram, and 1941 under Swede Larson. He became head coach succeeding Larson in '42 and led the Tars to 13 victories in 18 games during the next two seasons. Navy beat Army both years, 14-0 and 13-0.

With 30-years service in the Navy behind him, Whelchel has requested transfer to the retired list of officers. His acceptance of the Redskin post, he said, is "contingent upon the Secretary's approval of this request."

During World War II, Whelchel served in the Pacific in command of the cruiser USS San Francisco. He had previously served aboard the USS McCall and USS Holland. His efforts earned him the Legion of Merit, the Gold Star in lieu of a second Legion of Merit, and the Bronze Star.

Bryant Offered Job

Whelchel, according to Redskin officials, was only the second man to be offered the head coaching job since Edwards moved into an executive job. The other was Paul (Bear) Bryant, University of Kentucky mentor, who accepted the position but had to back out when Kentucky refused to let him out of a 10-year contract.

A personal friend of Redskin President George Marshall's for the last six years, his name was only recently. This was during the time such big names as Frank Leahy, Blair Cherry, Bobby Dodd, Wally Butts, etc., were being considered.

Despite the fact he has never coached the T-formation, Whelchel seemed content to string along with the style of football brought to the Skins by Clark Shaughnessy.

In 1943 we brought the Chicago Bears' Keith Molesworth to Navy to teach us something about the T-formation. We used several T-formation plays that year and won eight out of nine games," Welchel said. "Then, too, I learned considerable about the T as I studied the plays of several opponents like Notre Dame."

Whelchel is married and has three children, two still in their teens. His mother, Mrs. Louise Lula Whelchel, lives at 2926 Newark st. nw., and he has two brothers and three sisters.

'Mush' Knows

Fans Hear Name, Ask 'Who's He?'

"Who's he?"

"Never heard of the guy."

"Where'd he ever coach at?"

By the dozen, John Fan called the sports desk of The Washington Post last night about the man who yesterday was named the new head coach of the Redskins, Rear Admiral John E. Whelchel.

Their reactions were all about the same when they heard Whelchel's name over the telephone. Some of them wanted it spelled out.

One lady shouted "Wh-a-t!" And hung up.

A philosophical guy hung on to learn that Whelchel was retiring from the Navy, thought that solved everything. "With his retirement pay, he'll make out okay," he said.

An exception was Maurice (Mush) Dubofsky, former line coach at Georgetown University. He knows Whelchel. Said mush:

"He's a terrific coach and will do the Redskins a lot of good. I know he's a good coach because we worked against his Navy team. I told him he wouldn't win more than one game with his material at Navy, in 1943, and that's the year he won eight and lost one.

"Whelchel has the ability to get more out of his men than any coach I've ever seen."

Hoyas Beaten By St. John's Redmen, 65-54

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Amazing set-shot accuracy by Capt. Ray Corley and Tommy O'Keefe kept Georgetown in the game for a little more than a half but St. John's took firm command and coasted to a 65-54 victory last night at the Armory before 1211.

In the end, the McGuire Brothers—Captain Dick and Al—6-foot 8½ Center Artie Oldham and Gerry Calabrese more than matched the Hoyas scoring twins.

With Corley and O'Keefe dropping practically every shot they took, Georgetown was behind by only 36-35 after five minutes of the second half.

But then Dick McGuire and Oldham led the visitors to a 10-point bulge. It was a comfortable lead with the rest of the Hoyas showing little scoring inclination.

Corley wound up with 19 points for the night to take scoring honors. O'Keefe had 14, which was more than any St. John's man.

However, the Redmen's point-getting was better distributed. The McGuire boys each had 13; Oldham 12 and Calabrese 11.

St. John's victory was its tenth in 16 starts and avenged last year's 3-point loss to Georgetown. The Hoyas now have a 7-7 mark.

In the service preliminary, the Camp Lejeune, N. C. Marines battled stubbornly before bowing to Quantico, 76-66.

Camp Lejeune, loser by a point in an earlier meeting, sped to a 13-2 lead and appeared on its way to an upset win over a Quantico team that now has a two-year record of 63 victories and only 2 losses against service teams.

Jack Robbins, Navy captain last year, led Quantico's comeback and wound up high scorer with 27 points. Cy Waldrop, usual high scorer, tallied 17.

The real whiz of the evening, however, was Lejeune's Abiather (they call him Whiz) Bishop who was high man with 12 field goals and 5 fouls for 29 points.

In the preliminary to the preliminary, Georgetown Frosh, paced by Tony Durmowicz and Harry Schmitt, downed Bullis Prep, 45-

Warriors Buy Irv Torgoff From Baltimore

Philadelphia, Feb. 5 (AP).—The Philadelphia Warriors of the Basketball Association of America today purchased Irving Torgoff from the Baltimore Bullets for an undisclosed price.

Torgoff went to Baltimore from the Washington Capitols at the close of last season in a deal for Dick Schulz. He scored 138 points in 28 games as a utility forward and center for the Bullets.

Terps Upset W & L by 66-60

Lexington, Va., Feb. 5.—University of Maryland's Terps strengthened their chances of a berth in the Southern Conference tournament as they upset Washington and Lee University, 66-60, here tonight.

Two Russian flyers who escaped from the Soviet last month watched the game intently, praised the fast ball-handling as compared to Soviet basketball and got in some good old American umpire baiting.

"It seems to me small arbiter was unjust," said Peter Pirogov through an interpreter. Pirogov had picked W. & L. to win.

His companion, Anatole Baros, who picked Maryland from the start, grinned and said the Russian equivalent to "Pirogov, don't be a sorehead."

The Terps' victory snapped a four-game winning streak for the Generals, and brought Maryland's conference record up to 4-4.

For the first half, the game was hotly contested with W. & L. taking a 40-36 lead into the dressing room at intermission. Eight minutes into the second half, the Terps turned the tide decisively in their favor with an eight-point streak.

W. & L. held a 48-46 lead when Spencer Wright tossed in two field goals and Lee Brawley and Frank Armsworthy followed with layups.

Maryland maintained a six-point lead the rest of the way. Wright and Brawley paced the Terps with 16 and 15 points. Jay Handlon had 17 for W. & L.

DiMag Again Turns Down Yanks' Offer

By Jack Hand

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—The Joe DiMaggio "holdout" campaign continues with a third showdown conference scheduled for Monday after failure of the Yankee Clipper and the New York Yankee ball club to reach an agreement.

"We met last night and discussed my contract," said DiMaggio. "Each side made counterproposals but we couldn't get together. I wouldn't want to say anything about the terms until we get it settled.

"Monday at 11:00 a. m. (EST) we meet again at the Yankee offices. If we don't get together then, I'll leave on vacation trip to Mexico Monday night unsigned."

The Yankee office disclosed that President Dan Topping, General Manager George Weiss and Secretary J. Arthur Friedlund represented the club at the second salary conference. The fact that Friedlund, an expert attorney, had been called into the discussions was taken as an indication that DiMag would sign an unusual term contract.

DiMag Top Topic

Best guess on DiMaggio's asking price is a two-year contract for a total of $170,000. The club will go that high but wants DiMaggio to take a chance with them on a bonus attendance clause.

The DiMaggio story overshadowed other developments as baseball men crowded into town for tomorrow night's twenty-sixth annual Baseball Writers dinner.

Bobby Feller and his Cleveland Indians' boss, President Bill Veeck, also were talking money but they had reached no agreement. Like DiMaggio, Feller differs with the ball club on its estimate of next year's attendance. Bobby thinks the gate will drop and Veeck says

Westminster, Md., Feb. 5 (AP).—Western Maryland University, 61-59, tonight in a Mason-Dixon Conference basketball upset.

Western Maryland, playing in spite of injuries, led throughout the game throughout. The Green Terrors never lost the lead, although at times it was a bit slim.

The home team built up its biggest advantage in the first half and led 33-25 at intermission. American U. came back in the third period and climbed to within two points of the Terrors but the subs were able to hold the best the Washingtonians could do.

The Terrors had a tense minute, the last of the game, when with a 61-59 lead four of their first string men were put out on fouls. But the subs were able to control the ball and hold the two-point lead until the gun.

Hogan's Ankle Placed in Cast

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 5 (AP).—Ben Hogan, severely injured in an autobus collision Wednesday, was reported resting fairly comfortably in a hospital here today.

His left ankle, one of which was broken, was placed in a cast yesterday. Physicians have not yet applied a cast for a broken pelvis bone but plan to do so.

The golf star also sustained a fractured collarbone and fractured rib.

Eddie Edwards, Belle Haven Pro, Heads Golf Group

Eddie Edwards, Belle Haven Country Club pro, yesterday was elected president of the Northern Virginia Golf Association.

At a meeting at Belle Haven, Comdr. C. H. Anderson of Quantico was named vice president and Jim Gardiner, Washington Country Club pro, was chosen secretary-treasurer.

Army-Navy, Washington, the Quantico Officers Club and Belle Haven were present.

A tentative league schedule was drawn up with the season opening May 1 and ending August 14. Each of the four teams will play six matches on a home-and-home schedule. A field day and awards dinner is planned for September 11 at Quantico.

Navy Wins 50th Straight on Mat

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 5 (AP).—Navy's mighty matmen today tied Michigan University into knots 21-to-10, to win their fiftieth straight wrestling meet in seven years.

Coach Ray Swartz's muscular midshipmen haven't lost a dual meet since the middle of the 1942 season.

Nats Sign New Coach—Ferrell

The Nats signed a coach yesterday, too.

Rick Ferrell returned his signed 1949 contract. He became a full-time coach last year after serving part of the 1947 season as coach and catcher.

The signed contract of Outfielder Clyde Vollmer was also received. Vollmer was purchased from Syracuse last year.

Women Mobilizing to Handle Annual Post Bowling Event

When the women become interested in something, from politics to bowling, things begin to happen.

That's the particular reason why the third annual Washington Post bowling tournament, February 14-March 1, already is off to a humming start.

The Women's Auxiliary of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, headed by Mrs. Joseph L. Arnold, will take a strong hand in enrolling entrants at all of the alleys.

Mrs. Arnold yesterday appointed Mrs. C. Chester Caywood as general chairman of the auxiliary's bowling committee.

From two to six women will be assigned to each bowling establishment each night of the tournament.

To acquaint the women with their assignment, Mrs. Arnold has invited a group of them as well as Police Boys Club officials to a tea at Mrs. Arnold's Virginia home February 13, Sunday, at 3 p. m.

Among those invited to attend this pre-tournament function are Mrs. Roger Lewis, Mrs. Thornton Owen, Mrs. Robert J. Barrett, Mrs. Francis J. Kane, Mrs. Maurice Colbert, Mrs. Chris Heurich, Mrs. Walter Moyle,

Boston, Brooklyn May Enter Minors

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Boston and Brooklyn, whose professional football teams recently moved to greener pastures, are being considered for membership in the American Football League.

President Joe Rosentover said "a the six-team league hoped to get in eight or perhaps 10 teams by next season. Half a dozen applications for new franchises were taken under consideration.

Bucky Harris Picks Tribe, Bosox

San Diego, Calif., Feb. 5 (U.P.).—Stanley (Bucky) Harris, new manager of the San Diego Padres, predicted today that the Cleveland Indians and Boston Red Sox will battle it out for the 1949 American League pennant.

He didn't give the New York Yankees, the team which fired him as manager last fall allegedly because he was too lax with his players, much of a chance.

Redskins Went Back to 'Little Potatoes' Era To Pick Former Ontario A. C. Star as Coach

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

The Redskins went back to the era of the "Little Potatoes, We're Hard to Peel," my boyhood gang, when they named as head coach Rear Admiral John E. Whelchel.

Johnny Whelchel wasn't a Little Potato, because he was reared on the right side of the 14th st. cartracks. He was, however, a member of the Ontario A. C. even at that early age being connected with a football team with an Indian name.

In their early teens, the three Whelchel Brothers—Dave and Jimmy were the others—were rugged performers on the rock and trash strew lots that passed for kid gridirons at the time and they blied the term "sissy" used by the Potatoes to designate any boy living "Up on the Hill," or from Florida ave. to Columbia rd.

From September until snow fell, after school and on Saturday, the Ontarios took on all comers on their home field at 18th st. and Columbia rd., long since the site of a church.

My recollection of the Ontarios is they won their share of football games and also fights, the latter being a by-product of the former almost invariably in those days before Police Boys Clubs and such.

The Admiral and I were talking over old times yesterday when the phone rang. Dr. Robert E. Moran was calling the new coach and the conversation almost immediately turned to kid football days.

Pete Moran, now the Redskins physician, was captain of the Hamptons in those days, a stationary guard, if memory serves. His club was in the Ontario-Potatoes league.

The Admiral's eyes were bright at that time as a stationary and the then had been all afternoon as he reminisced with Dr. Moran. Coach Whelchel's

Stags Beat Rollers

Providence, R. I., Feb. 5 (AP).—A blistering third-period rally enabled the Chicago Stags to defeat the Providence Steamrollers, 91-75, in a Basketball Association of America tilt tonight at the auditorium before a 4011 crowd, the largest home turnout of the season.

The third-period rally lifted the Stags into a 56-43 bulge. The Rollers never recovered from that assault.

Terps Invite 11 Teams for Meet

Eleven colleges and the host will compete in Maryland's second annual invitation indoor track meet February 19, Track Coach Jim Kehoe announced yesterday.

Invited to the meet in the new armory are Georgetown, Navy, Catholic University, Virginia, North Carolina, Duke, North Carolina State, Richmond, Washington and Lee, VPI and VMI. Maryland won the inaugural meet last year, beating out Navy.

Navy Plebes Outshoot Central

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 5 (AP).—The Navy plebes' rifle team outshot Central High School, Washington, D. C., by a score of 1366 to 1107 today in the Naval Academy rifle gallery.

Midshipman H. V. Bangsberg was high man on the 50-foot range with 98 from the prone position, 91 kneeling and 89 stands for a total of 278.

Tulsa Skaters Win

John Barrow Leads Tars' Late Spurt

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 5 (AP).—Navy's John Barrow almost singlehandedly turned a close game into a nine-point victory today as the Midshipmen defeated Goerge Washington University, 46 to 37.

Barrow, the 6-foot-3 Navy captain, scored 16 points, 11 of them in the stretch drive which resulted in his team's ninth win of the season.

With four minutes to go, Barrow made good a jump shot to tie the score at 37-all. Johnny Stinson followed quickly with a basket to put Navy ahead for keeps.

While the visitors fired away desperately but futilely at the backboard, Barrow and Stinson teamed up to widen Navy's margin.

GW Takes Lead

The quintets were never farther apart than at game's end. Navy led by a point at the close of the half, 19-18, but promptly fell back as Phil McNiff and Bill Cantwell counted with field goals.

Before the Midshipmen finally pulled away, the lead changed hands eight times.

It switched only once during a listless first half. Maynard Haithcock, GW cocaptain, opened the game with one of his nine successful free throws. After one minute, Joe Fitzpatrick hooked a set shot and Navy held the edge until George Washington's fast start after the intermission.

Willie Wilson and Barrow managed to keep the Middies' deficit to three points, at most. A goal by Cantwell and two penalty shots by Haithcock put the Colonials in front for the last time at 37-35, just before Barrow set the final rally in motion.

Revenge for Navy

The triumph brought Navy a measure of compensation for defeats inflicted by George Washington the last two campaigns. Two years ago GW was the only team to overcome Coach Ben Carnevale's outfit during the regular season.

Barrow built up his total with six goals and two free throws. Haithcock led his mates without scoring from the floor. All nine of his points came on foul tries.

'I'm Entitled to It'

Quattrocchi-College Boxing's 1st Holdout; Maryland Star Seeks Free Room and Board

Andy Quattrocchi is the first holdout in the history of college boxing.

The classy Maryland lightweight refuses to climb into the ring because he has to work for his room and board at College Park.

"I think I'm entitled to it for free," the 130-pound star of the Terp boxing team for the last two years said.

"When a football, baseball or basketball player gets tired or hurt, they send in a substitute for him, but when I get tired or hurt during a fight there's no one to take my place," Andy added.

The 22-year-old Brooklyn knockout specialist attends Maryland under a GI scholarship which provides him with tuition, fees, books and a $75 monthly "subsistence allowance." He issues athletic gear in the intramural department for his room and board. He works approximately 30 hours a month.

There are a number of scholarships awarded at Maryland which provide for room and board in addition to tuition, fees and books. They are awarded to nonathletes as well as athletes.

Quattrocchi was a mainstay on the 1947 and 1948 Maryland teams. He won all except two of his fights for Maryland, most of them by knockouts. He lost in the finals of the Southern Conference championship tournament and was outpointed in the finals of the Nationals also.

Frank Cronin, assistant boxing coach, who is regarded as one of the best fighters the Old Liners ever produced, says Quattrocchi "is the best college fighter I've ever seen."

Quattrocchi, a physical education major, "loves to fight, but I can't fight, work and study at the same time. It's just too much.

The hard-hitting little former sailor admits that the room and board matter is the prime reason for his conspicuous absence from this year's team, but says it isn't the only one.

"I'm all mixed up and I need a rest, I guess. I miss fighting, miss it very much, but I'd like to get what I think is coming to me.

"I was promised nothing when I came to Maryland except a chance to earn my room and board. I worked for it my freshman and sophomore years, but after looking around and seeing the other athletes don't have to work for theirs I decided I was entitled to the same things they get."

Coach Heinie Miller explained the absence of the star lightweight from his boxing team by saying "Andy is a moody, temperamental boy. If he wants to return to the team he'll have to fight his way back on it."

So far Andy has expressed no desire to rejoin the team. He says "I'm pretty certain I won't fight for Maryland this year."

"He's bent on receiving his degree in physical education.

"If a have to become a pro fighter to finish my education, I will," he concluded.

CU Boxers Upset Syracuse 4½-3½ on Rohr's Victory

Catholic University pounded out an amazing 4½-3½ upset victory over Syracuse to open its boxing season before 4500 people last night at the Brookland gym.

Syracuse, defending Eastern intercollegiate champs, had previously fought a 4-4 draw with Miami and defeated Army 5½-2½.

Charley Rohr, Catholic U. heavyweight, clinched the match when he decisioned Marty Crandall in the final bout of the evening. Rohr hung on gamely in the final stanza after piling up an early lead. The crowd was on its feet during all of the final round to be stilled only when the announcer called for attention before giving the winner.

Tom Cronin got CU off to a lead when he decisioned Jim Huba in the 125-pound class. Jack Redmond kept CU's winning ways by decisioning Chuck Pechette.

In one of the highlights of the evening, Al Sauerwein decisioned John Arnold to put Syracuse in the winning column for the first time. Tim Curley carried on for the Orange as he decisioned Cal Nisson of Catholic.

Bucky Ennis and Charles Rigoglioso started slugging with the opening bell and didn't stop until the final one. Result a draw.

Jim Rollier put Syracuse ahead for the first time as he defeated Billy Maher, then Cliff Sisler of Chicago set the stage for the final bout by gaining the nod over Julian Levine of Syracuse. Levine lost several points for not heeding the referee's instructions.

Rohr kept a long left jab in Crandall's face during the opening round and had him on the canvas in the second. Crandall came out for the last round obviously swinging for the knockout. He seemed to outhit Rohr but both fell to the canvas in a wild tangle of arms and legs several times.

Referee Billy Williams awarded the fight to Rohr and with it the match to Catholic University.

Penn Beats Out Cornell, 45 to 43

Ithaca, N. Y., Feb. 5 (AP).—Pennsylvania's Phil Harman sank a field goal with 10 seconds left to break a tie and give the Quakers a 45-43 victory over Cornell today. A junior week crowd of 6000 saw the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League contest.

Hoya Frosh Win Relay In Boston

Boston, Feb. 5 (AP).—Georgetown University breezed to victory in the college freshman mile relay in 3:24.5 at tonight's sixtieth Boston A. A. Indoor Track Games before 12,500.

Joseph Boland, Ray Dongekwicz, Tom Lindgren and Jck Hurst carried the winning Hoya colors past Seton Hall Prep, Harvard and Yale, who trailed in that order.

The Georgetown 2-mile relay team took a third place behind Manhattan and NYU. Manhattan's winning time was 7:54.4.

Billy Mitchell, Georgetown's huge hurdler, finished fourth in the 45-yard high timbers event. In first place was Baldwin-Wallace's great Harrison Dillard, who was clocked in 0:05.5, a new meet record.

Mathis Beaten

It took a record-tying effort by Jersey City's Eddie Conwell to beat out Washington, D. C.'s flying Billy Mathis in the 50-yard dash. Conwell registered a 0:05.3, and Mathis took second place.

Running as he pleased, the Netherland's Willy Slykhuij outfooted John Twomey of the Illinois A. C. by eight yards while winning the Hunter Mile in 4:12.4.

The Dutch star, runner-up to Don Gehrmann of Wisconsin in last week's Millrose Mile, got off second in the five-man field and was content to stay there until the second last of the 11 laps, during which he took over from Neil Pratt of Syracuse, who wound up fourth. Gehrmann was absent tonight.

Pratt came up from last place to take the lead during the eighth lap, thereby signalling the confident and smooth-running Slykhuis to get going in earnest. When the Dutch star turned on the heat, he pulled away from his hard-pounding rivals with apparent ease.

National A. A. U. Titlist Dave Bolen, of Boulder, Colo., led all the way while capturing the Hollis "600" from Tom Dickey, of Louisiana State by three yeards.

Grosholz Wins Easily

Jim Grosholz, of Haverford College, the Middle Atlantic A. A. U. half-mile champion, threw a blistering 55.2-second quarter at six rivals, including the apparently still ailing Ingvar Bengtsson, of Sweden, while leading from start to finish in the Lapham "1000."

Bengtsson, a 1000-yard winner here two weeks ago, has been slowed down by infected teeth that were extracted early this week.

Noertker Gets 37 for Va.

Carlisle, Pa., Feb. 5 (AP).—Joseph Noertker broke a floor individual scoring record tonight in leading his University of Virginia basketball team to an 80 to 63 victory over Dickinson.

The Virginia center tallied 37 points on 16 field goals and 5 fouls to top the individual record established in the 1947-48 season by Frank Keath of Elizabethtown College.

part of the conversation went like this:

"Yes, you won that day . . . by one touchdown and not 28 to 7."

"You brought your own referee. . ."

"The Hamptons shouldn't have won, either. Don't you remember, my brother had the ball, got in the open and ran until there wasn't anybody following him. Then he put the ball down, thinking he had made a touchdown, and a Hampton player fell on it and we found your rooters had moved the goal line back 10 yards?"

Johnny Whelchel went to the Johnson, Morgan and Cooke schools in those days when the playgrounds were jammed with swings, see-saws and giant-strides which were left to the girls, the boys prefering the unsupervised open lots.

Young Whelchel's first organized football was played at Western High in 1913-14-15. He starred at quarterback in the days of Central's Sylvian King, Tech's Country Morris, Eastern's Flaherty Brothers and Business' Harry Harris, Richmond (now Judge Keech) and the Wise Brothers.

I had a good chance to observe Whelchel's play in those days—first as waterboy and second as third-string, always on-the-bench fullback for Business (now Roosevelt) eleven.

The late Bryan Morse, later a sports editor, was Whelchel's coach at Western, having succeeded Curley Byrd, now President Harry Clifton Byrd of the University of Maryland.

As I recall, Western didn't win the title during Whelchel's stay, but did achieve some notable victories including, a 3-0 defeat of Central.

Johnny Whelchel and I had something in common in addition to being around in the same sandlot and schoolboy eras. After high school—he graduated and I quituated—both went nautical. I became a gob and he became a midshipman.

We both got something out of the Navy, too. Yesterday, the admiral's arms glittered with gold braid—and I had to hide my tatooing.

At Press Conference

Bell Says He'll Tell All About Pro War on Monday

Philadelphia, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—Commissioner Bert Bell today promised to tell the National League's version of the "whole story" in the continuing professional football war.

Bell called a press conference for Monday. Then, he said, he will reply to the latest eruption from the warring magnates with the National League's side of why the rival circuits failed to reach agreement in their not-so-peaceful peace meetings.

Owner James F. Breuil of the All-America Conference Buffalo Bills touched off the latest explosion last night when he claimed that a "small minority" of National League owners blocked peace moves. He singled out Tim Mara of the New York Giants and George Marshall of the Washington Redskins as the culprits.

Mara, in New York, fired back quickly. He said that Bell would tell "the whole story" today. If he didn't, Mara promised, he'd call in the reporters himself and spill the beans.

Son Wellington Mara subsequently announced today, however, "We've talked to the commissioner and he's going to tell the story. In fact, dad's been on the phone talking to Bell."

Then Bell checked in with his announcement that he'd "tell all" Monday.

The Washington Redskins were not so quick to jump at Breuil's bait. A spokesman of the club refused to reply to the charges, particularly the one in which Breuil claimed that Marshall demanded elimination of the Baltimore team as a requisite of peace.

General Manager Dick McCann said simply, "Let Breuil get his own publicity. We won't help him."

Mara Says AAC Never Asked Merger

New York, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—Owner Tim Mara of New York Giants termed as "nonsense" charges made by James Breuil of the Buffalo Bills that Mara and George Marshall of the Washington Redskins had blocked a peace in the pro football war.

"It's just a lot of talk," said Mara. "The All America Conference never came to us with a proposal for a merger, And the National League voted on a merger at our meeting in Chicago last month. The matter never was even brought up.

"I'm hoping that Bert Bell (commissioner of the National League) will tell the full story of this whole controversy. If he does, a lot of people will be surprised," Mara said.

Blackwood Faces Tough Foe in Vinci

Joe Blackwood, who shapes up as the District's outstanding middleweight after his victory over Ken Stribling and two-round K. O. of Al Wright, will try not to find himself in the same spot as others who took Chet Vinci too lightly, when they clash tomorrow night at Turner's Arena.

Chet, who won the Pacific Ocean area service title while serving with the Marines, and quickly followed that up by dropping 1 in 10 in Honolulu, rings against much more experienced battlers, has a reputation in the trade as a "spoiler."

A pronounced underdog against Sonny Horne, Eddie Smith, Henry Chemel, Nick Kashuba and others, he surprised the odds-makers by turning in victories over these foes. Indeed, his knockout of Smith was a tremendous surprise, as no one before or since has been able to stop the classy New York 150-pounder.

Blackwood's ability is well-known to local fight fans. He fought two draws with Ralph Zanelli, and beat Coley Welch and Al Priest. His previously mentioned wins over Stribling and Wright have put him in solidly with District fans.

A win for Blackwood would put him well in front of the pack in the race for the choice outdoor shots that Matchmaker Gabe Menendez is lining up for the summer.

In the under-card, Walter Rowan tackles Perry Lowe, Camden, N. J. Another five brings back two lightheavies who turned in fine wins in their last local showings, Kid Wolfe and Julian Keene, classy 19-year-old.

Don Wagner, unbeaten Portsmouth, Va., sailor, faces local heavy Herm Johnson and Emmet Harris and Buddy Suma.

Bowling . . .

The last of the Hap Newman-sponsored matches for the benefit of the March of Dimes will be rolled tonight. Of particular interest will be the event at Ice Palace at 8 p. m., where Ice Palace, Men's Minor League pacesetters, tackle Tom's Auto Service, Men's Major League favorites. Pat Crescenzi, with an average of 124.27, leads the league, and his Ice Palace teammates—Jack Moulton, Mark Waldron, Billy Townsend and Ralph Gordon—are all high in the standings. The automotive quint will be made up of Moe Meade, Johnny Ressa, Nick Rinaldi, Howard Parsons and Joe Freschi—whose av rages run from 119 to 125.

Another polio benefit gets under way at 7 p. m. at the King Pin lanes, where Wilson Pontiac of the Bethesda League faces Wilson Pontiac of the Capital City loop. Mike Avon and Johnny Nicro are expected to bear the brunt of the work for the National Capital City outfit, while the Bethesda aggregation will rely on Marty Agee and Georgie Price.

Handicap experts from Baltimore and Virginia will vie with local timber-topplers in the Eighth Annual Brookland Men's Handicap tonight. Budd Tapp, Rosslyn ace, who bagged a 714, will defend his laurels. The competition, open only to bowlers from Washington and surrounding communities holding a 1948-49 city duckpin association card, offers $375 in prizes, with $75 as the top award. Rolloffs will be held between 2 and 10, and the five-game event is limited to keglers with league averages under 121. According to Manager Karl Gochenour, entry fee is $4.25, and handicap three fifths on a scratch of 120.

Plenty of hot rolling took place in the Greenway Commercial League, where Dargan's Cafe, in taking three from Cannon's, produced scores like: George Scribner 157-436; Wade Sheriff 174-415; Dick Gordon 149-405. The Dargan team had a 650-656-630, resulting in a season's team high of 1936.

Baker took three from Mann Decorators; Davis, aided by Ray Watson's 1666, swept three from A-1 Liquor; and M and M Express made a clean sweep over Perruso's.

Paced by Paul Moore, who rolled a 165-412, Brickerd's took all three from Quality Shop in the Prince Georges County Men's League at Hyattsville. El Geib had a 385 set for the losers. Sandy's took two out of three from Queen's Chapel Barbers;

Haight Tells of Skis On Sand, Kite-Flying

RECENTLY I WROTE A STORY about Joe Palmer, current motorboat racing sensation. He pens a note which reads, in part: "Never did I dream years ago, when I played with the Sterling A.C. in the old Washington Post Junior League, that the same man who ruled nine of our victories were not legal because another player and I were over-age, would some day write a big story about me. "I forgive you." . . . in answer to inquiry: the horse Air Hero is in stud at the Inglecress Farm of J. P. Jones at Charlottesville, Va. for $500 and a mare you might get a little Air Hero . . . skiing without snow has been successfully tried out on the steep sand dunes of North Carolina around Nags Head. By-the-way, kite-flying is a popular sport with the grown-ups down there near the scene of the Wright Brothers' first flight . . . Ed Curley, the New York turf writer, who died last week, saw every meeting at Hialeah since the tract opened, but often said his favorite oval was Charles Town, although he never won any money there. Jack Espey has been retained as the public relations director for the Sportsmen's and Outdoors Show to be held indoors at the National Guard Armory, March 5 to 13 . . . from the magazine, Chesapeake Bay Skipper, famous last yachting words—"hand me a cigarette—I think I'll take a smoke while we're taking on gas." Horace (Happy) Walker is the new executive secretary of the Washington Marine Trade Association. Happy boating.

Haight

NEXT TO SHOOTING GAME, what do you think the hunters prefer as a target? The Wisconsin Conservation Commission will tell you hunting signs, while bemoaning the fact they are expensive, too . . . if you want to hunt, shoot crows—there's a bounty on their bills in Maryland . . . the flat horse racing people used to battle against the harness racing people, and visa versa. Now both are lined up against the quarter horse people—at least in California where there is a bill in the Legislature to legalize wagering on the speedy, but short-winded cattle steeds . . . on the Ever Sharp sponsored $64 program last week a woman, asked what she received as a gift, replied, "A beautiful Parker pen." Reminds me of the time Lou Gehrig, a paid performer on a program for the cereal, Huskies, was asked what he ate for breakfast and he replied, "Wheaties, of course." . . . if Maryland U. is looking for basketball material in the rough, it might do worse than look over Basil Dawson, the 6-foot 3-inch and 16-year-old youngster about whom I banged out a muskrat trapping story recently. He's in the tenth grade—adress Churchton, Md. . . . did you ever hear of Horse No. A-1291? Well, that's the lip-tattoo number of Citation for identification purposes. By-the-way, Steve Genzi, who rubbed Armed and now handles Citation, has been assigned the Calumet Farms' 2-year-old, Urgent, a brother of the mare Miss Keeneland who was well-known in Maryland in her racing days . . . now that the wildfowl shooting season is over, the ducks are having a swell time around Chesapeake Bay and by the thousands . . . my friends wintering in Florida (dog-rat 'em) say that the big money guys aren't around as they were in the days when I wrote from Miami about seeing the man with a diamond-studded hearing aid.

THE NATS, PICKED TO FINISH in the International League next season, look better on paper than they did before the 1945 season, when they finished a close second—but the opposition is different . . . Nats' Vice President Calvin Griffith, in the role of sports quizmaster before the Silver Spring Lions Club, asked, "How many seasons did Clark Griffith win 20 games?" Some wise-cracker in the rear of the hall yelled, "As a manager or pitcher?" For the record, the Old Fox turned the trick six times . . . I know a football team that has not signed a new coach since last season . . . "Why not let those college boxers fight in suits of armor?" asked a ring fan, after seeing the picture of the rah rah boys in their new protective headgears. All kidding aside, the gadgets are ok in my book. After all, boys are sent to college to get sheepskins, not cauliflowers, even if they major in botany . . . I was on the District Round Table (WINX) with George (Redskins) Marshall recently and as usual, he was not at a loss for words. In 1941, at San Diego, we were in an elevator with some radio guys on the way to a half-hour show aimed at drumming up trade for a 'Skins game and the director said, "We might have an interval of some three minutes left over. If such is the case, Mr. Marshall, could you adlib for that period?" One of the players grunted, "Mister, he could adlib for three centuries" . . . I quit golf when my boy out-drove me. Herb Goodman quit when his wife out-scored him, three weeks after she took up the game. Mrs. G. went on to be a topflight tournament player . . . Willie Hoppe is defending his cue title again, last of the Ruth, Jones, Tilden, Man O'War era still in competitive action . . . See you at Bowie.

Lloyd Mangrum Has 68 to Maintain 2-Stroke Lead in Tucson Tourney

Al Smith, Riegel Tie For Second

Tucson, Ariz., Feb. 5 (AP).—Lloyd Mangrum, Chicago, Ill., "salvaged" a 68 from what he called a "bad" round of golf, to hang on to a two-stroke lead over the field today at the end of the third round in the $10,000 Tucson open with a record 12-under par 198.

In posting his third straight sub-par round over the par 70, level 6500-yard El Rio Country Club course, the former GI out of Angeles shattered a record for 54 holes of 199 strokes. This mark twice had been fired by Jimmy Demaret, Ojai, Calif., and tied last year by South Africa's Bobby Locke.

Skee Reigel, the Tulsa Okla., amateur who had tied Mangrum at the halfway mark with 130s yesterday, scrambled for a par 70 and a two-way tie for second place at an even 200 with Al Smith, a comparative unknown out of Winston-Salem, N. C., who had a 5-under par 65. Smith never has won a major tournament, but he has twice won the Gainesville, Fla., open.

Stranahan at 201

Amateur Frank Stranahan Toledo, Ohio, fired a 69 today to stay close to the leaders with 201. He was tied for third place with Eric Monti, Santa Monica, Calif.

Boyish Fred Hawkins, Antioch, Ill., who held third place to himself yesterday, had a bad first nine today but rallied on the home stretch to finish with a one-over par 71 for a 202 mark. He was tied with Lew Worsham, Washington, D. C., and Johnny Bulla, Pittsburgh.

Although spectators might have seen little, if anything, wrong with Mangrum's game, the unofficial money champ of the 1948 pro circuit crumbled.

"I certainly shot a poor game today," he said. "If you can shoot a 68 and still play lousy golf, I should be happy though."

Misses Putt.

Mangrum muffed a five-foot putt for a birdie on the eighteenth.

Demaret, the California fashion plate and the pretournament favorite to win, moved up from an eighteenth-place tie to a four-way tie for ninth with a 203. Grouped with him were Clayton Haefner, Charlotte, N. C., the veteran Toney Penna, Cincinnati, O., and Jim Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y.

Horton Smith, Detroit, who started out as a strong contender with a 36-hole total of 135, faded today. He blew to a 77 and a total of 212.

Skip Alexander, the Tucson Open defending champion from Southern Pines, N. C., appeared likely to finish out of the money, his 54-hole total of 212 is two over par.

The leaders:

Lloyd Mangrum	130	68—198
Al Smith	135	65—200
*Skee Riegel	130	70—200

Everyone Wants To Advise Champ

By Red Smith

Copyright, 1949, N. Y. Herald Tribune

FOR AGUY WHO has got to be a big boy now, old enough to know his own mind, who has always been entirely capable of counting his change and who has thought and talked and punched straight all his life, Joe Louis gets a monstrous lot of advice.

Red Smith

If he visits Miami, he is doubled-teamed across the luncheon table by Mike Jacobs and Sol Strauss. This, by the way, is a rewarding experience, for when Sol scrutinizes a contract he removes his glasses, when he listens he disconnects his hearing aid and when he eats he takes out his teeth. If Joe ventures within reach of the long-distance phone, Eddie Eagan has him on the wire. If he reads any literature of more recent vintage than Beowulf, counsel leaps at him from the printed page.

The advice is simple and forthright. It goes: "Scram, bub, while all your buttons are still sewed on and your fame is secure;" and, "don't be a sap, unless you hate money." To please his friends, Joe needs only to go into retirement and fight all comers from there.

Meanwhile, he is keeping in a large gloved paw on the public pulse. The coarse, untidy bales of folding money which he is collecting on his exhibition tour must make it apparent to him that there's still plenty of ore in the lode he has been working since 1934. A punch in the snoot has a higher trade-in value for Louis than for any one else in the world.

THE EASE WITH which he has been winning those pillow fights in the sticks, slapping the local talent around like an indulgent parent and stiffening those who try to get fresh, must have convinced him that he is still several stages removed from rigor mortis.

He must know he is no longer the Louis of 1938 but he can fairly ask who is, who ever was?

This typewriter is operated by one of the few benighted slobs extant who are so uninformed as to know none of the intimate details of Joe's financial position. He is either rich or poor or maybe somewhere in between. He is reputed to be a swift hand with a buck, and he is a rare bird, indeed, if he can't find use for more money than he has.

Well, all right. He is a professional prize fighter, he cannot continue being a professional prize fighter all his life. If he has had enough, he is certainly entitled to retire. Not the public nor the promoters nor any of his opponents could complain that he had shortchanged them.

On the other hand, professional prize fighters fight for money. Hardly any of them walk away from an open cash drawer under their own power. As a matter of fact most of them stick around keeping a cauliflower ear cocked for that alluring tinkle of silver longer than is good for them.

IT IS ARGUED THAT the promoters want Joe to fight again only because they want him whipped. In a sense this is true. For business purposes it is best to keep the heavyweight title in circulation, handing it along in a direct line of succession. Given their choice, the promoters would like Joe to keep the title and defend it against all comers until somebody took it away from him in the ring.

The promoters are not, however, engaged in a conspiracy to lure Louis back into the ring to get him licked next time out. On the contrary, they'd prefer that he continue as champion until a successor came along who would be as valuable a drawing card as he. It is inconceivable that they would rather see the crown worn by Ezzard Charles or Lee Savold or Joe Baksi or Bruce Woodcock or Jersey Joe Walcott or Freddy Mills or Olle Tandberg.

Incidentally Tandberg, that large, pink and gentle lump of smorgasbord, outpointed some character named Stephen Olek the other night in a bout bille das a semifinal for the European heavyweight championship. That's an indication of what we'd be in for if Joe stepped aside and tossed his title up for grabs. There'd be an elimination tournament to eliminate customers.

WELL IF JOE DOESN'T retire he's got to get licked, maybe get knocked out. That is not a particularly terrifying prospect for a professional prize fighter. It happened to Louis and it didn't permanently impair him as an attraction or as a fighter. It happened to every heavyweight champion except Gene Tunney and, until he became unretired after five idle years, Jim Jeffris.

It is no discredit to a champion to lose his title in a fair fight. For every sentimentalist who argues that Joe should retire while the memory of his greatness remains untarpished there is another, equally sentimental, who insists that the privilege of losing by a knockout is a champion's due. To those who recoil at the thought of seeing a great champion go fumbling through more turkeys like the Louis-Walcott bouts, the answer is: "Does the prospect of a Tandberg-Woodcock match attract you more?"

This is not an effort to argue that Louis should fight again. Joe will get no advice from this corner. He has a decision to make and he is the guy who must make it. Let's all stand off and give him air.

Braves Deny Sponsoring Coast Semipro Team

Boston, Feb. 5 (AP).—Harry Jenkins, farm chief of the Boston Braves, who have been charged with violating baseball law by Vice President Charles J. Graham of the San Francisco Seals, retorted late today:

"If it's against baseball law to send a semipro club a set of uniforms then we are guilty."

"This Bill Marshall," added Jenkins, "used to be with one of our farm clubs. After severing connection with us he began running a semipro team in the 'Frisco area. He asked us for uniforms. We complied as we do in every case we can."

Graham said in San Francisco his proof of the alleged tampering by the Boston National League Club was based on the circumstances surrounding the signing, by Marshall, of Shortstop Wally Jackson, who was graduated from high school February 1.

Graham added he had a box score "showing" Jackson played for the Bayside Braves in San Francisco and that a roster of that semipro team showed Marshall was its manager. "We insist," said Graham, "the Braves were the sponsor of that club."

Passes Up Bills

Scott Signed By Champion Phila. Eagles

Philadelphia, Feb. 5 (AP).—The Philadelphia Eagles today signed Clyde (Smackover) Scott as the third member of what they consider the greatest offensive trio in football.

President Jim Clark of the National Football League champions watched Scott autograph a one-year contract and then exclaimed:

"Boy, now we have it. Steve Van Buren running inside; Clyde Scott running outside and Tommy Thompson pitching through the air. They may as well give us the 1949 NFL title now."

The Eagles declined to disclose terms of the contract given the University of Arkansas back—second nationally known grid ace signed by Philadelphia in a week. Charley (Chuck) Bednarik, University of Pennsylvania all-American center, joined the club Tuesday.

New Colt Scout

Baltimore, Feb. 5 (AP).—Dr. George Bennett, widely known for his surgery on ailing athletes, was disclosed today also as a volunteer football scout for the Baltimore Colts of the All-America Conference.

The Colts gave Dr. Bennett credit for an assist in an announcement of the signing of Joe Colone, Penn State fullback and captain.

Colone came to Dr. Bennett for removal of a bone spur on his shoulder. During consultations the orthopedic surgeon kept suggesting Baltimore would be a nice place to play.

Colone agreed when he was offered a contract on Dr. Bennett's recommendation. He had been a choice of the Detroit Lions in the rival national football league.

$46,000 in Louis Gates

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—Joe Louis has drawn a gross gate of $460,000 by engaging in boxing exhibitions the past three months, Marshall Miles, manager of the world's champion, said today. Of this sum, the champion wrapped $160,000 around his own bank roll.

Baseball—From P. C-1

DiMag Still Not Signed

he expects to draw as much as last year's all-time record.

Neither DiMaggio nor Feller are holdouts officially. The clubs insist they don't call any man a holdout until March 1, when he is due to report for spring training. Nevertheless, the players and management are not in agreement.

The New York Giants have the best signing record with all but one of their players on the dotted line. Catcher Walker Cooper is the only stubborn Giant.

DeWitts Deny Deal

Most of the other clubowners classified their weekend trip to New York as "social" instead of "business." No deals were reported in the making tonight.

Bill and Charley DeWitt, who just took over as owners of the St. Louis Browns, were called upon to deny rumor they were trading Third Baseman Bob Dillinger to the New York Yankees for Third Baseman Bill Johnson and $100,000.

"Nothing to it," said Charley DeWitt. "We haven't talked to the Yankees in a month. We're always deal minded. After all you don't stand pat with a second division club. But we have nothing on the fire right now."

Earlier in the day, Billy Evans, general manager of the Detroit Tigers, expressed a hope that his attempts to deal with the Browns for Second Baseman Gerry Priddy might have a better chance under the new ownership. There were no negotiations.

Eastern League Boosts Limit

The Eastern League increased its player limit from 18 to 19 men at a special session. This conforms with a recent decision to boost the monthly salary limit from $5,400 to $5,700 for each team.

While the moguls swapped talk in hotel rooms and lobbies, the baseball writers polished their skits for the annual show. Television and its influence on baseball will be the subject of several sketches.

The list of speakers for the dinner include Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York; Art (Bugs) Baer, and Roscoe McGowen, national president of the baseball writers.

St. Gabriel's Wins CYO Title

St. Gabriel's and Blessed Sacrament clinched section titles in the Catholic Youth Organization basketball tournament yesterday.

St. Gabriel's defeated St. Anthony's, 31-29, at Nativity gym to cop the Section I championship. The Section III crown went to Blessed Sacrament, 47-32 conqueror of Sacred Heart on the St. Anne's court.

Other results:

Section I—St. Michael's 28, St. Francis de Sales 26; Nativity 49, St. Bernadette's 27.

CYO Intermediate Negro League—Holy Redeemer 25, St. Augustine's 24; St. Cyprian's 42, Fides House 32.

Priory Defeats St. Anthony's

Priory High School chalked up its thirteenth straight win of the season, downing St. Anthony's, 43-33, in a nonleague tilt on the Priory court. St. Anthony's center, Joe Bezek, did the lion's share of scoring for the day, netting a high total of 17 points.

High Pressure Golf Leaves Demaret Cool

11 Days of Tourney Golf in Row No Strain

By Whitney Martin

NEW YORK, Feb. 5 (AP).—Jimmy Demaret finished his eleventh straight day of competitive golf a few days ago, and during that time he tied for first place with Ben Hogan in two consecutive tournaments, and they took turns winning the playoffs.

That kind of competition for the top money would seem to be a short cut to a nervous breakdown.

If we had to pick one man who could stand the strain of 11 days or 111 days of competitive golf without a rest and still be fit to associate with his fellow man, he would be Jimmy Demaret. He isn't just relaxed; he's limp.

We've never seen him when he couldn't summon a friendly grin, or make a wise crack. In a big tournament, while others are making their rounds with that joyful, carefree expresssion of a man marching to the gallows, Jimmy ambles along with the nonchalant abandon of a guy who can't break 100, and doesn't particularly care whether he does or not.

YOU CAN spot him anywhere on the course, unless you are color blind. If there is a color missing in his vast collection of shirts, jersies, slacks and hats, he'd be glad if you called his attention to it. He aims to please.

He told us once that he had something like 70 pairs of slacks and 100 shirts, in addition to 20 pairs of shoes, 20 hats, 16 tams and innumerable miscellaneous articles of apparel.

The flamboyant getups he affects make him look like, from a distance, a sunset [illegible] shake topped with whipped cream and a cherry. He dazzles and delights the eye, but personally we think his choice of attire is the trademark of a carefree and serene disposition.

We've followed him often on his rounds. Sometimes he would be in the thick of the fight for first money in a big tournament. At other times he would be out of the running, and just playing it out to turn in a card.

YOU'D NEVER know from his demeanor which it was. He always was the same cheerful guy, ready with a big hello, his ruddy face creased by a large grin. And his spontaneous quips really are something.

He's a little on the chubby side, adding to the impression that he is just taking it easy and letting the other fellows do the worrying. Boyish might size [illegible] pretty well.

Even Holds Hogan To Split in 2 Playoffs

But his rivals have found his good nature and casual approach to his job hide a fierce competitive spirit. Those few moments when he is sizing up a shot, taking his stance, and swinging, he is all business.

And business is pretty good, thank you.

Central, Eastern Romp, Strengthen First Division Berths

Riders Lose, 56-33, Tribe Bows, 46-33

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Eastern's Ramblers and Central's Vikings scored victories on yesterday's Interhigh doubleheader program before 1086 fans at the Armory, and strengthened their first division berths.

Eastern whipped Anacostia, 46-33, the second game, after Central romped over Roosevelt, 56-33.

Eastern's wir was its fourth in five starts and moved the Ramblers into a tie for second place with idle Coolidge. Central took sole possession of fourth place with its fifth win in seven games.

Jim Lamon, cousin of American U. Star, Bob Lamon, contributed 14 points to Eastern's cause, scoring mostly from the pivot slot.

Seventeen players saw action for the Ramblers, who led 17-9, 29-15, and 40-20, at the end of the first three quarters. Roland Erickson notched 12 for Anacostia, which was never in contention.

As in their five previous successes, the Vikings had Jimmy Pantos to thank for their victory The Riders held Pantos to two field goals in the first half, but the short wiry forward broke loose in the second half to wind up with16.

Even when he was being tightly guarded in the first half, Jimmy didn't stand by idly. He passed off beautifully to his teammates, and fed four field goals to Jack Stringer and three to Bill Dunker.

Central led all the way, 14-8, 28-17, and 42-22, at the end of the first three quarters.

The crowd gave its biggest hand to Bob Myers, Central's rapidly improving 6-foot 9-inch reserve center, who came in with two minutes left, and immediately dropped in a pivot shot.

Joe McCarthy Contends His Club Is Team to Beat

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. (U.P.).—Joe McCarthy broke his winter-long silence today by warning the American League that his Boston Red Sox were going to be tough this year.

And looking at the ruddy faced, well-rested McCarthy as he settled back in a sofa, one could see he meant just that. He has spent the off-season "taking it easy" on his pleasant 60-acre farm just outside Buffalo and appeared in good health.

'I'm not at all worried about the Red Sox," Joe said with quiet confidence. "The club that wins will have to beat us."

While the champion Cleveland Indians and the New York Yankees scurried about making trades and buying new blood during the winter months, the Red Sox stood pat on the team which finished second a year ago.

"I think we were as good as any ball club in the league at the close of last season," Joe explained. "And with some of our younger players coming along and a good crop of rookies coming up, we should be better this year."

He feels he is set in the outfield with the power-hitting Ted Williams, the sharp-fielding Dom DiMaggio, Sam Mele and Stan Spence. Johnny Pesky at third, Vern Stephens at shortstop and Bobby Doerr at second base are fixtures in the infield. The catching is adequate with George (Birdie) Tebbetts and Matt Batts. Only the pitching staff and first base appear possible headaches.

Even first base may be a pleasant surprise. Billy Goodman came along fast late last season after being installed as regular guardian of the initial sack. And McCarthy is keen on the prospects of huge Walt Dropo, who had a trial a year ago but was farmed out to Louisville and Birmingham, Ala. The towering rookie hits that valuable long ball.

Howard Ties In Swim Meet

Hampton, Va., Feb. 5 (AP)—A broken diving board cost Hampton Institute's swimmers a victory today in a dual meet with Howard University of Washington, D. C. The meet ended in a 37-37 tie.

The incident forced the Hampton swimmers to forfeit the diving events to their opponents and robbed Hampton of an opportunity to make up for a previous defeat. Hampton's Bob Bethel was star of the meet, winning three events, the 100, 220, and 440 yard free style races.

For World Tourney

AEF Boxing Champs Win Trip to D. C.

Finals in the Army European command's boxing tournament were held yesterday in Munich and the eight winners won free air trips to the United States.

They'll leave Tuesday and immediately start serious preparations for the world-wide All-Army championships at Fort Myer, Feb. 21-26, where they'll defend the team title they won in the first big Army boxing show last year in Chicago.

A Washingtonian qualified as the hard-luck soldier in the entire European command. Pfc. Harvey Barnes, 329 T st. nw., won his lightweight semifinal match Friday night but fractured his right hand and had to forfeit to Pvt. George Edmunds, Hartford, Conn.

In all, three knockouts were scored on the seven-bout card. Flyweight George Davis, Long Branch, N. J., kayoed Josi Shimabukuro, Honolulu; Middleweight Austin Jones, Philadelphia, stopped Dan Valenzuela, Los Angeles, and Heavyweight Elie Bogalle, Long Island, put away David Wesley, Chicago.

Accompanying the squad as coach will be Lt. Howard W. McCormack, 9120 Sudbury rd., Silver Spring.

An eight-man battle royal, thought to be two below par, will start off wrestling festivities at Uline tomorrow night. With a combined weight of nearly a ton, the eight grapplers will decide the order of bouts.

It works this way: first two men out will come back to start off the regular show's first match, etc. The two remaining at the end of the battle royal will be matched in the one-fall, one-hour time limit feature.

Here's the lineup: Wally Dusek, Arnold Skaaland, Swedish "Orchid Boy," Tarazan Frank Hewitt, Paddy Mack, Red Kirkpatrick, George Lenihan, Joe Ludlum and Bill Clancy.

The league-leading Caps get a better break from the BAA schedule-maker this week with two home games. After their engagement at Fort Wayne tonight, the Caps return to face the powerful Rocheser Royals at Uline on Wednesday and Joe Fulks' Philadelphia Warriors on Saturday.

The D. C. Table Tennis Association sponsors a ranking tournament 5 p. m. today at the Ice Palace.

Gonzaga Wins, 55-26

Gonzaga High School added De Matha of Hyattsville to its already lengthy string of victories by swamping their visitors 55-26 in a Catholic High School League game yesterday at Uline Arena.

Though every man on the Gonzaga squad scored in the lopsided affair, it was Ronnie Richardson, De Matha guard, who emerged with high scoring honors of 13 points. Gonzaga's sharp shooting forward, Tippy Larkins, was runnerup with 11.

The conquest boosted Gonzaga's record to 14 and one but did not alter their position of second place in the League standing.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Price of Groceries Heads Lower

Here's another sign—a subtle, long-term sign—that the price of groceries is headed downward: The money market's easier. And at a time when it's not supposed to be.

Money in circulation is off a billion dollars—3½ per cent—since the week before Christmas. Business loans of commercial banks that report weekly to the Federal Reserve System are down 230 million dollars, a drop of 1½ per cent. And the Government bond market is stronger. Long-term 2½s of June 1967-72, which had been selling smack on the Federal Reserve support price of 100¼ are now around 100¾. Result: Thomas B. McCabe, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, and Secretary of the Treasury Snyder can relax a bit.

Livingston

True, money in circulation and loans outstanding customarily drop after the Christmas rush. For one thing, payrolls ease off. That means business firms need less cash for pay envelopes. For another thing, as holiday merchandise is sold, manufacturers, wholesalers, and retailers pay off their bank debt. That makes for looser money. But there's an offsetting influence: The first-of-the-year tax bulge.

Caution Disappears

Businessmen and individuals pay installments to the Collector of Internal Revenue on January and March 15. That draws down their deposits at commercial banks. In turn, it drains commercial banks of their reserve—of their capacity to make loans and purchase securities. Thus, since the end of the year, member bank excess reserves are down from $1,050,000,000 to 920 million dollars.

Under these circumstances, you'd expect commercial banks to be cautious about adding to investments, about buying Government bonds. Last year at this time they were heavy sellers. Some banks sold in anticipation of tax withdrawals. They wanted to build up reserves, increase their liquidity. And some sold because just before Christmas the Federal Reserve dropped its buying price on United States bonds. Bankers, insurance companies, and others feared a further drop.

A Presidential Prop

Today such fears are virtually nonexistent among bond buyers. In 11 weeks, commercial banks, savings banks, insurance companies, and individuals have bought from the Federal Reserve System a billion dollars of United States bonds. As of January 26, Federal Reserve holdings of bonds amounted to $10,265,000,000, as compared with $11,223,000,000 on November 10. Savings banks have been particularly heavy purchasers.

Yet, up to November, holders of United States bonds could not sell them fast enough to the Federal Reserve Banks (see chart). The Fed bought long-term issues and, to counteract the inflationary impact of such purchases, sold short-term issues.

This new-found confidence in the bond market is traceable to President Truman's statement in his Economic Report to Congress: "An important factor in this program [of economic stability] will continue to be the maintenance of stability in the Government bond market." The President's Council of Economic Advisers amplified that by saying: "It would be a serious error to introduce new elements of uncertainty and possible financial disturbances which would follow a change of policy with respect to the support of bond prices."

LONG AND SHORT OF THE PEG
Federal Reserve Banks buy bonds and sell Treasury certificates, notes and bills.

What About Bread Prices?

The demand for bonds is also due to internal money market conditions. Wholesale and retail prices have been coming down. Businessmen who buy wheat, corn, or cotton need less money to carry their inventories. Layoffs continue. As one company, like the Chesapeake & Ohio, calls back workers, another company, like New York Central, will let some go. That cuts down on payroll requirements. And retail sales, generally, have not been expanding.

Post-Christmas price markdowns have had diminishing results. In the week ended January 8, department store sales registered a gain of 8 per cent over the corresponding week of 1948; in the week of the 15th, the gain was 5 per cent; the 22d, 2 per cent. And this week, sales were down 7 per cent—partly attributable to snow and cold in the Western areas. Examples: Sales in the Kansas City Reserve District were off 18 per cent; in San Francisco 10 per cent.

This hesitancy in business generally is certain to cause some hesitancy on the part of borrowers. Temporarily, at any rate, businessmen are less apt to want to borrow—especially for expansion. Bank loans, therefore, will not add to the general money supply as rapidly as in the past. Indeed, that's already evident. At this time in 1947, business loans of reporting member banks were up $4,300,000,000 over the preceding year; at this time in 1948, they were up $3,100,000,000; this year they're up only 650 million dollars. And this years' rate of contraction from the Christmas high has been much greater than in either 1948 or 1947.

This merely adds to evidence already at hand that supply and demand are in better balance. And it suggests that price readjustment has further to go. It will be interesting to see what happens to bread. Important ingredients like flour, evaporated or powdered milk, and shortening are off noticeably from their peaks. The retail price may follow.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—The slump in grains was brought to a halt today. In a nervous, active trade prices of wheat, corn and oats ended mostly higher after selling off again during early dealings on the Board of Trade.

Other commodities were not as steady as these basic cereals. Lard, which had held above its seasonal lows in yesterday's selloff, slumped into new low territory today and ended with wide losses. Soybeans worked slightly lower. Rye dropped sharply in its usual thin trade.

Wheat closed ¼ to 1 cent higher; corn was ⅝ lower to 1 cent higher; oats were ⅛ to ⅞ higher; rye was 4 to 4½ lower; soybeans were ¼ to 1 cent lower and lard was 32 to 40 cents a hundred pounds lower.

In the early sell-off, all corn, soybeans, rye and lard futures made new lows since trading in the various contracts started. So did September and December wheat. May oats touched its low, but did not go through it. In general, oats had a good undertone.

Whether today's halt in the slump meant grains had reached a bottom, or merely paused before plunging to new low levels, was a subject of trade debate at the close.

New York Cotton

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Cotton futures today suffered the heaviest losses in many weeks. Trading was the largest for a short session since the resumption of Saturday dealings last summer. At one time prices tumbled as much as $2.80 a bale before buying halted the decline. Final prices were 95 cents to $1.30 a bale lower.

The market started lower on an overnight accumulation of selling orders. Shortly after initial dealings, the selling movement broadened. This accompanied sharp declines in cottonseed oil. News that prices for print cloth in the Worth Street textile market on Friday were reduced ¼ of a cent a yard also contributed to the selling.

In late trading futures retraced more than half of early losses as short covering encountered smaller offerings. The late buying was attributed to relative steadiness in grain markets.

Store Sales Here in First Dip of Year

By S. Oliver Goodman

The first dip of the year in Washington department store sales was reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

Local dollar volume in the week ended January 29 was reported 1 per cent less than in the same 1948 week. Elsewhere, the week's decline was more pronounced. In the Fifth Federal Reserve District, store sales slipped 6 per cent and nationally a slump of 7 per cent was recorded.

For the four weeks ended January 29, local store sales remained 11 per cent greater than in the same 1948 period. Regionally, the four-week gain was 7 per cent and the national increase narrowed to 2 per cent.

Dun & Bradstreet, in its weekly comment, stated that weather conditions had an adverse effect on retail trade. Clogged and ice-glazed roads hindered would-be buyers.

Another situation holding local merchants' interest was the ever-present resistance to high prices in the retail field. Post-Christmas sales set records for dollar volume, but in most cases these high totals were made at the expense of profit margins forced down by price cutting. There was a ray of encouragement in the large movement of goods into the hands of consumers and off the store shelves. It helped reduce inventories.

SALES IMPROVE: Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., reported January sales of $3,733,670, an increase of $215,049 or 6 per cent over the same 1948 month. Treasurer W. H. Churchill noted that the chain operated 140 stores in January as compared with 136 in the like 1948 month.

PROMOTIONS: J. C. Coppinger has been promoted to Washington branch manager of Lawyers Title Insurance Corp. Coppinger, for the past six years title officer, succeeds James T. Knight, who has been transferred to the home office in Richmond, where he will be engaged in business development in the national field. Malcolm S. McCollum will be assistant manager and Carlton U. Trexler will be in charge of production and business development.

Coppinger

SURPLUS RISES: The Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York reported a net gain of $29,063,300 for 1948, compared with $29,762,600 for 1947. As a result of 1948 operations, the company's surplus was increased by $12,836,600 and the remaining $16,226,700 was set aside for dividends to policyholders. The addition brought total surplus to $145,579,300. Benefits to policyholders totaled $115,529,000 in 1948. Insurance in force increased $107,297,800 in 1948 to a total of $4,221,160,100.

THE SALES FRONT: Manufacturers' sales totaled 210 billion dollars in 1948, an increase of 12 per cent over 1947, the Commerce Department reported yesterday. The increase was due chiefly to higher prices, and the increase in the volume of goods was small, the department said. Inventories held by manufacturers were at a record high of $31,700,000,000. The increase of $3,700,000,000 in 1948 was well below the $4,600,000,000 increase in 1947. But the department said the increase in physical inventory was about the same in both years. Smaller price rises in 1948 made the difference.

BANK NETS OFF: Net profits of Federal Reserve member banks totaled 626 million dollars for 1948, a decrease of 27 million from the year before, the Federal Reserve Board reported. Net earnings before income taxes and other adjustments totaled $1,031,000,000, an increase of 102 million dollars, the board said. Earnings from loans increased by 237 million dollars to a total of $1,281,000,000, but earnings from Government securities declined 68 million dollars to a total of 853 million dollars.

RECORD ASSETS: Assets of Eastern Building & Loan Association increased a million dollars in 1948 and reached a new record of $12,241,633, shareholders were told at the annual meeting. Savings climbed $900,000 during the year and now stand at $12,241,635. Directors were elected as follows: Walter M. Bastian, T. Earle Bourne, Charles A. Carry, S. Dolan Donohoe, R. Edward Early, Osbourn Owings, William N. Payne, jr., J. Chester Pyles and J. Chester Pyles, jr. Directors meeting later elected Payne as president; Carry, vice president; Early, secretary-treasurer; Herman Schwertner, auditor; Thomas R. Harrison and Jerry S. Davis, assistant treasurers.

Heavy Selling Pushes Stocks To New Lows

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Stock prices cracked to the lowest average level of the year in a fast two-hour session today.

It was the second drop in a row. In two days nearly two billion dollars have been cut off the market value of all shares listed on the exchange.

Saturday's dive was the steepest since November 1. On that day the market was swamped with post-election selling orders.

Seventy-one stocks plunged to new lows for 1948-49 and individual losses ranged from fractions to more than 3 points. Hardest hit were the stocks of such basic industries as steel, oil, rubber, and railroads.

Wall Street blamed deflation and falling commodities. Notable, though, was the fact that the general public stuck to the hands-off policy which has been maintained for months. Professional elements in the financial district accounted for most of the activity.

Sales amounted to 790,000 shares, largest for any Saturday since November 6. Only 77 of the 951 issues which changed hands closed higher while 715 declined.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks lost 1.2 point at 63.4, the widest drop since 2 full points were clipped from the average on November 9. The average is now at the year's low first established on January 3, which in turn was a low since November 30.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Sat.	Fri.
Advances	77	134
Declines	715	686
Unchanged	159	206
Total issues	951	1026

In addition to the atmosphere of deflation as a selling factor, brokers reported a specific reason:

The drop in commodities has hit hard at speculators who have been trading in such futures markets as wheat, corn and cotton. Calls for additional margin money have gone out of brokerage offices almost every night. A large part of the money called for has been raised by selling stocks. Steadier commodity prices, it was suggested, would relieve the stock market of a good deal of this kind of pressure.

A WORD TO MEN WHO ARE JITTERY ABOUT 1949
from THE WALL STREET JOURNAL

"Bad news about business can be a good thing. It can prevent a business recession."

So said Bernard Kilgore, President of Dow, Jones & Co., Inc., publishers of The Wall Street Journal, in a recent interview.

"Adverse stories on business have made people cautious," said the publisher. "Such news calls attention to a situation, and the trouble is usually corrected as a result. A depression or recession is an accumulation of things not corrected. Business men are jittery, and this is all to the good. It keeps them from over-extending."

Bad News as Well as Good News

The reports in The Wall Street Journal are frank and outspoken. When the Journal finds a "soft spot" in the business picture, the facts are reported quite candidly. This helps to prevent a small development from becoming a major trend.

On the other hand, when there is good news about business, The Journal is delighted to report it, and you can be sure that the report is ACCURATE.

Because the reports in The Wall Street Journal come to you DAILY, you get the fastest possible warning of any new trend that may affect your business and personal income. You get the facts in time to take whatever steps are needed to protect your interests, or to seize quickly a new profit-making opportunity. You are promptly and reliably informed on every major new development relating to: Prices, Taxes, Inventories, Industries, Production Trends, Commodities, Securities, Marketing, Consumer Buying, Labor, World Trade, Finance and New Legislation.

$20 Spent May Save You $2000

A right decision may save you $2000. Or $20,000! A wrong decision may cost you thousands.

The Wall Street Journal helps you make right decisions. It is the complete business daily . . . has largest staff of writers on business and finance. The only business paper served by all four big press associations. It costs $20 a year. Or you can get a Trial Subscription. $6 for 3 months—77 issues (in U. S. and possessions). Why not try it for the next 3 months . . . just tear out this ad and attach it to your check for $6 and mail. Or tell us to bill you. WP 2-6

1949 Pontiac Now on Display Here

ADDED SAFETY—This is the four-door de luxe Pontiac sedan in the Streamline series, now on display at all Washington area dealers. Forward thrust has been gained by lowering the hood. Added safety is compounded by reduced pillars and a curved windshield whose sweep has been increased nearly 6 inches. Both Pontiac Streamliner and Chieftain lines use a 120-inch wheelbase. Hydra-Matic transmissions are optional at extra cost.

Weather Plays Tricks on Fuel Oil Supplies

Houston, Tex., Feb. 5 (AP).—The weather has been playing tricks on the oil industry, particularly that part involving heating oil and gases, weather that had been expected in the East turned up in the West.

Eastern blizzards of a year ago brought many headaches, to say nothing of criticism from Congress and definite steps were taken by the industry to prevent supply and demand problems this winter.

Particularl emphasis was placed on increasing heating fuel oil stock When the first cold spell hit a few weeks ago, stocks dwarfed figures of a year earlier.

There was confidence that any oil shortages this winter would be temporary, resulting only from such matters as transportation hardships caused by the weather itself.

Good Supply Were Needed

So far, however, winter has been abnormally severe in the West and Southwest and many residents in the East have been wondering if snow would ever arrive.

The situation has been a tonic to oilmen. The severest cold spells have hit areas where petroleum and refined products are the most plentiful.

Two of the few warnings of possible heating fuel supply troubles to be made this winter have been in Texas, a State that in 1948 produced over three trillion cubic feet of natural gas and over 40 per cent of the Nation's crude oil.

North Texas areas twice have been warned to take it easy on consumption of natural gas during record low temperature periods.

This shift in "danger areas" permits the industry to make adjustments in production and refinery operations with greater certainty while planning for future months.

Automobile mileage is expected to break all records next summer. Each additional mile will require additional gasoline.

Fuel Stocks Ahead of 1948

All fuel oil stocks continue well ahead of a year ago. Gasoline, gaining rapidly during the winter season, is 12 million barrels ahead, light fuel oil 27 million, heavy fuel oil 34 million and kerosene 11 million.

Meanwhile, the industry's cycle of cutbacks is picking up speed. Additional crude oil production reductions became effective in Texas, Oklahoma and Mississippi this week.

Refinery operations are being reduced gradually, and American Petroleum Institute reports that for the week ended January 29 crude oil runs to stills dropped an average of 66,000 barrels daily.

The cutbacks still are being attributed to an end of supply shortages, but rumors of probable price declines within the next two or three months grow louder and louder.

4 Suffer Bruises As 2 Pennsylvania Cars Leave Rails

By The Associated Press

Bruises by four persons were the only injuries suffered yesterday when scores of passengers were shaken up in the derailment of two coaches on a Washington-New York Pennsylvania Railroad train.

Pennsylvania spokesmen said the last two cars on a 12-coach train jumped the tracks eight miles southwest of Baltimore. They said the derailment was caused when a generator dropped on the tracks from the undercarriage of the train in front of the next to last car.

The two cars plowed for 500 feet, tearing up the crossties, before grinding to a stop. They remained upright.

The railroad said three passengers were bruised insufficiently to require treatment. A bruised trainman was treated by a company physician when the train arrived in Baltimore. The derailment ocurred near Winans in Anne Arundel County.

The passengers from the last three cars were transferred to the other nine cars and the train continued to New York.

Towson, Md., Feb. 5 (AP).—Mrs. Enrico Caruso has taken up residence in this Baltimore suburb to write another book about her deceased husband, the renowned opera singer. Mrs. Caruso will say only that the book will be a "companion piece" to a biography she wrote about her husband three years ago.

More Oil...

You wanted it...
You got it...
You'll get still more!

LAST YEAR this country used a lot more oil than ever before. Oil and progress go together.

To help get you more oil, this company and its affiliates last year did the biggest job in their history. Plants and equipment had to be modernized and expanded in a hurry... new wells, refineries, tankers, pipelines—all the things it takes to get you more oil.

This big job could not have been done unless a sound business existed. It took organization. It took money... lots of it... about 100 million dollars more, in fact, than the entire year's earnings. It used up funds set aside for replacing worn-out equipment. It dipped heavily into savings. It took borrowed money, and money raised by selling assets.

Money made on the job went back into the job.

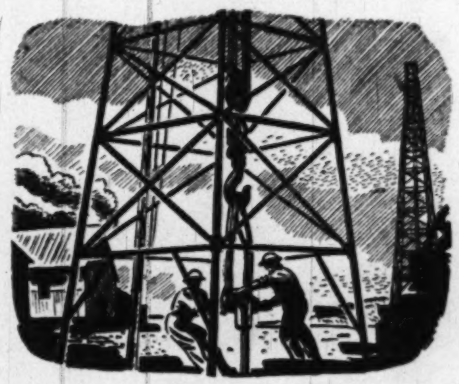
In 1949, and in the years to come, you'll want still more oil. And you'll get it. At home and abroad, money is being spent today to provide for tomorrow's needs.

The better you live, the more oil you use...

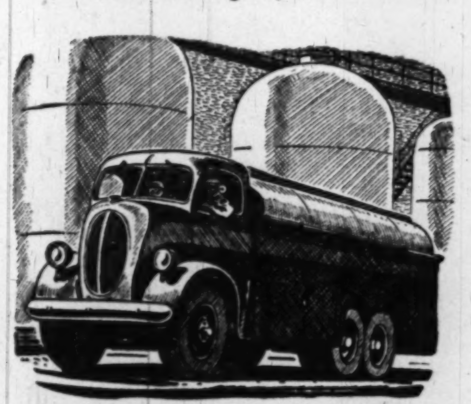
FOR STILL MORE OIL, WE'RE...

Pushing new exploration...

Constructing refineries...



Drilling deeper...



Adding storage and transport facilities...

Building tankers and pipelines...

Expanding research facilities...

Fashion Fiestas To Flower On Valentine Day

By Peggy Preston

ST. VALENTINE, if he were with us next February 14, would undoubtedly have to get into his best duds, and attend a fashion show.

The old fellow would have no alternative, if he wanted to be in the swing of things on the day that salutes his name. For every prominent Washingtonian, from the President and Mrs. Truman on down the line, have promised to turn out for one or the other of two big fashion events on Valentine Day.

There will be, for example, the gala Valentine Ball given at the Statler by the American Newspaper Women's Club, with the feature attraction a "Fantasy in Furs," in which well known women in official Washington will act as models. And, earlier in the day, several hundred guests will attend a fashion show-luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel for the benefit of the Washington Heart Association's 1949 fund raising campaign.

Both are being staged with considerable fanfare and glamour.

Trumans To Attend

THE Chief Executive and Mrs. Truman will occupy a box at the Valentine Ball and the list of patronesses include wives of Cabinet members and other top officials. Among those who will model in the "Fantasy of Furs" will be Mrs. Harold H. Burton, Mrs. Tom Clark, Mrs. John R. Steelman, Mrs. Clinton Anderson, Mrs. Max Truitt, Mrs. Robert Freer, all of whom are associate members of the club.

Furs shown will include Paris originals brought to Washington especially for the ball by Jandel Furs, Inc. Commentators for the show will be club members, Mrs. William Randolph Hearst and Mrs. Gladstone Williams.

New subscribers to the ball include Senator and Mrs. Owen Brewster, Assistant Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. A. Burks Summers, the Attache of the Belgian Embassy and Mme. Hubert, Senator and Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Associate Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. W. Stuart Symington, and Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin.

Rentner Collection

BEAUTIFUL clothes, a stage comedienne, and a baritone top the list of features on the program for the luncheon-show at the Shoreham.

Maurice Rentner's new collection, brought from New York for the occasion, will be presented by Julius Garfinckel & Co. Commentator will be Arlene Francis of stage and radio fame, and songs will be by Gene Archer, accompanied by Edward McIntire.

Proceeds from the event will go to the Washington Heart Association, which opens its fund drive for $75,000 Monday. The drive will continue through February 28. Mrs. Robert E. Moran is chairman of the show which is sponsored by the women's auxiliary of the District of Columbia Medical Society.

Tickets may be obtained by telephoning Sterling 7070, headquarters of the Washington Heart Association, or Mrs. Moran at Wisconsin 1616.

French Menu for Dior

THE Shoreham Hotel chef is preparing a decidedly French menu for the luncheon and fashion show to be given in the Blue Room on Saturday, March 5, under the patronage of Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador.

Guests have a thrill in store for them when models parade down the ramp in Christian Dior's new American collection with its Parisian chic.

Prizes will include a Dior dress, a Countess Mara tie which might well attract more than one interested male, a pair of shoes with accent on spring, and other items. There will be favors and entertainment.

Because the Blue Room's capacity is limited, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, chairman of the benefit, and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, Mrs. Harry K. Hickey and Mrs. George Y. Worthington, jr., and other patronesses warn that early reservations should be made with Mrs. Russell G. Nicklin at 1733 Connecticut ave.

Proceeds from the benefit go to "Fonds de Solidarite Universtaire de France," which is aiding needy French students at the Sorbonne and other schools in France.

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

TRULY a Valentine dress, to tempt the taste of any woman, is this rose beige organza, modeled for two members of the committee of physicians' wives who are sponsoring the luncheon-fashion show on February 14, for the benefit of the Washington Heart Association. Casting covetous eyes at this spring-like frock are, from left to right, Mrs. G. Louis Weller, jr., and Mrs. A. Frank Kreglow. The benefit will take place at the Shoreham Hotel, with fashions presented by Julius Garfinckel & Co.

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

THE difficult art of negotiating a proper turn on a runway is learned by two associate members of the American Newspaper Women's Club during a practice session at the Raleigh Hotel

Mrs. Tom Clark, left, wife of the Attorney General, and Mrs. John Steelman, wife of the Assistant to the President, are among the prominent Washington women who will make their debuts as mannequins in the "Fantasy in Furs" fashion parade which will be a feature of the Valentine Ball February 14 at the Statler Hotel. Above, they model a pair of twin stoles of silver-blue mink, high fashion items for spring, 1949

PROPER way to display a tricky sleeve of a ranch mink cape-jacket is shown Miss Marguerite Griffin at right, by Miss Janet Munder, stylist. Several of the fur pieces to be shown the night of the Newspaper Women's Club Ball will be Paris originals, brought to Washington especially for the event. Wraps for day and evening wear will be included

Party To Fete 'Merci Train' Committees

By Marie McNair

FRANCE'S woman Cabinet member, Mme. Marie Geoffroy, Minister of Veterans, and the Countess de Fels, head of the Paris committee for the French Merci Train, will attend the reception this afternoon at the Carlton Hotel following the official reception of the Merci Train.

The fete has been arranged by the National Friendship Train committee and the Association of American Railroads and a sizeable portion of official society will be there.

Following the reception the French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet will entertain at dinner for the Washington committee of the Friendship Train and the French delegation here with the Merci Train.

Other members of the French group are M. Junot, Louis Cast, president of the Association of Railroads employees; Auguste Lobjóis, vice president of the same organization; Major Guy de la Vasselais of the French army and several other officers of the railroad association.

Assisting at the reception this afternoon will be Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Edgar Mowrer, Mrs. Blair Buck, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Arlene Rolkin, all members of the Women's World Fellowship Committee, and Mrs. Ernestine Perry, vice president of the Women's World Fellowship organization, only international women's group represented on the Merci Train committee in France.

WASHINGTON actually knows little about Bess Truman, a Senator's wife for 10 years and No. 1 lady of the land since that fateful day in April 1945.

"Meet Harry's Boss, Bess," in the current issue of Colliers, is Elizabeth Asbury's behind-the-scenes story of Harry and Bess, from Independence to Washington.

Independence was surprised, like the rest of the country, says Miss Asbury, when Harry Truman was elected to the presidency. But it considers that the most impossible feat he ever achieved was the winning of Bess Wallace for his wife.

A crack tennis player, a superb athlete, Bess Wallace outplayed all of her suitors on the courts. Harry Truman was too

Some Go, Some Don't–Few Too Often

Parties for Congressmen Are Many, Well Attended, Mainly by 'Party Regulars'

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

GAGSTERS snicker there are three parties in Washington: Democrat, Republican and Cocktail. The cocktail party crept into the Capital scene during the First World War. Then, skyrocketing with living costs, achieved status of major social divertissement. Today, celebrities if they so wish, can (and sometimes do) attend an average of four parties daily during the winter season. Ingratiating persons, attracted by free liquor and meal-replacing spreads can, with small effort, run up an equal invitation score.

Just what is this menace which stung Senators Douglas and Morse to effervesce so entertainingly in print? "Congress should set an example" said Oregon's Morse sternly. "Simple living and fewer cocktail parties are in order." "I'd be willing to hold later afternoon and evening Senate committee hearings to escape the people who think a Senator's time should be taken up with cocktail parties," stated Illinois' freshman Senator. Generally speaking, the Washington cocktail party ranges from a few friends dropping in for a drink to a hotel rout for some 800 elbow lifters. The bigger affairs, to give them phony tone, are sometimes called receptions. The fine line is drawn, as far as caterers are concerned, when hams, turkeys and such substantial edibles are served. However, the liquid refreshment is similar.

Guests at these functions fall into three categories: Resident Washingtonians, congressional and diplomatic. Their cocktail party attendance is motivated from slightly differing angles. Residentials who, for the most part, are optimistically termed "social" come for three reasons: (1) They enjoy going out; (2) they feel their presence lends cachet to any function. (3) They're afraid of slipping into social oblivion if they stay home. Diplomats make a frantic round because, as a charming official of a former enemy country summed, "We must go everywhere we're asked. After all, that's our business."

Geographical Consideration

STATE DEPARTMENT officials cocktail geographically, seldom miss parties given by embassies falling in their particular sphere of interest. Congressional cocktailing varies from those who accept no invitations to those who squeeze in as many as time allows. A rugged freshman Senator from the far Middle West when queried replied, "I'm like that old fellow who said 'Ah never troubles trouble and trouble never troubles me.' I attend precisely the same number of cocktail parties in Washington as I do in my home State—which is NONE." The wife of a several term Southern Senator answered emphatically, "You can quote me as saying I feel it's an honor to be asked to a party. I accept whenever I can. I went out a lot at home and I do the same here." Pinned down about her husband's habits, she replied, "Well, he's so busy he seldom has time. He goes when he can and cocktail parties don't hurt him a bit. He loves people, doesn't drink, and follows that old adage 'Never feast your eyes and stomach at the same time.'" The wife of a younger New England Senator replied, "We throw all such invitations in the waste basket. Why go to them? Nobody has any fun. The average cocktail party is like wading through jelly beans." A genial New England Senator sniffed: "Cocktail parties? The pressure's so great in my office I decided to pass them up. They're a great institution, though, for free drink fans."

A POPULAR GENT, whose important job on the Hill owes its success to a wonderful flair for public relations, pendulummed the other way: "It sounds presumptuous, I know, but during the winter season, we average three to four cocktails and receptions a day." Summed in cross-section, though legislators step out mainly at dinner-time, they'll turn up at special cocktail gatherings on weekends. Anyone can say "no," they believe, and only the unsophisticated Congressman lets cocktail parties interfere with work.

MOST LEGISLATORS fall between extremes. The wife of a younger Senator from one of the currently conspicuous States explains the cocktail pattern: "My husband always works late. He'll only go to a cocktail party if it's official, if it's given by an old friend, if for some reason he can see someone in particular there, he couldn't meet anywhere else." The wife of a Representative from a Western State says, "We go to cocktail parties occasionally. But it's difficult. We dine out a great deal and my husband refuses to go to a cocktail party either in a dinner jacket or the same shirt he's worn at the office. There's simply no time to come home, change his shirt, go to a cocktail party, return again to dress for dinner."

THIS LEAVES the usual run of Washington cocktail parties to residents, congressional wives and, of course, the press. Here's what it costs to entertain a hundred guests: For $450 a caterer will supply 12 to 15 varieties of hors d'oeuvres, liquor at the ratio of 15 cocktails, 12 highballs to a fifth. Glass and china's included, but waiters—and there should be four—are not. They pull down a cool $8 for four hours with $2 for overtime. A slightly less fancy function may be had for $350. At embassies, where the diplomat host supplies the liquor, the standard price is $3.50 a head. Cocktail fashions seldom change. Only excitement is the Old-Fashioned's rise in popularity, the obliteration of the Clover Club. Drinks are averaged three to a guest. The elegant caterers would love to serve terrapin at $60 a gallon, caviar at $21 a pound, wholesale, but they seldom get a chance!

Caterers average 4 cocktail parties daily throughout the year, manage to get around to 16 or more every afternoon during the Christmas holidays. Hotel cocktail parties are, for the most part, "goodbys." At one of our best hotels the charge is a flat $4.50 a head and curiously, they count on customers downing 4½ potions apiece! Easiest way, though, is to lay in a stock of liquor, buy a flock of 10-cent-store glasses, a mass of potato chips and let the happy guests do the rest!

How Did It All Start?

WHERE DID the cocktail come from? Nobody's really sure. In old England a glass of fresh, foaming beer was called a cocktail. Others claim that ancient English and Irish cockfighters prepared a stimulating concoction of spirits, seeds, plant roots, barks, leaves to pour over a mash for the cocks. Sampling, they thought it superb, named it "cocktail" and kept drinking it ever since.

Thanks to the humble cocktail, caterers, cooks, waiters, wine and food merchants, glass manufacturers, stationers, even dressmakers are kept ever so busy. And it provides Senators with a much needed conversational lift. Let's not banish the cocktail! Waiter, I'll take mine without bitters!

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Young mothers are sometimes so wrapped up in their new-born babies that they do not permit others—even their husbands—to share in the infant's care. A similar sort of thing may happen when there are older children in the family. Mother doesn't seem to trust them with the newest member of the family.

Such behavior, though understandable, is likely to be unfortunate in its effects. Both father and children may feel as though they were outsiders. Jealousy and antagonism thrive in this sort of situation.

It is important, too, for the developing baby to have others share in his care. Unless he begins to have contacts with persons other than his mother, he is likely to become one of those youngsters who develops rigid ways of behaving. Things have to be just so. Adjustment to new situations is difficult.

Mothers who feel that they must be the only ones caring for their babies may well ask themselves, "Why do I feel this way? Why don't I trust my husband or the children to help?" The answer won't always come easily, but the questions may be the first step in moving toward a healthier sharing of the baby.

College Boy, 20, Whose Best Girl Broke Off With Him During Holidays, Finds His Studies Are Suffering; Should He Sue Reconciliation?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with a girl, I shall call her Kathie, for about 10 months. I am 20 and she is 19. Our respective families live in the same community, but I go away to college and Kathie is away in school too, which means that we see each other only during vacations or holidays.

I have dated lots of girls, off and on, since I was in high school, but Kathie is the first girl I have ever been serious with. Her family has always opposed our romance, and I believe their principal objection to me was our late hours and party life, but Kathie accepted my fraternity pin nevertheless.

During the last school term we wrote to each other occasionally, she less than I, but she assured me this was due to negligence, not lack of love; and on our last visit home, we had wonderful times together—at first.

In Breaking Off, Girl Seemed Sad

THEN as the holidays neared an end, I noticed her manner had become indifferent, and suddenly, the night before we were to return to school, she telephoned and asked me to come to her house. When I arrived she seemed sad and upset, and without explanation she returned my fraternity pin. When I asked what was wrong she refused to say; so I left in anger.

Several weeks have passed and we have had no communication. I still love her very much and my studies are suffering. I would like to know whether you believe I should try to promote a reconciliation; and if so, how should I go about it? An early reply will be appreciated.

C. R.

Reconciliation Isn't in Cards

DEAR C. R.: Reading between the lines, and putting two-and-two together, I get the impression that Kathie wouldn't be interested in the kind of reconciliation you have in mind, and that her family didn't force her into breaking the quasi-engagement.

The fact that she wrote less often than you during the last school term, also that her manner registered indifference as the holidays waned—which is to say, after she had tested your company again for a while,—suggests that she drifted away from you of her own accord. If she was influenced by her parents' disapproval of you, it was indirectly and not submissively, I feel.

Incidentally, you say her parents objected principally to "late hours and party life," and if this is your customary pattern when dating girls, you may expect a bad rating from fathers, mothers and brothers, in the sort of families that produce first-rate girls who strike to the heart with plus-qualities of taste, intelligence, and gentle manners.

Accept Defeat, But Sportingly

ALTHOUGH I hesitate to add to your present suffering, you are old enough, after all, to accept disappointments like a man, and to look at life realistically instead of clinging to illusions as opiate for pain.

Which is preliminary to saying that in my opinion, the timing as well as the defensive finality of Kathie's gesture in returning the pin without explanation, implies that she has another love-interest in the cards—probably in the social life surrounding her school,—and feels honor bound to ring down the curtain on you before candidly encouraging a new approach from Cupid.

So, for advice, concede defeat in this romance, but take it sportingly. Clear the air of bad feeling. As an exercise in civilized manners, write Kathie an apology for the bad grace you showed in the parting scene. Tell her that on reflection you accept her decision without quarrel and wish to assure her that you will always be her friend, and will behave decently in that spirit if and when your paths cross again.

Newest Jewelry Is Convertible

When a man tells you he has just bought his wife a new convertible, he may not mean an automobile but a sumptuous piece of diamond jewelry.

A Warner-Pathe newsreel just out features diamond jewelry designed by Mrs. Marianne Ostier with motifs that screw into place for a variety of uses. One handsome necklace becomes a whole jewelry wardrobe, the last word in convertible elegance.

Another new design shown is a diamond ring in the shape of a rose whose center can be changed by insertion of a ruby, emerald or pearl. The ring itself can also be unscrewed so that the diamond rose becomes an attachment for a bracelet.

The $90,000 diamond necklace appears first as a spectacular single piece for formal attire. With the aid of platinum chains, it can be divided to become a long or a short necklace. Mrs. Ostier has designed the necklace so that it can also be separated into two bracelets.

Still a third type of "convertible" is a fan-rosette clip which slips so smoothly over a narrow diamond necklace that the two units appear as one.

Diplomatic Circling

By Elizabeth Maguire

THE Chinese are ringing in the New Year. Celebrating began about a week ago, and will continue according to custom for about a month. Our calendar is used by the Nationalist Government for official business, but when it comes to parties, the Chinese go by the old lunar dates.

As part of the celebration, the Washington Committee in Aid of Chinese Industrial Cooperatives is holding a New Year dinner on Friday, February 11, at the China Doll restaurant. Guest speaker will be Mrs. Reva Esser, who has just returned from a three-year stay in the northwest China province of Kansu.

HER INTEREST in rug-making drew her to a school there, called the Sandan-Indusco Bailie School. The story of China's invincibility can be found in the history of this little school. A group of young students were brought together by an enterprising European, named Rewi Alley. The school had no building, so the students built several houses. They had no food, so they farmed the land.

Their interest was rug weaving, and they had no books. So they took their designs from old caves called "Caves of 1000 Buddhas," found along the old Silk Road to China. Having no wool for weaving, they raised their own sheep.

Today their cave art rugs are now well-known both in China and abroad.

AT THE CHINESE EMBASSY here there is no reflection of rapid changes in the homeland. "We are carrying on as usual," states Joseph Ku, First Secretary.

THREE Scandinavian Ambassadors are back in town after conferences abroad on the Atlantic Pact. Henrik de Kauffmann, Ambassador of Denmark, and Erik Boheman, Ambassador of Sweden, flew back Thursday. The Ambassador of Norway, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, is expected in town today.

A COCKTAIL PARTY was given at the Canadian Embassy last Friday in honor of Canadian and American delegates to the Wheat Conference and the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries Conference. The Prime Minister of Canada, Louis St. Laurent, is due here February 12. He will stay only two days, and plans for entertaining have not yet been completed.

THE TEMPTING BUFFET at the Australian Embassy last Wednesday was prepared by the Blair House cook, who is temporarily at the embassy. When the First Family moved into Blair House, they took White House servants with them, and the Blair House servants took temporary posts elsewhere.

This week the Australian Ambassador and Mrs. Makin are leaving for a vacation of two or three weeks in Virginia. The Ambassador of the Philippines, Joaquin M. Elizalde, is plannng to take his boat, Limbas 3d, to Florida this month.

The Service Set

Finance or Samba—General Is Expert

By Norma Lanum

The Army's new Chief of Finance would rather dance than eat. At least that's the way it seems to his wife.

In fact, Brig. Gen. Eugene Foster is as much at home Samba-ing across a crowded dance floor with his daughter, Pat, as he is untangling the Army's financial problems.

The general—he likes his friends to call him Gene—has been coping with the Army's budget for 28 years. He was one of the original finance officers when the department branched away from the Quartermaster Corps in 1920. And the new Chief of Finance has served under every previous chief in the department's history.

Any free time he might have when he's not taking care of the Army's finances the general devotes to music and dancing. He really doesn't have any time for hobbies, though, Mrs. Foster explains. The finance wizard even leaves family budgeting to his wife.

General Foster has been a Washingtonian since he was six months old and his contagious smile and sincere friendliness have made him one of the most popular men in the Army. He joined the service in 1917 after a stint as sports reporter for a Washington newspaper. His wife, the former Anita Heitmuller, is a native Washingtonian, too. They live in Chevy Chase with their daughter who is an assistant economist for the State Department.

THE THOMAS B. LARKINS will have their entire family together later this month for their first reunion in nearly nine years.

The Army's Quartermaster General and his wife expect their daughter and son-in-law, Air Force Lieut. and Mrs. R. E. Bochfort, to arrive from Germany some time this week—probably Thursday or Friday. Coming with them for their first trip to the States in three years will be their little daughter, 15-month-old Mary Irwin, who's named for grandmother Larkin.

Then a week or so later Lieut. Harry Larkin, U.S.A.F., will be in the Capital to visit his parents en route from Lowry Field, Denver, to his new assignment in Georgia. Air Force Lieutenant and Mrs. Thomas Larkin, jr., will come along with him. The youngest Larkin, Virginia, will come down from Manhattanvile College for the holiday on George Washington's birthday. Then they'll all be here together!

* * * *

The Larkins, incidentally, will have the last word in farewell parties for Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Anthony McAuliffe. They're giving the McAuliffes a farewell breakfast party Monday morning just before they leave Washington for an extended trip out to the West Coast and then to Japan.

* * * *

Gen. Mark Clark, who commands the Sixth Army with headquarters in San Francisco, is in Washington for a few days. He is staying with his mother, Mrs. Charles Clark.

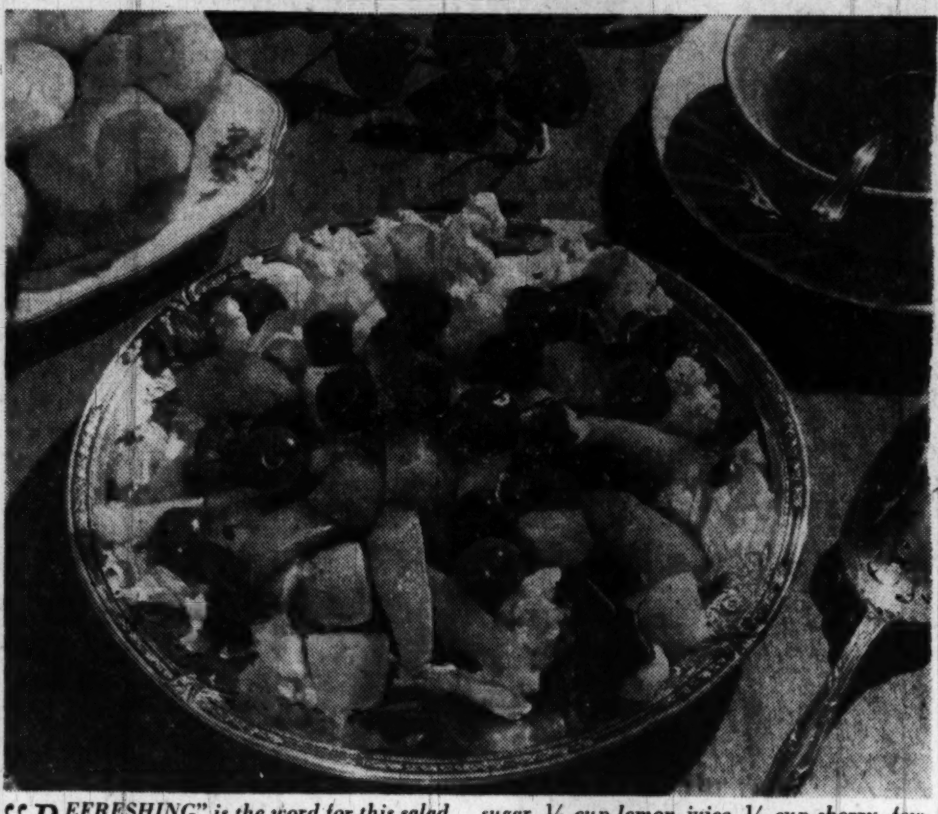
Ask Anne About Making Fruit Salad



"REFRESHING" is the word for this salad made of mixed frozen fruits, bananas, watercress and lettuce. And "different" describes the special fruit dressing served along with it. Here is the dressing recipe: 1/4 cup sugar, 1/4 cup lemon juice, 1/4 cup sherry, few grains salt, 2 tablespoons finely chopped mint leaves (optional).. Mix together until sugar is dissolved. Serve in small pitcher or bowl, to be spooned over salad individual servings

I have a beautiful chintz bedspread with over-drapes to match and an exquisite white organdy bedspread with matching curtains. At present I am using white eyelet embroidered curtains with the chintz overdrapes at the windows and the chintz spread during the week. On special occasions, I use the matching organdy spread. Although this arrangement makes a beautiful picture, I have always felt ill at ease. My concern centers around the appropriateness of organdy and chintz for winter. G. S.

Your arrangement is perfectly proper, for organdy and chintz bedspreads and draperies are used the year around here. I am told by the bedspread department of a large Washington department store that they sell as many of them in the winter as the summer months.

Is there any firm that will clean a green moire chaise lounge? The covering is in excellent condition, but very soiled. T. L. B.

The firms listed under "Upholstery Cleaning" in the yellow pages of the telephone book specialize in this work.

I have a tan flax rug which I would like to dye a darker shade. Is there a method and a paint or dye which I could use on the rug while it is lying on the floor? D. M. D.

The rug can be painted on the floor by using a high-grade enamel or floor paint, thinned with one part turpentine to four parts paint. Place several thicknesses of paper under the rug and go over it well with a vacuum cleaner to remove imbedded dust. Apply the thinned paint with an inexpensive brush so that it can be worked well into the fibers of the rug. Allow ample time for drying of the paint before using the rug.

An iodine bottle broke and splashed over a varnished or shellacked floor, leaving bad spots. Please tell me how to remove them, as neither cleanser or cleaning fluid would remove them. Some splashed on the wallpaper, too. K. L. C.

You might first try sponging the floor stains with a solution of denatured alcohol and water. Use 1 cup alcohol to 2 cups water. If this doesn't remove the stain, it has possibly penetrated into the wood and will require either using a bleach or sanding to remove it. If you decide to try a bleach, you can use a household bleach diluted half and half with water. Saturate a cloth with this and lay over the stain, leaving 20 to 30 minutes to allow time to act. Or, use a saturated solution of oxalic acid as a bleach the same way. (Oxalic acid is a poison, so use accordingly.) When the stain has been removed, the floor will need to be refinished in this area.

To remove the stain from the wallpaper, use a bleach also. Apply the bleach (half-and-half solution or household bleach and water) to just the stained area with a small water-color brush. Be sure not to apply so much liquid that it runs down the wall. This treatment will remove the color from the paper as well as the stain, but when the spot is thoroughly dry this can be easily filled in with crayons to make it less conspicuous.

Can mildew be removed from a plain colored tablecloth? The color in this cloth is not fast. H. B. R.

No, I'm afraid there is no way the stain can be removed without also removing the color. However, if the cloth is unusable as it is and you feel you wish to take a chance on removing the mildew plus the color, place it in a solution of household bleach, using one cup of bleach to a gallon of water. Since mildew attacks the fibers the stain sometimes cannot be entirely removed with bleach. However, this should lighten it enough so that you can cover it completely with dye.

How can I remove a scratch from the glass top of my coffee table? H. B. R.

If the scratch is not too deep you might try rubbing it with a little jeweler's rouge applied with a piece of felt. If this doesn't remove the scratch, the only way to restore the top would be to have the glass replaced.

Inquiries and contributions to the "Ask Anne" column must be in written form. We regret that time does not permit handling them by telephone. Address letters or cards to Anne, Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C.

Now Is the Time

Are you arranging your dinners so that the casserole and oven dishes may be cooked frequently? It is not only a help to heat the house, but if the dinner is carefully planned many times the whole meal can be cooked in the oven, thus proving an economy in gas these cold nights. Try those casserole recipes you have tucked away so long and help warm up the house.

Between Meals Nibbling

The child who is allowed to nibble at pretzels, crackers, etc., through the day cannot be expected to eat a good balanced dinner. It is a pity to feed children between meals as this always means a battle at mealtime to get them to eat the things they require for body building.

The Dog in Winter

Too much coddling and keeping the dog warm in winter is apt to make the animal subject to colds and pneumonia. Don't put him in the warmest place in the house to sleep or let him lie against warm radiators, and unless the veterinarian orders it don't bundle the dog up in sweaters and blankets. The healthy dog develops his own warm undercoat in cold weather and needs no extra covering. That is what he sheds in early spring all over the rugs and gives the housewife plenty of work.

'Quick, Watson, the Noodle!' Use It to Lose Excess Weight

By Ida Jean Kain

"And now, Dr. Watson, what will be our story for today?"

"Well, today we will solve the mystery of the BIG appetite. It's as diabolical a plot as has ever been 'forced' on mankind—appetite grows with weight!"

Elementary, my dear Watson . . . Oh, well, if an ever-increasing appetite is a deep, dark mystery to you, read on to the happy solution. But let's begin at the beginning, with overeating. Unfortunately, overeating stretches the size of the stomach, which is where the trouble starts . . . then it grows through memory and habit.

The stomach, a muscular organ, can be expanded to accommodate considerable more food than is needed for energy. It's quite easy to get the habit of eating until that nice full feeling warms the stomach. And with good food in sight, it's difficult to stop eating when a faint signal is flashed to the mind, largely because the memory flash to the mind is stronger . . . made so by continual practice.

After the main course of a good meal has been eaten, hunger is appeased. But habit and the memory of how good a sweet tastes at the finish of the meal, tempt you to at least think about dessert. So you take sips of ice water which washes off the taste buds and whets the appetite for dessert—even though you are not really hungry.

* * * *

The increased appetite is due to the stretched stomach rather than to actual food requirements. But food is used according to energy demands, not according to appetite demands. So when appetite and memory call for food beyond requirements, the extra is stored in thick layers of fat under the skin between muscle fibers. The pounds pile on.

What helps to curb appetite? Less food, of course. But use the science of nutrition to flash a full signal sooner. Bulky foods—salads, crunchy crackers and low-calorie vegetables and fruits—fill the space and take the place of fattening foods . . . Eating slowly is more slimming.

* * * *

And most important, get up from the table before you feel quite satisfied . . . for that practice will shrink the stomach. This is the only way to break the habit of overeating.

'Withdrawn From World'

Royal Grandmother Forsakes Courtly Pomp for Life of Nun

By L. S. Chakales

Tenos Island, Aegean Sea, Feb. 5 (AP).—The paternal grandmother of Britain's young Prince Charles is wearing the sober gray of a sister in the Greek Orthodox Church.

The 63-year-old mother of Prince Phillip, Princess Alice of Battenberg, in her own words "withdrew from the world" last July to dedicate the rest of her life to "service."

She has yet to see her 2-month-old grandson, the presumptive future ruler of the British Empire.

"Every year," she told the Associated Press in an interview, "each sister is given four weeks' holiday. I hope to use those this summer to go to London to see my son and grandson and other relatives, including my 86-year-old mother."

The British princess lives in four simply furnished rooms on the first floor of a two-story villa on the end of this Aegean island town where thousands of persons make bi-annual pilgrimages to the miracle-working icon of the Church of the Virgin Mary. She has no servants. Living with her as a companion is black-robed Sister Sophia Dimitriou Alverti, a nun in the Greek Orthodox Church.

Between them they perform all household duties. There is no telephone. They have electric power only a few hours each night.

On rare occasions Princess Alice goes to Athens to visit her nephew and niece, King Paul and Queen Frederika.

Tall, erect and vigorous despite her 63 years, the British widow of the late Greek Prince Andrew maintains a demanding schedule. Usually she arises at 6. With Sister Sophia she goes each morning to the Church of the Virgin Mary for worship. During the Christmas holidays she went to church at 4:30 in the morning when hundreds of church bells tolled the beginning of worship.

The entire community knows "the Princess." She neither receives nor expects any more favors than are granted to the other sisters. The priests describe her as a "loyal and faithful servant of the Lord." She has adopted, with the approval of the church, the task of starting a nurses' school so that each of the villages on the island of 12,500 persons could be assured of at least some form of medical assistance.

While the nursing school is her primary work, Princess Alice also crowds numerous acts of charity into her crowded day.

Personal friends in London, Athens and other European capitals constantly send her packages and gifts. These she distributes to the poor and underprivileged of the island.

Vary Dessert Menus With These Party Favorites

A fluff of almond-speckled gelatin hides a layer of pineapple in this "Almond and Pineapple Whip." Top it with a custard sauce or whipped cream and then with a few extra almonds for good measure. It's an excellent dessert for a party because you can double it and get the same wonderful results.

ALMOND AND PINEAPPLE WHIP

- 2 envelopes (2 tablespoons) plain gelatin
- ½ cup cold water
- ¾ cup granulated sugar
- 1½ cups hot water
- ⅜ cup syrup from pineapple
- ¼ cup lemon juice
- 1/3 cup chopped roasted blanched almonds
- 1 cup drained diced canned pineapple
- Soft custard sauce or whipped cream

SOFTEN GELATIN in cold water. Dissolve softened gelatin and sugar in hot water. Blend in pineapple sirup and lemon juice and chill to consistency of unbeaten egg white. Add almonds and whip until fluffy. Place pineapple in bottom of 8-inch square pan and cover with whipped gelatin. Chill until firm. Serve with custard sauce or whipped cream. Serves seven to eight.

QUICK LEMON CREAM PIE

Crumb Crust:
- 1½ cups crushed grapenut flakes
- ¼ cup melted butter or margarine
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- ¼ teaspoon cinnamon

Combine grapenut flakes, butter, sugar and cinnamon. Press firmly against sides and bottoms of 8-inch pie pan. Chill in refrigerator 30 minutes before adding filling.

Filling:
- 2 eggs, separated
- 1 and 1/3 cups sweetened condensed milk
- ½ cup lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind

Beat egg yolks. Combine with milk, lemon juice and rind. Beat egg whites until stiff. Fold into lemon mixture. Pour into crumb crust. Sprinkle a few grapenut flakes over top and chill several hours in refrigerator. This recipe serves six.

Beauty Memo . . .

Lend a mysterious sparkle to your eyes by slightly coating the eyelids with a touch of vaseline or cleansing cream.

If your hands are too thin and bony, try massaging them with cocoa butter or peanut oil, both of which are excellent soothing agents, according to a well-known Hollywood conditioning authority.

Before giving yourself a home permanent, it is wise to use an effective soft water creme shampoo with a lanolin base so as to thoroughly remove any residue. This is especially important if you have been using curl capsules or wave sets.

If your hair is decidedly light or dark you should accent it by choosing clothes to match, or contrast strongly. For example, a brunette looks stunning in black and wonderful in white.

Gray should never be worn by women with drab coloring or with olive complexions. It is good with gray hair, but not particularly becoming to blonds.

Leet

JUST awakened from his nap, this baby at the House of Mercy will have a few moments of play with his mother before being put back in the crib. This picture was taken in the sunny white-walled nursery of the home on Klingle rd. at Rosemont ave.

Ladies Board 'Phantom Dinner' To Aid House of Mercy Fund

A well-known charity of Washington is the House of Mercy—a home for unmarried mothers, located on Klingle rd. and Rosemont ave. During a tragic period for young mothers, it provides an attractive, quiet environment, free of censure.

Girls are cared for both before and after the baby is born. They are helped to use their time constructively, and each is given help on the basis of her individual needs. Niceties of life, such as good manners, good grooming and careful housekeeping are strictly observed.

Maternity homes were started in this country under individual, and usually religious, auspices at least 125 years ago. In the Metropolitan area of Washington there are four homes for unmarried mothers—the House of Mercy, which is Episcopalian in government and nonsectarian in service; the Florence Crittenton Home, also nonsectarian; St. Ann's for Roman Catholics, and Dr. Whipper's Home for Negro girls.

At the House of Mercy, girls enter a few months before delivery and stay through the final medical examination, at six weeks. The best medical care that the community offers is put at their disposal for themselves and for their babies. There is an admission charge which covers only a fraction of the actual cost of each case.

The program of the home is a cooperative venture, in which the staff work in the interest of the residents, and the girls, in turn, use the home as their own.

A phantom dinner is being conducted by the ladies board. The dinner is subscribed to but not eaten. Anyone desiring to contribute to this charity—which is not a member of the Community Chest — may do so by sending a check to Mrs. Sumner Kittelle, chairman, at 2229 California st.

Buyers Should Make $4200-$5600 Yearly

HOW much house will your dollar buy on today's market? Last Sunday's article, the first of a series, showed new homes costing from $7750 to $10,500. Today's camera tour covers the range from $10,500 to $14,000. Next week The Washington Post will show new homes costing between $14,000 and $18,000.

By Conrad P. Harness

IF YOUR annual income is between $4200 and $5600, you can afford a home costing from $10,500 to $14,000, according to a bankers' rule of thumb. However, sufficient cash for a down payment is necessary in most cases.

Although an estimated 20 per cent of Washington families fall in this income category, only a small segment of Washington builders are erecting homes in this price range. The majority of builders have been aiming at the market above $14,000, but there are plenty of straws in the wind indicating a trend toward more low cost construction this summer.

SECOND OF A SERIES

A prewar home costing over $10,000 was practically a mansion compared to current offerings in this price bracket, the result of inflated costs of labor, material and taxes. Wage rates in the building industry have been rising at a yearly rate of 5 per cent, but were accelerated by the war and postwar readjustment.

A spokesman for the National Association of Real Estate Boards points out that it is unrealistic to regard today's prices as unsound. The price of a home today is simply the total of price paid for labor, materials, service and taxes, he declared.

Pick Your Favorite Section

PROSPECTIVE home buyers in this price range have a wide choice of locations, materials and architectural styles. Those who favor locations in the District may be disappointed, however. High land costs have driven builders to the hinterlands. The few homes underway in the District at these prices are mostly of the semi-detached or row house style.

Down payments on $10,500 to $14,000 homes vary according to the sales plan. If approved for sale to veterans under the GI Bill, and providing the veteran can find a lending institution which will put up mortgage money, the down payment usually will vary from zero to 15 per cent of the total price. Monthly carrying charges normally would range from $65 to $100.

The non-veteran will pay a larger cash down payment, with slightly smaller monthly carrying charges. Another well used rule of thumb says that the head of a family should allot no more than 20 to 25 per cent of his monthly income for shelter.

Homes in this category show a trend toward all brick construction, with such niceties as porches, living room fireplaces, large closets, equipped kitchens and full basements.

One of the most popular architectural styles is the Cape Cod bungalow with a finished stairway to a floored attic which can be expanded into two additional bedrooms and bath.

No Mudholes, Barren Lots

LAND development costs will cover a landscaped lot, sodded in front and 10 feet out from the house at the rear, shrubs, concrete sidewalks, paved street with concrete curbs and gutters.

BASIC DATA: Located in "Pinewood," in the Rogers Heights section of East Riverdale, Md. Built by Johns Construction Co. Cape Cod style, all brick, dry wall construction, full basement with laundry tubs; two bedrooms, living room with fireplace, dinette, kitchen; finished stairway to expandable second floor. Lot is 50x125, sodded, landscaped, sidewalks. Gas heat

BASIC DATA: Located at First and Underwood pl. nw. Built by R. E. Wright. Semi-detached brick, three bedrooms upstairs, with living room, dining room, kitchen on first floor; full basement. Refrigerator and stove in kitchen. Lot is 22x120. Gas heat. Landscaped, sodded, with shrubs, concrete sidewalks

The price tag, in most cases, will not cover such labor saving devices as a garbage disposal unit, automatic dish or clothes washer, ventilating fan. Neither do the majority of such homes have such added "extras" as a mirror over the fireplace, lights in the closets, sidewall insulation (in frame houses), laundry shutes, clothes dryers, covered back porches or terraces, bathroom, storage closets and downstairs powder rooms in two-story homes.

Most homes have a floor plan using from 900 to 13,500 square feet. Living rooms run to an average of 225 square feet of usuable area, with the master bedroom averaging 175 square feet. Built-in items are at a minimum.

On the matter of interiors, partitions are no longer placed arbitarily to close off space regardless of the family's needs and habits. Wall locations are planned to bring doors near each other, eliminating crisscross traffic through rooms.

Window placement creates maximum wall areas for furniture grouping without sacrificing space, as so often happens when wall areas are narrow and skimpy.

Hallways are being eliminated in many homes. The front door opens into a small vestibule or directly into the living room. To make space for a picture window at the front, the entrance is often placed at a corner of the house. In such cases, stairs to the attic rise on the end wall of the living room.

Trend Toward Lower-Cost Housing

HOW many homes were built here during 1948 between $10,500 and $14,000 is difficult to ascertain. The closest estimate is that of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington which said its members started 13,260 homes and apartments here last year, of which 29 per cent were houses.

Of this 13,260, an estimated 1500 sold in the $10,000 to $15,000 bracket. This estimate does not include those homes erected by non-members of the association.

Uncle Sam Gives Farmer Hand In Planning Suitable House

Uncle Sam is giving the farmer a helping hand in designing a house that is comfortable, modern and efficient for farm usage. The Department of Agriculture has just published a booklet containing 15 farmhouse plans, each designed to suit the climate and conditions of farm life in the Northeastern States.

Although the homes were primarily planned to suit the area from Maine to Maryland, housing specialists say that many would suit other regions equally well.

Since a farmhouse is both a home and work center the floor plans include such farm requirements as these: Rooms planned for family work and living; space for eating in the kitchen; a place near the back door for the man to wash up and hang work clothes; indoor traffic routes that do not cross busy work areas; adequate storage space for food and fuel; ample closets.

The plans are the product of the Regional Farm Services, a cooperative arrangement whereby the Department of Agriculture and regional States work together on farm buildings suitable for different sections.

The booklet containing the 15 different plans may be purchased for 15 cents in coin or money order from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington 25, D. C. It explains how working drawings of the different homes may be obtained.

Home Air Conditioning No Longer a Dream

Home air-conditioning is no longer a dream but something you should consider when remodeling or building, just as you do indoor plumbing and central heating, says Better Homes & Gardens magazine.

If you're remodeling fairly extensively, air conditioning with a central system can be installed with reasonable economy. If you don't plan a major remodeling, portable or room air conditioners may be your answer. If you're building a new home, make sure the system is laid out by a heating man familiar with air conditioning. Preliminary calculations and proper duct design are as important as the air conditioner's heating unit.

Complete air conditioning should control temperature, humidity, air cleanliness and air movement all 12 months of the year. To provide that type of control, the system must be an integral part of house construction. Space for it must be planned when your house is remodeled or built, even though you don't install the equipment immediately.

There are nearly as many types of air conditioners as there are heating devices. Present-day conditioners offer you not only cleaned air but cleaned air sent at different temperatures to various parts of the house. With zoning controls, you can maintain one temperature in one part of the house and another elsewhere.

The conditioners clean the air by washing it with a water spray, by filtering it mechanically or by precipitating the dirt electrically. They are operated by gas, oil, coal or electricity. Gas-fired conditioners, especially, come in several types.

This Paint Has Curves!

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—How to pitch curves with paint for a better job of spray painting was described Friday to the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

The curving is done by electricity, in the spraying chamber. Tiny particles of paint coming from the spray nozzle will actually curve in flight to hit their target, said E. P. Miller of the Ransburg Electro Coating Corp., Indianapolis.

About 85 to 90 per cent of the particles of paint hit home, he said. Without the electrical curving, half of the paint particles may miss.

Objects to be painted enter the spray chamber on a conveyor belt, revolving as they go. Inside the chamber they pass between two electrodes, negatively charged. The tiny balls of paint squirting out in the spray get a negative charge. They are repelled by the walls of the chamber and attracted to the object. Those that start to miss switch course, and wheel to hit the object.

GI Loans Far Off From 1947 Totals

Home loans approved last year under the GI bill zoomed downward in comparison with 1947, the local VA office has reported.

GI loans of all types approved here last year numbered 3738, compared with 7469 in 1947. Home loans accounted for 3603 of the 1948 total, while business loans totaled 135.

GI loans approved here since the start of the program stood at 15,850 on December 25, 1948, according to C. F. Naumowicz, of the VA office. He added that 765 loans have been paid in full, and that the Government has paid claims on 118 loans.

GI loans are made by private lenders but are guaranteed by VA up to a maximum of $4000 on real estate loans and $2000 on other types. There is no maximum on the amount a veteran may borrow, Naumowicz pointed out; the $4000 ceiling is all VA will guarantee on any home or business loan.

BIG BARK, NO BITE: The fuss over "mass" eviction of tenants appears akin to a tempest in a teapot, reports the Housing Institute. This authoritative source made a telephone survey of eight cities where irate landlords were said to be mailing out eviction notices by the thousands.

The survey indicated that so far owners have made good on their threat of mass eviction in only two cities: Tulsa, where six eviction notices were mailed out and in Minneapolis, where one landlord sent eviction notices to his 12 tenants. And when the local office of the Housing Expediter asked the Minneapolis owner to withdraw his eviction notices, he did so.

The Housing Institute made this comment on the action: "The excitement and headlines caused by the mass eviction scare will probably die down as quickly as they developed. But more difficult to do away with is the harm which has been done the landlord fraternity and the housing industry by the bad publicity resulting from the ill-advised action of a few property owners.

CONVENE: The largest gathering in the history of the home building industry is expected to take place in Chicago, February 20-24, as builders, architects, financiers and Government officials arrive for the annual convention of the National Association of Home Builders. Between 50 and 60 local builders are expected to attend.

SUPPLY: The supply of housing in United States cities and towns has increased by more than 22 per cent since 1940, which betters the nonfarm population growth for the period, according to the Construction Industry Information Committee.

"Such a comparison shows that we have more dwelling space per person than we had before the war," the committee declared. "Estimates based on Census Bureau reports indicate that there is about 3.5 per cent more dwelling space per person than in 1940."

PERSONALS: Leo M. Bernstein, realtor, is off for Miami Beach for a four-weeks holiday. In has capacity as member of the Washington Real Estate Board's committee on education, he plans to inspect educational programs underway by realtor groups in the Miami area . . . Clark Daniel, builder, has been appointed a member of the 1949 resolutions committee of the National Association of Home Builders.

BOWLING: Leaders in the Realtors Bowling League kept ahead of their rivals last week, with R. A. Humphries' bowlers still on top of Section "A" and District Title Co. heading "B" Section. Close behind the Humphries team is the H. G. Smithy Co. team, followed by Wm H. Saunders, Capitol View Realty, Columbia Federal Savings and Loan, and others. Second place in the "B" Section is still held by Cafritz Co., followed by Columbia Title Co., B. F. Saul Co., Frank S. Phillips and others. The leaders for "High Team Game" are B. F. Saul Co., H. L. Rust Co., 613; and District Title No. 1, 609.

BRIEFS: A Chicago correspondence school is teaching by mail . . . The local Home Builders Association is making plans for resumption of bricklaying classes in April at Ayrlawn Farms, Bethesda, Md. . . . The 14th annual dinner-dance of the Washington Real Estate Board is set for Friday, February 18 at the Mayflower Hotel.

N. Y. Proposes State-Wide Building Code

NEW YORK, Feb. 5 (AP).—A new building code "to cut housing costs 10 per cent" is urged today for New York State, although it would be glad to share it with the 47 others.

The aim is to let builders use new materials and building ideas developed in recent years, and to supersede the welter of codes in the various cities.

At the same time, several manufacturers offer waterproof building blocks, water repellent sheeting, insulation that resists chemicals, and a plastic light that can bend around corners.

The code is tuned to the times. Most city codes specify the kind and amount of material that must be used. The State-wide code would specify performance only.

For example, where a city code says floors must be of certain kind of lumber of a specified thickness, the State code would require only that the floor be able to support a specified weight. That allows architects and builders to use designs and materials unknown when the rigid city codes were set.

It would also allow a builder or architect to design buildings that could be used, without expensive changes, in more than one city. Much of the inability of the construction industry to achieve mass production has been traced to the conflicting and outdated codes that dot the country. Plumbing usable in one city can't be used in an adjoining one, for instance. This has added to the soaring costs of building.

Glenn Dale Contract

The District of Columbia has awarded a $50,606 construction contract to Whalen & Spradlin, contractors, for erection of a four-unit apartment building at the T. B. Sanitorium, Glen Dale, Md.

Rental Fever Rises

4000 Apartment Units Planned

BUILDERS broke out in a rental fever last week, as several new apartment projects were announced. Heading the list is an 8-story, 122-unit building to be erected at 1221-27 13th st. nw., by Frank Baldi.

Architect Arthur Anderson said the project would be completely air-conditioned, of reinforced concrete and brick. Commercial-type residential properties now occupying the site will be razed. The building will be 75 feet wide and 135 feet deep.

The largest project revealed last week is the proposed 1542 garden-type apartment units to be erected on the old McCormick-Goodhart estate near New Hampshire ave. and Union lane, in Prince Georges County.

The builder, Standard Construction Co., has filed preliminary plans with the Federal Housing Administration in application for a mortgage insurance commitment. The development will be built in 10 sections. Owner is Langley Park Apartments.

Plans are still under way by Standard Construction for erection this year of 820 apartments at Lee blvd. and Patrick Henry dr., between Arlington and Falls Church, Va. The same firm will build a "skyscraper" apartment project of 800 units in the 4200 block of Massachusetts ave. nw. Estimated cost is eight million dollars. An FHA mortgage insurance commitment has been issued.

New plans are in progress on a proposed 173-unit four-story apartment building to be erected on Border rd., between Bashford rd. and Slaters lane, Alexandria, Va. Owner is Mason Hall, Inc.

The following new apartments, some of which previously have not been announced, are still in the planning stage:

An eight-story, 166-unit building planned for the Northwest section of the District, and a 200-unit garden apartment project planned for Alexandria. Names of owners have not yet been made public. George T. Santmyers is the architect.

Quebec House, 860-unit, eight-story apartment, will be erected at Connecticut ave. and Quebec st. by Ajax Construction Co., in two sections, of 500 and 360 units each. The architectural drawings are being completed by Edwin Weihe and Katherine Gibbs.

The same architects are preparing drawings on a 225-unit apartment proposed for construction at Lee blvd. and Fort Myer dr., Arlington.

Plans have been filed with the FHA for a mortgage insurance commitment on a 271-unit, eight-story apartment at 1709 Massachusetts ave. nw. Berla & Abel are the architects. Muhleman & Kayhoe, Inc., is the probable builder.

A proposed eight-story, 230-unit apartment for 3900 16th st. nw. has been temporarily postponed by M. Pollin & Sons, builders.

Arthur Anderson, Architect

Planned for early erection at 1221-27 13th st. nw.

Standard Kitchen Units Allow Easy Remodeling

Standardized sizes for kitchen cabinets and other equipment now make it easy to modernize any kitchen by fitting units together into a unified whole. Every inch of space is thus utilized.

Cabinet units are now available with counter tops a standard 25¼ inches from front to back and 36 inches above the floor; widths of base and wall cabinets increase by multiples of 3 inches from 12 inches to 39 inches. Widths of ranges are standardized at 20, 42 and 48 inches; sinks, 20, 42 and 60 inches; refrigerator widths, 25, 30 and 32 inches. Side-by-side laundry tubs are 24 inches deep, 42 inches wide.

District Corp. Plans Apartment Building

A 16-unit apartment building is planned for early erection in the 5000 block of H st. se., by District Development Corp. The structure will be two stories and basement, brick, measuring 33 by 175.

Heated Highways in West Save Snow Removal Costs

Chicago, Feb. 5 (AP).—The heat's on—on some Oregon and Michigan highways.

At points where ice and snow present a serious accident hazard, heaters have been built into the pavement and the cost is less than would be required for snow or ice removal by conventional means.

At Klamath Falls, Oreg., a pipe coil containing a mixture of water and antifreeze is submerged in a 390-foot well drilled into natural hot water. The heated mixture then is piped through a series of pipe grids under the roadway. An inch of snow or a tenth of an inch of ice can be melted each hour.

Two sections of State Route 102, west of Ferndale, Mich., have been converted into a sort of electric toaster. Thermostats turn heating units on and off as the temperature dips to or rises above freezing.

Russians to Speed Up Production of Prefabs

By Eddy Gilmore

MOSCOW, Feb. 5 (AP).—The Soviet Union is planning a considerable expansion of its prefabricated housing industry in 1949.

The Ministry of Building Materials Industry, which puts out about half of all prefabricated houses made in Russia, plans to increase output by one third this year.

The biggest buyers of factory-made cottages in the USSR are large industrial enterprises which purchase them for their workers and other employes.

In many industrial centers large settlements of prefabricated houses in the two to eight family bracket have already been set up.

Housing factories also manufacture one-family cottages for sale to individual buyers.

Capitalistic System

THE price of a one-family cottage with conveniences, according to an announcement, is roughly the equivalent of five to six months' wages of a skilled miner.

Each home buyer is entitled to a bank loan covering both the purchase price and the cost of setting up his household.

A typical small cottage can be erected in 40 hours. It consists of two rooms and a combination kitchen and dining room totaling 377 square feet of floor space, as well as an entrance hall, porch, pantries, a cellar for storing foodstuffs and a storage room.

The ministry's present range of prefabricated buildings includes just about everything from the one-family cottage to a 30-room hotel with lobbies, rest rooms and dining rooms.

In particular demand are two-story, eight-unit apartment houses in which each apartment has its own street entrance. Other popular types are cottages with five to seven rooms, not counting attics, kitchens and storage space, and provided with central heating, gas and other conveniences.

These are being made on special orders from city Soviets and industrial enterprises, and intended for large families. Both these and small cottages have been set up in a few towns which suffered from the Nazi invasion.

A Young Industry

PREFABRICATED housing is a comparatively young branch of industry here. Prior to 1941 there were only a few enterprisese of the kind, mainly experimental, in the Soviet Union.

Since the war, however, the industry has developed rapidly and now the Buildings Material Ministry alone has 27 factories turning out houses, the biggest of them with a capacity of 200,000 square meters of floor space annually.

The ministry is now building 10 new major plants in the forest areas of the country, mainly in the Urals, the Far East and the Archangel regions.

"Neighborhoods of the Future"

FIRST PRIZE FOR THE best subdivision of large homes in the United States this week was awarded to Sumner, new subdivision built by W. C. & A. N. Miller Development Co. The contest was sponsored by the National Association of Home Builders in efforts to uncover how better neighborhoods of the future will appear. Allison Miller is shown with his exhibit of Sumner at a press showing Tuesday at the United States Chamber of Commerce Auditorium. Sumner is located off Massachusetts ave. extended, Md. Top honors for the community development class were awarded to East Pines, at East Riverdale, Md., built by Standard Properties, Inc.

Check Insurance Before Remodeling

Before making alterations, homeowners are advised by insurance companies to check their policies and make sure the changes are permitted.

It is possible to void a policy with such apparently simple changes as installation of additional electric wiring, the relocation of a fuel oil tank, a change in type of heating fuel used or even the construction of a porch.

If there is any question, consultation with the insurance agent is recommended before starting work. If it develops that the planned alteration is prohibited, a rider can usually be attached to the policy and a method of safeguarded construction suggested by the agent that will conform to the existing policy, or a new contract written at a slight increase in premium.

Concealed Pipes

When finishing the basement, overhead pipes should be boxed in for a beamed effect and to avoid the dust-catching nuisance of exposed pipes and wires.

You Can Build It Yourself

Combined Toolhouse-Kitchen Is Popular

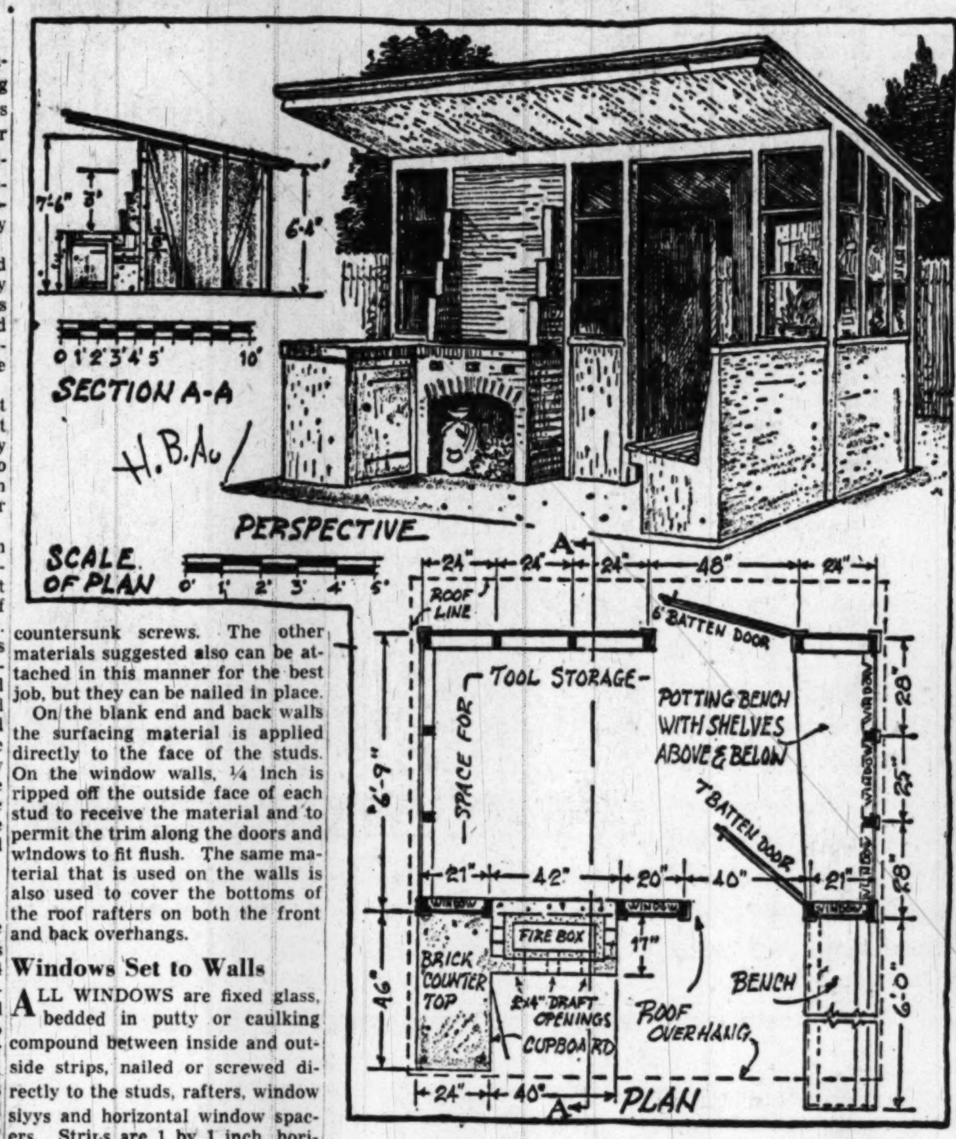
By Henry B. Aul

A SMALL structure that combines an indoor potting bench and storage space for tools and supplies with an outdoor kitchen equipped with a charcoal-burning barbecue, work table, cupboard and comfortable seat appears to have a place in many home grounds.

Such a structure was suggested as a feature in a small-property design that appeared in this space several weeks ago, and there have been numerous requests for greater details on the building.

Home gardeners realize that garden structures, although kept small in size and comparatively simple in design, are expensive to build. Therefore it is a good plan to build over a period of two or three years.

The toolhouse-kitchen shown in the illustration can be built gradually. The first step is to construct the 12-by-13-foot floor or base of concrete or other solid masonry. It should be at least six inches thick and should rest on an effective drainage base of tamped gravel or cinders. The finished floor level should be established at least two inches above the grade. In soils that drain poorly it will be necessary to place stone and concrete footings under the outer edges of this platform. These should be six inches thick and should extend below frost line.



Suggested design for a combination toolhouse and garden kitchen.

Framing Details

THREE-EIGHTH-INCH bolts are set in the masonry base as it is constructed to receive the 2 by 4 sills on the four sides of the building and under the worktable and bench outside the building. No sills are placed in the doorways or where the fireplace will be built. Two-by-four studs are spaced as shown on the plan and toe-nailed to the sills. They are held plumb by temporary braces until front and back top plates and the two side rafters are nailed in place.

Both front and back wall plates are 2 by 4s set on edge in 2 by 4-inch notches cut to receive them on the outer edges of the front and back wall studs. The two outside rafters are seated on top of these plates but rest in notches cut to receive them on the outer edges of the two middle studs in each end wall. Permanent 2 by 4 corner braces are placed from sill to rafter or plate on the blank walls and from floor sill to window sill on the window wals.

The other five roof rafters, spaced 24 inches between centers, are seated on the front and back wall plates and toe-nailed to them. All rafters are 12-foot 2 by 4s that overhang the front walls 4 feet and the back wall 1 foot.

Plywood for Roofing

LARGE sheets of ¾-inch plywood are used to cover the roof rafters and they, in turn, are covered with roll-type asphalt roofing, with overlapping joints and edges cemented and tacked.

With the masonry base, the framework and roof completed, this structure can be used for tool storage. Canvas or other covering can be hung on the walls to keep out driving rain. The permanent wall covering, windows, fireplace and all other features can be added gradually to complete the structure.

The permanent wall may consist of ¼-inch exterior type plywood, hardboard or asbestos-cement board. The latter material is applied, easiest and best, with countersunk screws. The other materials suggested also can be attached in this manner for the best job, but they can be nailed in place.

On the blank end and back walls the surfacing material is applied directly to the face of the studs. On the window walls, ¼ inch is ripped off the outside face of each stud to receive the material and to permit the trim along the doors and windows to fit flush. The same material that is used on the walls is also used to cover the bottoms of the roof rafters on both the front and back overhangs.

Windows Set to Walls

ALL WINDOWS are fixed glass, bedded in putty or caulking compound between inside and outside strips, nailed or screwed directly to the studs, rafters, window siyys and horizontal window spacers. Strips are 1 by 1 inch, horizontal spacers are 1 by 4 inch and window sills are ? by 6 inches.

One by 5 white pine is used to trim around the four sides of the roof, along the front wall plate and for vertical corner trim where the width of a stud is to be covered. One by 3 inch pine is used to trim along the top of the back wall and for all trim between windows, around doorways and for vertical corner trim where the 2-inch width of the stud is to be covered. Corner points on the bench and brick-covered worktable are filled with caulking compound.

The fireplace and masonry-covred fireside work table will give the amateur bricklayer plenty of good experience. With the work marked out by stud lines and the table frame, the job should be comparatively easy. A form with a curved top is needed to support the arch beneath the firebox. The firebox is lined on bottom, ends and sides with firebrick. Draft openings are just large enough to use loose bricks as draft doors.

The stepped wing walls bond into the 4-inch back wall, which is layed up between the studs. The surface of the studs facing the masonry is coated with asbestos. This fireplace could be built to receive a ready-built grill.

Expanded metal lath, nailed to the top of the framework of the fireside table and cupboard, forms a base for the mortar on which the bricks for the table top are laid. They make a weatherproof top for the cupboard. One by 6 boards are used for the brace and batten doors on the cupboard and the shelter proper. One by 2 inch strips are used to form the seat and back rest for the outdoor bench.

French Rose Wins Top U. S. Honor

The rose Peace, winner of the "Most Beautiful Rose of France" award, has just been awarded the National Gold Medal of the American Rose Society, the group has announced. The award, the society said, was based on the variety's performance in the society's official test gardens at Harrisburg, Pa., and represents the highest honor any rose may receive in America.

Peace was originated in France by rose breeder Francis Meilland, and introduced in the United States by the Conard-Pyle Co. of West Grove, Pa. It won the Gold Medal of the National Horticulture Society of France in 1946. It was described as a spectacular garden rose. Large in size, it is of variable coloring of light yellow and edged rose-pink.

Rodents form the largest order of mammals, embracing some 3000 species.

End of Home Shortage Forecast

A LEADING economist predicts that the housing shortage will end soon, provided builders maintain a pace of one million housing units per year. New families are being formed at only half that rate, according to Dr. Dexter M. Keezer, former OPA deputy administrator, writing in the current issue of the Appraisal Journal.

"Consequently," says Dr. Keezer, "it appears that we shall run through the balance of the desperate housing shortage fairly soon."

To maintain the current production rate over a long period, the author says, housing costs must be lowered in line with consumer income, otherwise there may be a bust in the housing business.

Quoting Commerce Department figures, Dr. Keezer said rental tenants now are paying one third less for shelter than before the war, on the basis of income. Lower income groups spend a much larger share of their income on rent; higher income groups spend a lower percentage.

The consumer can, if necessary, pay more rent than he is now doing. Any rent increase would have to be offset by a decrease in expenditures for other things or a decrease in savings, or both, the article said.

Frozen rents will eventually go up for two reasons, the article stated: (1) to reflect the rise in operating costs, and, (2) to narrow the gap between rents on old units and those on new construction.

Dr. Keezer said tenants fight even a small rent increase while readily accepting large increases in other cost-of-living items because "throughout the history of the country, the standard stage villain has been the landlord. Also, there are political potentialities for getting at the landlord which do not exist in the case of the farmer or clothing producer."

The author expressed sympathy for landlords, saying they have received "a dirty deal, the sort of deal which is to the discredit of our democracy to inflict on any group."

"If it is continued, it will show up in poorer and less housing for all except perhaps those at the bottom of the income heap who will live in Government housing," he added.

The same issue of the Appraisal Journal, published quarterly by the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers, has articles by two Washington men. Albert G. Towers, jr., staff appraiser for the First Federal Savings & Loan Association, 610 13th st. nw., discusses "The Validity of an Appraisal."

Seward H. Mott, executive-director, Urban Land Institute, 1737 K st. nw., writes of "Recent Developments in Suburban Shopping Centers."

Royal Bed Suite Is Displayed As Gift of Glasgow Citizenry

Glasgow, Scotland, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—The city of Glasgow's wedding present to Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip—a handsome set of furniture for the Prince's bedchamber in London—was shown to the British press yesterday.

The bedroom suite, draperies, carpet and other furnishings were purchased with donations from Glasgow citizens ranging from 10 cents to several hundred dollars.

The furniture incorporates many of Philip's own ideas. Nine months ago draftsmen were sent to Clarence House, the royal couple's London residence, which is now being remodeled, to measure the Prince's bedroom. After consultation with Philip, it was decided that the suite should be in regency style.

Palace authorities were consulted throughout the nine months it has taken to complete the suite of white Scottish sycamore.

The furniture includes two wardrobes—one for uniforms and one for civilian clothes. A special cupboard will hold Philip's shoes.

Other pieces of the suite include two cupboards with shelves, two bedside tables, a writing desk, a dressing chest, two open bookcases with cupboards below, and two glass-mounted book shelves with drawers. The drawer handles are silvered brass.

The draperies are in a rich plum color known as "Tartan red," especially created in Philip's honor. The carpet is oatmeal color.

25 Brick Homes Are Planned for Arlington

A home building program of 25 new brick homes is planned by M. T. Broyhill & Sons, Inc., for the 4900 and 5000 blocks of N. 34th st., Arlington, Va. Residences will be two-story and basement, of brick and cinder block, measuring 26x23 feet.

Product Previews

Here is one answer to the overcrowded closet problem. The Waldor hanger folds up with 12 dresses or six suits inside the closet door. Factory supplied screws hold the item to the door panel. Once the garments are placed in the grooves on the hanger, the rod is pushed up and secured by a catch at the top. To remove garments, the catch is released and the rod is allowed to fall into the extended position. Available locally.

One glimpse at the "Park-Timer" and you wonder why someone hadn't thought of it sooner. The gadget, designed as a key-ring, lets you know how much longer your nickel has to run in the parking meter. Invented by Vincent I. Mason of Providence, R. I., it is produced by the Boston Manufacturing Co., 61 Wareham st., Boston, Mass. Just put into production, it is not yet available locally. With four million parking meters from coast to coast, and a greater number of forgetful motorists, it looks like Mr. Mason has latched on to a good thing.

Safer winter driving is promised by use of individual rubber treads which the motorist can attach to his tires by a patented locking device. Called "Gripco Individuals," they provide traction without the noise, vibration, looseness and link breakage which often is associated with ordinary chains. Available locally.

Grow Your Own Apples, Pears On a 50-Foot Lot

You don't need an acre of land to grow your own apples or pears. Dwarf fruit trees are available now and they require no more space than lilacs or snowball bushes, says Better Homes & Gardens magazine.

The fruit grown on modern dwarf trees is as large and fine in every way as the same varieties produced on standard orchard trees. You can plant several varieties of dwarf apples instead of one standard size tree. Each year you get family-size crops with a variety ripening over several months.

The trees will bear from half to a bushel each. Because it's best for pollination and fruit set, two trees, and if possible two varieties, should be planted. Trees lacking an understock with strong brace roots will have to be firmly stacked to avoid upset by wind when loaded with fruit.

The size of dwarf trees now offered commercially is controlled in two ways. The wanted variety of apple or pear is grafted on a root which limits the size of the top. Quince roots usually are used for pears. A new race of dwarf apple trees grown with strong roots and a potent section of hardy Clark dwarfing understock set into the trunk is available for areas with wind and vigorous winters. Both methods produce early-bearing trees. A few varieties will give you some fruit the second year.

Building Material Output Drops 10 Pct.

Washington, Feb. 5 (AP).—Building material production in November made a seasonal drop averaging about 10 per cent from the record high reached the previous month, the Commerce Department has reported.

The department said 3 of the 20 materials it uses in compiling an index of production recorded gains. They were structural steel rigid steel conduit and cast iron soil pipe.

Declines in the other 17 materials ranged from 1 per cent in output of hardwood flooring to 55 per cent in production of mechanical stokers.

Chartres Glass Restored

Except Pay Rent

Gadgets Do All Work for Housekeeper

CHICAGO, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—Gadgets exhibited at the recent National Housewares show will do all the chores necessary for apartment dwellers except pay the rent.

Exhibited were improved and newly designed machines that dust, sweep, clean, wash, squeeze, beat, cook and do scores of other jobs. Most of them were designed for small apartments.

An orange juicer that squeezes a whole orange eliminating beforehand cutting. You throw in the whole orange and get strained juice. The juicer will sell for $14.95.

An ironer with a parlor-styled mahogany cover was designed for the housekeeper without a laundry room. The ironer is a decorative piece of furniture in a hall, dining room or living room.

Sending out the laundry is no longer a necessity for apartment housewives. Two manufacturers have come out with tiny washing machines that fit into the corner of a kitchenette.

A mixer with a food grinder has been produced by a Chicago firm to sell for under $40. The mixer grinds, mixes and juices without any sepagate transformers or attachments.

Soviet Stores Now Display Modern Home Appliances

MOSCOW, Feb. 5 (AP).—Moscow stores now stock many up-to-date home appliances and conveniences.

Mostorg, Moscow's central department store, has on sale electric refrigerators with a fine white enamel finish for the first time since the war.

And stores also sell television sets, vacuum cleaners, cameras, radios, pianos, bicycles and other things.

Many Soviet housewives dream of acquiring refrigerators, which appear to have between four and five cubic foot capacity. Prices are not given in this dispatch, which came through Soviet censorship. Neither does the dispatch make plain what earning power would be required to acquire this appliance.

This deartment store also carries television sets and has been advertising that "televisors along with radios must be in every home." The television factory is reported to have sold some thousands of sets in the last year. Production is due to be increased. There are television stations in Moscow and Leningrad.

The "Moskovitch" television set has nearly 23 square inches of viewing area. The smallest American table-model sets on sale commercially have viewing tubes with a picture area of 26 square inches. The most popular sets in America have screens of 52 square inches.

Even the Color Blind Can Mix This Paint

By Bernard Gavzer

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—The color blind now can mix paints and come up with the right shade, says Louis Cheskin, technical director of the Color Research Institute of America.

The secret is a new mixing formula.

Cheskin says research inspired by the atom bomb uncovered the three true primary colors. As a result, he claims, 1296 colors can be mixed for practical purposes.

He said the findings could be applied commercially in many ways and predicted they would have a revolutionary effect in the paint, ink and dye fields.

"For example," he said, "let's say a lady wants to paint a chair apple green. She goes to a paint store where the clerk looks through a stock of maybe 480 different kinds of paint. He finds one that is apple green. But the lady thinks maybe it's just a shade too dark. So the clerk suggests adding some white paint. Well, after some testing and mixing, the lady gets a can of paint of the shade she wants.

"Two months later the lady goes back to the store to get some more of the same shade. This time the clerk can't remember exactly what green he used or how much white he added. It's a sad story."

Select Color From Chart

THEN Cheskin told what would happen to the lady when the new color system was introduced.

"This time she finds the store has only three colors—green-blue, magenta-red and yellow, plus black and white," he said. "The clerk hands her a color chart and tells her to select the one she wants. Then he looks on the back of the chart and finds the formula for mixing.

"It's no complicated formula—it's like a recipe for making a cake. The formula, or recipe, tells the clerk the exact mixture to get the exact color the lady picked."

Cheskin, 40, author of two books on color, said there always have been disagreements and uncertainties about the primary colors.

"Practically," he said, "we now have the true primary colors, scientifically determined and scientifically valid."

He said he had changed the direction of his research after reading the Smythe atom bomb report and noting the Einstein theory of the relationship between energy and matter.

"Einstein said—in simple words—that energy and matter are the same thing in different forms and that matter can be converted into energy and energy into matter," Cheskin said. "This is basically what happened in the atom bomb.

"First let me explain that it was already scientifically determined that the primary colors for light are orange-red, green and violet-blue. What we wanted to do was to find the true primary colors for matter or pigment.

"I reasoned that light is just one aspect of energy and pigment is one aspect of matter. Eventually I concluded that color is the manifestation of the relationship between light (or energy) and pigment (or matter)."

Science Is Wonderful

"IN OTHER words," he said, "you have one set of primaries for light and another for matter. In the laboratory, it was found that two units of light—using an orange-red filter and a green filter under a lamp, for example—produced the primary color for pigment, yellow in this case.

"Other combinations of filters giving the three light primaries produced the other two pigment primary colors, green-blue and magenta-red. Now we had the three true primary colors of pigment — green-blue, magenta-red and yellow.

"I said that two units of light produced one unit of matter. Well, the reverse is also true. This means that by mixing yellow and magenta-red (or two units of matter) we produced orange-red, which is one unit of primary light color.

"With these three primary colors of pigment established—green-blue, magenta-red and yellow—plus black and white, we have produced 1296 colors that can be produced time and again in any quantity, any place.

"In connection with the commercial development of this, a large paint manufacturer making up color charts had the colors mixed by an office boy who was color blind. He didn't know what some of the colors were, but by reading the formula (which is expressed in mixtures of bulk or weight units) he was able to mix the exact colors."

Insects and Paint

One-quarter ounce of citronella added to each gallon of paint will keep insects away from freshly painted surfaces.

Small Shrubs Best With Low House

Dwarf trees or low-growing shrubs are best for landscaping the plot around a low ranch-style house. Evergreens should grow no higher than the window sill, and a variety chosen that will spread its foliage, not grow slender and spiked.

Dwarf varieties last a generation or more, do not shut light out of the rooms nor destroy the effect of picture windows. Ordinary evergreens outgrow their positions within 10 years, require annual pruning.

A normal flowering shrub requires a space 5 feet across; dwarf variety 3 feet. Three plants of either type in 15 linear feet are enough. Overplanting on a small plot with a large number of varieties gives a crowded effect.

Strength in Floors

Sub-floors should be laid diagonally, and added bracing strength is given if the first-story diagonal direction is reversed on the floor above.

Finger-Marked Walls

Finger marks can be removed from wallpaper by dampening the stained area with cold water and dusting on a little powdered pipe clay or fuller's earth. After a few minutes, brush off the powder. If the spots are greasy, cover with a clean blotter and press with a hot iron, finishing up with the powder treatment.

Radio Strikes New Blow In Campaign Against VD

By Sonia Stein

DISCUSSION of venereal disease hasn't exactly reached the chit-chat over the tea cups department, but it's getting there.

Radio, which dropped much of its false but firm modesty to help in the current Nation-wide VD campaign, has taken another step. The new 13-week series, "The Lonesome Road," which started Friday night at 10:45 over WWDC, has a woman narrator.

FREYMAN

She's not a matter-of-fact voiced woman posing as a nurse or social worker, but a lady-of-the-manor voiced woman who discussed the venereal disease problem woman to woman.

The District public health department has designed this series primarily to reach women.

On the credit side in the new series is the extremely able narration by Evelyn Freyman, the sympathetic interviews (picked up on a tape recorder) by Gunnar Back at VD clinics, and the intelligent script, also by Back.

On the debit side is the occasional skirting of terms which radio proprieties make necessary and the unexpectedly overbearing interviews by Mrs. Freyman, also made at the clinics and hospitals.

Back, who is a WTOP newsman, includes interviews in his daily shows. He was also narrator and interviewer for a WTOP series which last year pioneered in the technique of using the real (but disguised) victims of the disease to testify about symptoms and cure.

Mrs. Freyman an accomplished actress who is president of the local radio actors federation and vice president of the national group, is relatively new at interviewing. Her effort to keep the show moving and finish all the sentences left half finished by the clinic patients, comes between them and the audience, much as an interpreter hinders the emotional exchange in a conversation, although he helps the intellectual exchange.

AS IN previous VD radio broadcasts, the listeners will be referred to a Health Department number for further information. During the WTOP series, over 400 people called the number. More than 600 reporting to the clinics said they heard the broadcasts, or had been told about them by others.

One of the most heartening facts turned up by a survey after the campaign had begun, was that 42 per cent of the people with grade school education remember the important points in the VD campaign material. College trained people scored appreciably higher (59 per cent) but the campaign clearly is not going over the heads of those with little education.

The case histories, which are used lavishly in both locally produced series and in the series produced at Columbia University for Nation-wide use, are remembered well. The simple and inexpensive cure is also remembered by most people.

The new series is under the supervision of Dr. S. Ross Taggert, director of the D. C. Health Department's Bureau of Venereal Disease. Preston R. Fish, program specialist, is directing. Back is special consultant and script writer.

I HOPE the TV stations are boning up on Les Sands. WWDC's all-night disk jockey is such an endearing clown he'll probably be snapped up for a video comedy routine although he's an experienced sportscaster and audience participation emcee, too.

THE House Committee on Un-American Activities, in barring radio recording and film equipment from future hearings, claims that the technical gear slows up proceedings and turns them into a circus. Actually, I think the committee has just caught up with the old newspaper adage that says: The worst thing you can do to a speaker is quote him exactly.

Those newspaper reporters in whom the milk of human kindness has not been displaced by printers' ink, normally pick up dropped endings, splice split infinitive and glide over nonsignificant false starts when reporting off-the-cuff remarks, for the sake of both the speaker and the readers. However, radio and newsreel reporting is mercilessly accurate.

Ed Murrow in his WTOP-CBS broadcast Tuesday night protested the ban eloquently. Admitting that one of the troubles with a microphone is that it is both neutral and revealing, he said: "It has no built-in gadget which will eliminate split infinitives, dangling participles or other grammatical gremlins. It is without political affiliation, bias or prejudice . . . There is no argument about what was said; you just play the record back and there it is.

"I would maintain that a public hearing is a public hearing . . . and that to deny use of microphones and cameras to reporters who normally use them is the equivalent of saying to newspaper reporters: 'You may attend the hearing but you may not bring either pencil or pen with you.'"

'49 Symphony Drive For Funds Is Open

By Paul Hume

THE National Symphony Orchestra's 1949 financial campaign is open.

You will find on page 3-L the proposed budget for the coming season of the resident orchestra. This is the first time in history that the public has been taken into complete confidence on every item of expense involved in running the National Symphony.

Examination will show it to be a sound, intelligently planned budget. Salaries for the players in the orchestra are far from high. When the day comes that our players know they are sure of regular engagements at good wages, it will be easier for the management of the orchestra to retain some of the fine men and women who sometimes leave for better pay elsewhere.

The conductor's salary is extremely nominal in the light of the task expected of him and the caliber of work he must deliver. As for guest conductors, the amount set aside for them is reasonable in view of the great names announced last Sunday: Beecham, Mitropoulos, Szell, and Ansermet, with the possibility of others to be added.

The 'Big League'

THE FIGURES explain themselves. Familiarize yourselves with them in the next few days. Realize how much they will mean to you and your friends in the coming year. Washington is moving into the big league in its approach to music. In repertoire, conducting, soloists, and in its attitude, the Natonal Symphony management is demonstrating its intenton to bring finer music and performances here than we have ever had before.

This, to be trite about it, takes money. It takes your money. It takes your friends' money. It takes the money of people whom you know only casually but who happen to know and like music as much as or perhaps more than you.

Last year's deficit of $165,000 was raised through the gifts of about 8000 people. In addition, some of the most generous givers to the orchestra rased over $50,000 just before the main drive, to pay off remaining debts.

This year there is no overhanging deficit to be met. The total needed for next year is $190,000, to insure winter and summer concerts for 1949-1950. What will you do about it?

Congress Tosses the Theater a Challenge

By Richard L. Coe

AMONG THE HUNDREDS of new bills introduced in the new Congress is one leading to the establishment of a National Theater of the United States.

To avoid confusion at the outset, this has nothing whatever to do with our cause celebre down on E st. It is only coincidence that the Capital's sole legitimate theater, now a bastardized movie house, bears the name National Theater.

No, this National Theater is something else. It seeks the creation of some sort of foundation to advance the arts of theater, opera and ballet "as an official Government activity." The United States is the only one of the world's great powers which does not so recognize these arts.

The bill has been introduced in the House by Representative Jacob K. Javits, in the Senate by Senator Irving M. Ives, both New York Republicans. It asks that the President be empowered to convene an assembly representative of the theatrical, operatic, music and ballet worlds and to finance such a meeting with an appropriation of $250,000.

Money Unimportant

NOW this may be the first time I've ever said such a thing, but that quarter of a million isn't important. I'm hoping that Representative Javits gets at least some of that appropriation, but badly as I want to see a United States Theater, I can't forget that only $50,000 was appropriated to investigate the feasibility of a Federal Security program. It will certainly cost something to have the sort of convention Representative Javits envisions and it will cost money to create whatever that body outlines. That is why the appropriation is asked.

But quite apart from the quarter of a million, the bill is important in that it gives the theater world a challenge. There have been dreams and hopes along these lines for years.

Now if Congress can be prevailed to see the great results such a bill could mean, the theater world will have to put up or shut up. I'm inclined to think they'll put up, for some of the greatest figures of our cultural world are plumping for the bill.

It will be an enormous undertaking. As one who has found that the theater world is sanity incarnate compared with the strife and turmoil of the music and dancing worlds, I'm a bit in awe of the work it will take to make this dream practical.

Sherwood's Plan

FOR to be practical is the root of this dream. Ten years ago Robert E. Sherwood, so shortly to turn his talents into wartime duties, came up with a workable scheme for a national theater which would send five touring companies around the country on one-night stands, playing classical and new plays and musicals. He had it pretty well worked out and he's the sort of man who would be invaluable to such a plan now.

Another thing Representative Javits' bill does is raise any number of questions. Here are just a few:

What is a national theater? What would it mean to the majority of Americans? Do the millions who've never had the opportunity to see a play truly want a theater sponsored by the Government? Does such a bill have a chance of passing a Congress already weighed down with spectacular problems? Are the leaders of the theatrical profession ready to make the sacrifice such a foundation would entail? Will they recognize that it could be the highest honor to be a member of such an organization?

What About ANTA?

A NATIONAL theater need not start out by being a brick and mortar establishment. Modest beginnings are always the most reliable. A start already has been made in this sphere by ANTA, created by act of Congress, without appropriation, in 1935. ANTA is the American National Theater and Academy and since the war has been operating on a virtual shoestring but on a scale so heartening and farflung that I shall tell you more about it in a future Sunday column.

ANTA, however, is the natural organization which can form the crux of this movement, though Representative Javits has taken the trouble to say this is not an ANTA-inspired bill. He conceived the plan independently.

"My bill," he says, "does not propose that ANTA shall be the organization established as a national theater, nor does it rule that out. It provides that the theater in all its constituent elements shall itself propose the plan for a national theater deserving of Federal support."

The Congressman also stresses the fact that he is not promoting a scheme for unemployment relief, bringing back memories of ANTA's congressional birthpangs. In those days the WPA theater, which did so much to bring theater to great numbers of people at reasonable prices, was in the spotlight and to avoid confusion no fight was made for any ANTA appropriation. No, this has nothing to do with relief, made-work or anything like it.

Example of Barter

WHAT a national theater would mean to great masses of Americans is best illustrated by Virginia's Barter Theater. Under the spirited leadership of Robert Porterfield the Barter group has been receiving $10,000 a year from the Virginia Legislature with a practical purpose in mind.

That purpose, as Porterfield so amiably puts it, is "to keep the folks down on the farm." With the migrations from country to city living, the Old Dominion has decided it's up to the State to make life pleasanter for the folks down on the farm. Purely on practical grounds, the Legislature made its appropriations.

It's interesting, too, that both Virginia and North Carolina have appropriated monies for theater. The taxpayers of those States have contributed to "The Common Glory" at Williamsburg and "The Lost Colony" at Roanoke Island. A practical person would say that the best thing about these ventures is that they've both paid off.

Up to the Theater

AS TO whether Congress can be inspired to pass this legislation, much depends on the theater people themselves. The vital Congressmen to reach will be those who have no interest in the theater whatever. It is up to the people of the theater to impress on the legislators the glories of their art, much as in a lesser way Porterfield has achieved the official touch for his widely-traveled Barter Theater.

Representative Javits' bill is a challenge, then, not only to his fellows in Congress who dream of a better America, but also to the people of the arts, who long to show not only the rest of the earth our finer achievements, but also to show them to the farmer in Iowa, the miner in Pennsylvania and the rancher of the glorious Southwest.

In future Sunday columns, I hope to outline how other nations have achieved their national theaters, how ANTA has come closest to this in our own country and how the bill is faring in the Congress.

Russia Slaps Eric Johnston As 'Unsavory'

MOSCOW, Feb. 5 (NYHT).—Eric Johnston, who came to Moscow four months ago to sell Hollywood films to the Soviet Union, is now being denounced here as an unsavory character.

While here last September, Johnston negotiated the sale of 20 pictures to the Soviet ministry of cinematography. Now Soviet Art, a weekly organ, has accused Johnston of exploiting his return trip for "anti-Soviet purposes."

Wherever he went, reported Soviet Art, Johnston "insistently demanded the suppression, limitation and exclusion of Soviet films, threatening those who disobeyed with the most terrible reprisals."

He was also accused of resorting to "open diplomatic pressure" to secure for American films preferential commercial treatment over those of local production. The publication charged Johnston had got the better of J. Arthur Rank in a battle for the British market.

Soviet Art said that shortly before he was made head of the producers' association, Johnston praised the German Nazis and Joseph Goebbels as skilled motion picture propagandists and suggested that Americans use their work as examples for producing films to advertise "The American Way of Life."

'Smoke' Firm Gets in With The Classics

By John Crosby
NYHT NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 5.—In "Your Show Time," a new television program on film, the American Tobacco Co. has come to grips with the classics and also with a very pretty cost accounting problem. "Your Show Time" is a 26-week series of half-hour films of the classics which will be broadcast over 35 NBC television stations Fridays at 9:30 p. m., E. S. T.

It's a rather spectacular essay in television programming, and more importantly it furnishes an interesting argument for the people who think dramatic television programs will be on film. The half-hour dramas were shot at the Hal Roach studios for under $10,000 apiece. When asked how this was possible, the producers replied wearily that it couldn't be done but they did it anyway.

Economy is fairly evident in the first film in the series, "The Diamond Necklace," the de Maupassant short story. (To forestall any letters on the sub-

'Make Mine Manhattan,' Lahr at Ford's Feb. 14

WITH Bert Lahr as the star, "Make Mine Manhattan" will open a one-week stay a week from tomorrow night, February 14, at Ford's Theater, Baltimore. The theater will be dark this coming week.

The musical revue has just completed a year's run in New York and with Lahr taking over the starring position, it is set for a road tour headed toward Chicago.

Comedy is the strong point of "Make Mine Manhattan" with Lahr reviving his famous "Woodchopper's Song." Other sketches include a short satire on "Allegro," a bitter description of how newspapers pick their drama critics and a merry charade about a man buying one of those underwater pens.

Veteran Hassard Short has staged the production under the banner of Joseph Hyman, coproducer of Gotham's popular comedy, "Light Up the Sky." The sketches and lyrics are by Arnold B. Horwitt, who performed the same service for "Call Me Mister," and the music has been composed by Richard Lewine.

David Burns heads the supporting cast, with Jack Albertson, Lou Wills, jr., Jean Jones and Mary Ann Niles in other principal roles.

C. U. Play Open Soon

LEO BRADY'S new farce-comedy, "Grandstand Play," will be Catholic University's next theatrical offering, opening a two-week run Friday night in the campus playhouse.

Brady's latest has a baseball background and concerns a rookie given to erratic escapades who is unwilling to cooperate with baseball's strictures on a player's private life.

Bill Callahan has the leading role, with Phil Bosco playing his press agent. Jill Leahy and Rosemarie Busolitz have the feminine leads. The settings have been designed by James Waring and the play will be directed by the author.

For reservations call Michigan 600, Ext. 358.

AVC Play Repeats Tonight

The Washington Workshop's production of "The Glass Menagerie" will be repeated tonight in Cafritz Auditorium, 16th and Q sts., under sponsorship of the American Veterans Committee.

Directing the Workshop players is Mary-Averett Seeley. Mary Goldwater has the role created by the late Laurette Taylor, with Nan Frutkin, Arthur Leib and Peter Jenks completing the cast of the Tennessee Williams drama.

Pix Starts Soviet Film Tuesday

The Pix Theater is to have a first-run-in-Washington film starting Tuesday, "Symphony of Life."

This is a Soviet color film about a young musician who returns to his native Siberia after the war. It was photographed in Siberia and Moscow and stars Vladimir Drushnikov, who appeared in "Stone Flower."

Audie Says Fighting's Tough

Hollywood (AP).—Audie Murphy, most decorated American soldier of World War II, didn't pull any punches overseas. But now he's an actor, with 28 "fights" in "Bad Boy," his first starring picture. And everybody knows that on a movie set you don't mark up the expensive talent.

"Unless you have been in fights in which you're not supposed to hurt a guy, you have no idea what fighting for the screen is really like," he complained. "It's a tough job."

A Piece From the Puzzle

Hollywood (AP).—A typical piece from the Hollywood jigsaw puzzle: Columbia sent cast and crew all the way to Suisun, a town in northern California, to film "All the King's Men." The crew moved in 50 tons of earth to cover Suisun's paved streets. Then, to make sure Suisun won't look at all like Suisun, they changed most of the store fronts in the business district—even to the signs.

N. Y. to Have 4 New Plays

NEW YORK, Feb. 5 (AP).—Four new dramas, mostly on the serious side, are booked for Broadway first nights during the coming week.

"Blood Wedding," a drama which was tried out at the Pasadena (Calif.) Playhouse last season, will open Sunday night at the New Stages theater for a limited engagement of four weeks.

With Richard Whorf starred, Shakespeare's "Richard III," comes to the Booth on Tuesday.

"My Name is Aquilon," an adaptation from the French by Philip Barry, will be presented by the Theater Guild at the Lyceum on Wednesday.

"Death of a Salesman," a new play by Arthur Miller, opens at the Morosco Thursday night.

Laine Heading For Film Splurge

Hollywood, Feb. 5 (AP).—Songshouting Frankie Laine, latest idol of the bobbysoxers, looks set for a movie splurge.

Laine, whose rags-to-riches career would make a film story in itself, makes his screen debut in "Make Believe Ballroom." Now he's being dickered for by MGM for "Duchess of Idaho" and by Paramount for "The Broadway Story." He's no romantic figure, but he could score in films as a singing character.

Gene Autry and Champion, who will be in Uline's Arena next Sunday for a one-day schedule of performances at 2:30 and 8:30 p. m. This is Gene's Western variety show and is not to be confused with his rodeo. Tickets are at the Arena and the Fairway, 1328 G st. nw.

Here's the 1949 Budget For National Symphony

Last year's 8000 givers should be multiplied by 10. The broader the base of support for the National Symphony, the more secure its future. We could not enjoy many of our country's finest musical institutions without the help of those who in the past and present have been able and willing to give generously from larger resources than most of us enjoy.

Their help in the future will be as important and as welcome as at any time in years past. One of the great factors in the development of a national culture in this country s the tremendous spread of musical knowledge and enjoyment throughout the Nation. People remote from cities, as well as those in our most crowded urban centers, know and recognize the names and music of Sibelius, Mozart, Prokofieff, and Aaron Copland.

Such titles as "Aida," the Jupiter Symphony, and Appalachian Spring are known to thousands of people to whom radio and phonograph records have brought miracles of music. But these phonograph records and these radio broadcasts are of such institutions as the National Symphony. And it is to the newer, larger audiences that our necessarily expensive orchestras must look for added help for the future.

Business Innovation

IT IS NOT merely a matter of contributing to a financial campaign during the month of February in Washington, D. C. Those who love music, love it in many of its manifestations, wherever those may take place. You will want to send your gift to the symphony office, but you also want to become a subscriber for the coming season. The artistic changes we anticipate with such pleasure are being matched with innovations in business matters as well.

Next season, all concerts will be played on Wednesday nights so that each week, for 20 weeks, you may count on a concert by the National Symphony Orchestra. These concerts can be attended by subscribing for 10 alternating Wednesdays or for all 20 concerts at a time. They can also be attended through the purchase of single seats before each concert. It will no longer be necessary to buy Wednesday evening tickets through the women's resale committee.

Discounts will be given those who subscrbe for 10 concerts, larger discounts to those buying the seres of 20. Discounts are also to be given Government workers buying blocks of 90 seats, and to student groups of 30 or more.

There is a wide variety of committees at work in the financial campaign. They hope to cover every avenue to residents of the whole Washington area. But no matter how efficiently they do their job, they cannot hope to achieve results which you as indviduals can bring about if you will put this paper down and take out your bill folds, your pens, your stationery.

That Dollar Bill

NOW GO AHEAD. Put down the paper. Address an envelope to the NATIONAL SYMPHONY OFFICE, 1727 K st. nw., and enclose your dollar bill.

It's dollar bills in large enough numbers that will put this drive across, and will help to make the National Symphony Orchestra a real community venture.

Then address a short note to three or four friends or relatives, and tell them you would like them to do what you have just done, to help the National Symphony. Ask them to send their dollars, and write others asking them to mail in their gifts. Your dollar, plus those of your three friends, plus those of the three each of them writes will mean $13 for your 10 minutes' work.

Next week: Why is an 85-piece orchestra a minimum necessity?

Philadelphia $100,000 in Red

Philadelphia, Feb. 5 (AP).—The Philadelphia Orchestra announced today it plans to seek financial support from business concerns to wipe out a $100,000 deficit and afford "cultural opportunities" for workers.

Orchestra President Orville H. Bullitt said industry will be asked to buy blocks of seats at the twice-weekly concerts for distribution or resale to employes.

The Academy of Music seats 2980. Bullitt pointed out, however, that even with completely sold-out houses the orchestra cannot operate at a profit without other sources of revenue, especially from the sale of phonograph records.

English Ballet to Show Here

Sadler's Wells Ballet, from Covent Garden, will make its first American appearances next fall. Under Hurok management, the famous company will be booked in the Metropolitan Opera House and will visit Chicago, Boston, Washington, Detroit, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Montreal, Toronto, and London, Ontario, according to present plans. The Music Box

Ballet Russe Here 3 Days This Week

BALLET'S coming back to town this week.

Under its customary National Symphony sponsorship, the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo takes over Constitution Hall Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Repertoire includes such long-missing items as the exciting Rouge et Noir, danced to the Schostakovich First Symphony, the Beethoven Seventh Symphony, Mozartiana, and Raymonda, with others more familiar.

D'ATTILI

Company includes Danilova, Krassovska, Ruthanna Boris, Leon Danielian, and others whose dancing has constantly increased in beauty and style in recent years. Paul Strauss will share conducting honors with Ivan Boutnikoff.

The week also furnishes pianists old and new, with Artur Rubinstein, Glauco D'Attili and Elizabeth Cates. Service musicians come up with unusually high programs this week, including Haydn's Surprise Symphony, Aaron Copland's Quiet City, and young Judith Callander as soprano soloist in Lisner's Air Force concert.

Mary Cardwell Dawson is seeking singers for her forthcoming Aida, set for the end of April in the National Guard Armory. Inquiries should be directed to Mrs. Dawson, DEcatur 5232. The opera will be sung in English, under the sponsorship of the National Negro Opera Company.

Victor Herbert, composer, conductor and cellist, is remembered in a current exhibition at the Library of Congress, scheduled to run through February. Herbert was born 90 years ago February 1.

KAPPA ALPHA PSI'S Washington alumni present Howard University's Choir under Warner Lawson on Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. Metropolitan A. M. E. Church is the place.

Robert Shone, organist, and Lawrence Sears, baritone, will present a recital of classic and contemporary music Sunday, February 13, at Brady Hall, Sisters College, Catholic University. Ronald Arnatt's new Nunc Dimittis will receive its premiere.

Patrick Hayes, happily anticipating his new status as concert manager for the artists hitherto considered the property of Dorothy Hodgkins Dorsey, announces that the RCA Victor-Robert Merrill show, set for February 7, is cancelled. The show was revamped by radio planners, and there is nothing left to put on the road. Ticket refunds are available at Snow's.

A new quartet to Washington, Chicago's Fine Arts, comes to our chamber music library this week, including William Walton's A Minor quartet between Haydn and Beethoven.

The Record Player

Monteux 'Ruy Blas' Has Punch

MENDELSSOHN: Ruy Blas Overture. San Francisco Symphony under Pierre Monteux. Victor 12-0657. $1.25.

This overture, once heard on symphony programs regularly, has lately moved over to the high school class. It takes the kind of invigorating rhythmic pulse which Monteux gives it, together with the elegance of style so appropriate in Mendelssohn's music. The only account of the overture to compare with this is its equal, by Sir Thomas Beecham and the London Philharmonic. This surface is pretty good.

Schumann: Warum, Grillen, and Traumeswirren, Ania Dorfmann, pianist. Victor 12-0424. $1.25.

Miss Dorfmann's most successful single record to date contains three famous pieces of Schumann, frequently heard today as student material. Drawn from his Fantasy Pieces, these are bits of imagery skillfully caught in a good recording of the piano. They possess a warmth which makes Miss Dorfmann's playing interesting. Some day we ought to have a complete recording of these excellent studies.

ANIA DORFMANN
. . . her best record yet

Albeniz: Iberia. Claudio Arrau, pianist. Columbia 757. $7.25.

Isaac Albeniz stands with Manuel de Falla and Enrique Granados as twentieth century Spain's contributions to the finest in music. His piano preludes, 12 in number, entitled Iberia, include some of the best known Spanish music in current piano repertoires. Arrau understands the rhythms, colors, melodies, and sonorities of this music to perfection.

His tone can be by turns melting, fleet, and proud. Here are such familiar Albeniz titles as Fete-Dieu a Seville, Evcoacion, Triana, all popular favorites with pianists and audiences.

Massenet: Manon: La Reve; also: Werther: Pourquoi me reveiller? Ferruccio Tagliavini, tenor. Victor. $1.25.

You can now buy these in the old Schipa versions, and if I were you, that's what I'd do. Tagliavini has never made the highest use of his voice, and in things like the Dream, he falls short of true vocalism in his trick managing of the soft work. The big moments of Werther's lament lack roundness, and the rest of the aria somehow does not convince as it should. If you want newer accounts of these than Schipa's, wait for young De Stefano to record them. The recording technically is adequate.

It's All Over Town

This Is the Sculptor's Month

By Jane Watson Crane

FEBRUARY is the month for the city's sculptors. Business firms have collaborated with the Washington Sculptors Group by placing carved, hammered and modeled pieces in stone, wood and metal, in shop windows, theater lobbies, store and club interiors in various parts of the city.

Behind the scheme, the first of its kind to be undertaken by sculptors in Washington, is Katherine Sater, the new head of the group. An artist herself, Miss Sater previously conducted an art column for the Columbus (Ohio) Citizen. She brings to her first venture in the District a wealth of experience in community art activity and a firm conviction that there is a place for sculpture in contemporary life.

Thirty firms are cooperating in showing pieces this month. One department store is devoting four windows to displays, two florists are showing garden sculptures, and several decorating firms exhibit work in relation to interiors. Most of the items chosen have appeared in gallery exhibitions in Washington and elsewhere. The group includes such well known artists as Russell Houston, Maxim Elias, Clare Rontanini, Jozef Herzbrunn and Lilli Gettinger.

Lazzari Show

THE United Nations Club has embarked on a 1949 program of exhibitions directed by Agnes Delano, experienced art teacher. The series began auspiciously with a show of paintings by Philip Bell of this city. For February she has arranged an event of unusual interest—a retrospective exhibition by Pietro Lazzari, recently returned from Italy.

'Edward Rowan,' portrait by Pietro Lazzari, currently on display at the United Nations Club

The exhibition has no elaborate catalogue or foreword, but the works are dedicated by the artist himself as a memorial tribute to the man to whom he feels most indebted for encouragement and inspiration—the late Edward Rowan, one of the former chiefs of the Section of Fine Arts. Lazzari did a portrait head of Rowan in charcoal shortly before he died.

Lazzari, who left Italy during the early days of the Mussolini regime, revisited Rome this year. He brought back with him some early work that is included in the exhibition. There is a self-portrait in oil, done 20 years ago, and a silver point drawing of a girl in classic Italian style. Among sketches completed there this year is a portrait of the contemporary artist, Gino Severini, now a man of 60.

Branch Here?

DOROTHEA GREENBAUM, a sculptor who lived and worked in Washington for many years, came down from New York to address local artists on the subject of Artists Equity, of which she is an executive. She described the aims and progress of this national, non-political, esthetically non-partisan organization representing the professional artists of America.

Founded less than two years ago, Artists Equity has a membership of over 1300 drawn from every State of the Union. The purpose of the meeting here was to stimulate development of a Washington branch. With Mrs. Greenbaum was Arthur Adams, who spoke on the four objectives of the Equity Fund—to establish a placement bureau for artists, a welfare fund for the needy, a lecture bureau, and a general information file relating to the artists and their work, to be made available on a royalty basis.

Hudson D. Walker, former president of the American Federation of Arts, is executive director of the Artists Equity, which has headquarters in the Grand Central Building in New York. President is Yasuo Kuniyoshi, and among directors well known in Washington are George Biddle, Jacob Lawrence, Henry Varnum Poor, Peppino Mangravite, Henry Billings, Gladys Rockmore Davis, Ralph Stackpole, Jean Charlot, Samuel Rosenberg and Richard Lahey.

Corcoran Has Paintings Up By Malherbe

THE Corcoran Gallery until February 25 is exhibiting 20 oil paintings by William Malherbe, a contemporary French artist whose work hangs in several museums in this country, but who is little known to the general public.

Opening this afternoon at the American Veterans Committee Clubhouse, 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw., is an exhibition of paintings and drawings by Therese M. Schwartz, which will continue to March 4. Mrs. Schwartz, a Washington resident since 1940, has exhibited at the New Age Gallery in New York and with the Provincetown Art Association. Her first one-man show in Washington was at Howard University in 1946.

Studies of Gothic cathedrals, from the collection of Dr. Clarence Ward of Oberlin College, will be shown at the National Gallery of Art beginning today. Dr. Ward will lecture on the same topic at 4 p. m. today.

Jean Lanigan is having a one-man show of paintings and drawings at the central branch of the Public Library this month.

Biow Associates Gallery at 1306 H st. nw., is showing paintings and drawings by Walter A. Carnelli, Julia Eckel, Frances Ferry, Eldora Lerenzini, and Jozef Pielage. The group may be seen daily from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m., except Sundays. The show continues through February 11.

John Walker, chief curator of the National Gallery of Art, will give an illustrated lecture on the Italian paintings in the Widener collection in the main auditorium of McMahan Hall at Catholic University of America on Wednesday, February 9, at 8:30 p. m.

Movie Magnate Says TV Means Boost for Films

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK, Feb. 5 (AP).—Film Magnate Spyros K. Skouras predicts television "will give the motion picture industry the greatest impetus since the advent of sound."

Skouras, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, foresees the use of television to project shows simultaneously in whole circuits of theaters, 3000 or more at a time.

These programs, he said in an interview, would be "derived from the latest and best the arts can offer—the finest in moton pictures, operas, plays, sports, along with current events of great import."

The programs would be sent over "closed circuits" directly into the theaters and would not be broadcast over the air. Hence you couldn't get them on your home set and would have to go to the theater to see them.

Cost Too Great

IT'S OBVIOUS, he continued, that the cost of such programs would be too great for them to be telecast into homes free of charge.

Films would remain the feature attractions, he went on, with other entertainment built around them. But the films would be telecast directly into the theater, reducing part of the industry's overhead and distribution costs under present methods which require a separate film for each theater.

And television would enable theaters to present symphony orchestras, concert artists, popular entertainers and major public events on the same program.

The result would be—and will be, Skouras hopes—a great increase in theater patronage and a demand for more good pictures than before.

Fee for Films?

IF SOME PLAN could be worked out under which the Government would permit a fee to be charged for first run movies and other premium entertainment received on home sets, Skouras said, that "might change the whole form of this entertainment."

A Chicago radio and television firm (Zenith) already has developed a plan along this line called "phonevision." It would have special television stations broadcasting first run movies, plays and similar top flight programs. But you couldn't get the programs on your home set without a telephone connection to the station, for which you would be charged according to the number of programs ordered. This would be a separate service from commercial telecasts paid for by advertisers and received on home sets free of charge.

But regardless of whether a fee type of program becomes available for the home, Skouras looks for theater telecasts to be the nucleus of "a new and great amusement network."

Godfrey Finds All Work And No Play Makes Jack

NEW YORK, Feb. 6 (AP).—Jovial, deep-voiced Arthur Godfrey is the triple threat man of radio and television.

While other stars have been the focus of attention in talent raids, Godfrey has moved into a unique position in audience ratings. He has shows among the first ten in both daytime and nighttime radio, and in television.

Godfrey currently is accounting for some 6 million dollars a year in business for the Columbia Broadcasting System, a sum eclipsing the amounts involved in the Jack Benny and Amos 'n' Andy deals.

Godfrey has five one-hour morning shows a week, which rank tenth in the latest Hooper ratings in competition with soap opera's best.

He has a half hour Monday night radio show, "Talent Scouts," that is sixth in the Hooper radio night ratings. A straight television duplication of the shows ranks third in New York City television ratings.

Godfrey recently added a one-hour television show on Wednesday nights which immediately moved into second place in the Hooper television ratings for New York. This also gives him the unique claim of having two of the top ten television programs at the same time.

As if that weren't enough to keep him busy, Godfrey is doing four shows a day at a New York theater with a troupe from his night radio show.

Commercials Too Short?

since its opening over a year ago, the Arlington station will sign on at 6 a. m. and sign off at 1:05 or even later the next morning beginning next month, according to Manager Howard Stanley. At the same time the power will be raised to 5000 watts, the same power used by three big Washington stations, WMAL, WRC and WOL. Programming plans will be announced soon.

Probably no young father ever awaited baby's first word as eagerly as Milton Q. Ford waited for little Richard to speak. Little Richard, a small, greenish, beak-nosed creature, wouldn't speak up on Ford's morning show on WWDC in spite of all the wheedling given him. Ford vowed not to shave until Richard spoke. Richard remained silent. Milton remained bearded. Finally Richard spoke—raucously and blurredly—but he spoke.

So now Ford is able to shave again, and Richard is doing a daily stint on the show. Richard, by the way is a parrot, and is probably the only local radio actor without an AFRA union card.

WOIC's pleasant sign-on gimmick got under way this week. The new TV station now signs on daily at 6:30 p. m. with the pledge of allegiance to the flag given by a Boy Scout. A different scout appears each night. The boys are chosen by Washington Boy Scout Director Kenneth Spears, and all troops in the WOIC coverage area will eventually be represented.

IT STUNS me to think about it, but I have just seen some television commercials which were too short. They are not telecast locally yet, although they are available to local advertisers. Half-minute dramas showing how to keep house better, how to exercise off the bulge and how to whip up a new dish, the Telespots commercials previewed here are "open-end" spots. The local advertiser tags his half minute message on at the end.

The theory is that the series of how-to-do demonstrations will be so appealing that the audience will just love the firm that sponsors them.

At least the audience won't hate a sponsor who keeps mum about his own virtues for a half minute as much as he hates the one who badgers him for the full 60 seconds.

The acting could be better and the information more detailed, but let's not scrap. They are better than most.

Classic Looks Good Enough On TV Film

ject, there were two titles to that story—"The Necklace," probably the best known, and "The Diamond Necklace.") The cast was limited to four or five people, the settings were minute and few in number, and the party scene was restricted chiefly to festive noises off-stage.

Book Store Locale

THE stories all open in a book store where you'll find Arthur Shields, the superb Abbey Theater actor, fingering a book or play or short story, which, he explains, is among his favorites. He begins to talk about it and presently the film slides smoothly into the story itself. Shields, the only permanent member of the cast, is as benign a bookseller as you'll ever experience and, I'm forced to admit, he smokes a cigarette with almost impossible enjoyment.

The hand of radio is a little too conspicuous in the narrative technique. There are long stretches of pure narrative—Mr. Shields talking while the actors emote silently in the background. Much as the early talkies felt that people had to chatter incessantly, early television drama appears to be under the impression that dead air must be avoided at all costs.

These films are made exclusively for television's small screens and in general you get the actor from the waist up. No more than two or three actors get into one scene and usually their elbows are jammed into one another's ribs in an effort to get them as close together as possible. This, I ought to add, is not the fault of cameraman or director. The action can't be widened much more than that on today's small screens without losing a great deal of detail. Seems to me we'll have to get larger screens if television drama is ever to lose this terribly cramped atmosphere.

A Hunch

AS FOR the story itself, the emphasis, I noticed, has been shifted rather generously from one mood to another. The merciless irony of the original has been changed to sentimental tragedy. The story ended on a ray of hope which, I'm sure, de Maupassant never intended but which isn't as bad as it sounds. I have a hunch all these classics will be rather substantially revised in tone, if not in content, to suit the sentimental tastes of the movie-going and radio-listening public.

Still, it's an encouraging sign to find the American Tobacco Co. delving into the classics in the first place. Of course, economy may be at the bottom of this high-minded enterprise too. Most of the classics are in the public domain.

Wainwright Gave Ed a Big Thrill

BIGGEST thrill Ed Sullivan has had on his "Toast of the Town" program on CBS-TV came the night he introduced Gen. Jonathan Wainwright who was in the audience.

The other members of the studio audience stood to pay respects to the hero of Corregidor, and bartenders all over the city called Sullivan to say that their customers also stood at attention when the general's face was flashed on the TV screen.

Television to Enter Field of Education

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Plans for what was termed the first major television enterprise in the field of child education are announced by the National Broadcasting Co. and educational organizations.

The National Education Association, the boards of education of New York City, Philadelphia and Baltimore and NBC announce that a series of educational programs for children, to be telecast daily, will be instituted soon.

Entitled "Stop—Look—and Learn," the series will cover geography, history, government, science, literature and music.

Video Moving Toward Better Visual Quality

THE MOST important single question about television a prospective set buyer can ask is: "How good is the picture you see?" For this the picture at the right, taken off a television screen, presents a photographic answer. It gives you an approximate idea of what a good television set in proper adjustment can do. It has all the detail of a 16-mm. movie.

Much of the time, television reception is satisfying and clear. But sometimes a set owner runs into annoyances comparable to static on a radio, but a good deal more disturbing. Take the following incident as an example:

Burton Walder, a young engineer who lives in New York State's Putnam County, was seated before his television set one night recently when he noticed the picture growing dim and bright by turns. "There's a plane overhead," said Walder to three guests who had come to see some television. "How do you know?" asked one of the visitors.

Walder explained that the plane passing overhead had intercepted the waves coming from the television station. Waves reflected off the plane had neutralized and then reinforced the incoming signal.

"Why, television is like radar," said a guest. "Yes," replied Walder ruefully, "and my set never misses a plane."

Walder's trouble with passing airplanes is only one of the occasional irritations in store for set owners. The ignition system of cars on a road within 50 feet or so of a set's antenna radiate signals that are likely to be picked up. These signals trace a disconcerting pattern of blank white stripes across the screen, or they trip up the steady succession of different pictures (30 a second). This loss of synchronization puts the bottom half of a picture where the top should be, and vice versa.

There are other intermittent nuisances; any adjacent electrical discharge reveals its presence on a television screen. Thus oil burners and vacuum cleaners will vex television viewers. A television set is not even safe from itself; a nearby set can radiate disturbing waves. FM also plagues viewers.

But that's not enough gloom.

The television picture is actually very bright, and almost all the troubles outlined above have solutions. Take the annoyance due to interference from automobiles. This is being eliminated slowly through redesign of auto igition systems. In addition, television engineers are making sets less susceptible to interference. A new RCA Victor model appearing on the market now has increased resistance to FM, amateur and diathermy interference. This set also is less susceptible to airplane reflections.

The RCA set is cited only as an example. Other manufacturers, including Philco and Zentih, are coming out with new sets which have similar improvements. Broadcasters in two or three years will probably do their share toward improving reception by increasing station power. This would help neutralize interference and make indoor antennae more practical.

British to Hike Output

London, Feb. 5 (AP).—Britain expects to increase its production of television sets. Short of some essential parts, it plans to import cathode ray tubes from Belgium and Czechoslovakia. Arrival of the shipments will mean return to work for 400 women who were dismissed because tubes were unavailable to build the sets.

Swiss Announcers Must Be Linguists

RADIO announcers and commentators in Switzerland not only must have talent, but they must be linguists as well. Lance Tschannen (pronounced "Shannon"), on leave from the Swiss Broadcasting Corp. to study American radio, says domestic broadcasts in his country go out in three languages — German, French and Italian—from three different stations. The short wave broadcasts go out in those three languages plus English, Spanish and Portuguese.

Case Made For U.S. Aid To Schools

By Fred M. Hechinger

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has stated clearly his demand that Federal aid be given to the education of all American children. A bill, following up that demand, was promptly introduced in the Senate by Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), and cosponsored by eight other Democrats and five Republicans. Senator Robert A. Taft, author of a similar bill in the last Congress, indorsed the proposal for his side of the Legislature.

With such men as Claude Pepper, Irving M. Ives, Allen J. Ellender and Bob Taft joining hands in an educational alliance, the bill should out-bipartisan even our foreign policy. There should not remain any reason for further delay. There should not be a repetition of last year's do-nothing tactics.

It is proposed that $300,000,000 per year be set aside to help the States, in proportion of their need, to provide schools for all children and to equalize educational opportunities on the basis of a minimum standard. The expenditure of $50 per year for every child's education has been set as that minimum. Considering the items on which each of us spends more than that, the proposal cannot be accused of reckless governmental squandering.

The bill further prohibits Federal control or interference in educational matters. All school policy will remain in the hands of local and State agencies. Said Senator Thomas: "The principle is in keeping with the evolving theory of cooperation between the State and the Nation . . . This bill will make possible universal education in this country, an ideal which we have long held, but which we have never fully realized."

Check These Figures

Federal aid to education is not just some vague, impersonal issue to be left to "the authorities." It's as close to home as the paycheck, the house, the next meal and, particularly—the child. The following table will permit you, The Washington Post reader, to grade your own effort:

(Statistics by courtesy of National Education Assn.)	U. S. Average	D. C. Average	Maryland Average	Virginia Average	Lowest Average
Income per capita of population (1946)	$1213	$1546	$1345	$970	$575 Miss.
Percentage of income spent on the public school	1.82	1.13	1.19	1.62	1.19 MD.
Percentage of school support from State sources	36	8	30	45	1 Nebr.
Average per pupil expenditure from State and local sources per year ('45-'46)	$134	$172	$124	$91	45 Miss.
Average teachers' salaries (1945-46)	$1995	$2637	$2262	$1574	$856 Miss.
Per cent of pupils enrolled in secondary schools (1946)	24.1	25.2	21.1	21.4	13.3 Miss.
Draft registrants per 1000 classified as educationally deficient (1940-44)	47	38	67	102	135 S. C.
Military rejections due to educational deficiencies in percentage from 1940-44	12.3	6.9	14.6	24.8	33.3 S. C.

Undereducated Soldiers

ON my recent travels I was shocked to find a considerable number of American soldiers painfully undereducated. The percentage of GI's who have not completed high school is high. Many have not gone beyond grade school. To urge Congress to regard the Federal aid bill as priority—if not emergency—legislation, here are some of the relevant facts:

The per capita income of Americans in different States varies greatly. This means that some States simply are not financially able to support an adequate school system and to offer their children the birthright of equal opportunity. There is a wide gap between the $1770 income of the average citizen in Nevada and the $575 in Mississippi. More than half of all States are below the national average. Should their children be penalized.

It won't do to blame it on the States' willingness to make the effort. Of the 16 Southern States, for instance, with their low record of achievement, 9 have made efforts equal to or above the national average. This is no brief for the States' backsliding in educational spending, but it is unreasonable to expect equal spending where there is unequal earning. What is more—educational deficiencies along with racial discrimination continue to perpetuate economic backwardness. This is a threat to the Nation.

Opportunities Equal?

WE frequently speak of equality—we started with the Declaration of Independence and we continue at after-dinner speeches. We also believe that generally people get what they pay for. Montana spends an average of $214 on each pupil every year. Mississippi offers $45. The average for the United States is $134. Twenty States are below that average. But all the children are Americans. Are their opportunities equal?

If you are a teacher in California your services are worth an average of $2987 a year. In Mississippi you would have to get along on $856. As "an American teacher" the record says you are getting an average of $1995. But in 30 States it seems that you wouldn't be "an American teacher" because you'd be getting less money, even after allowing for differences in the cost of living. Are teachers worth less in some parts? Are the children, is education worth less—or worthless?

I know of a school in Arkansas which—for 16 children and one teacher—has to run on a total budget of $591 a year. No wonder that sometimes they can't find a teacher at all—for years.

We take it for granted that the completion of high school has become something of a "must" for the good of the Nation and its citizens. But actually only 24.1 per cent of the Nation's eligible youngsters are at present enrolled in high school. And the figure ranges from 31.3 in New York down to 13.3 in Mississippi.

National Threat

IS this a national threat? You need not guess about that. During the war more than one million men were found educationally deficient—47 out of every 1000 Americans. More than 659,000 had to be rejected as unfit for service because of their educational status, and that is more than 35 divisions. Over and above that the army accepted more than 300,000 illiterates and had to spend time and money to teach them to read and write. I don't know whether or not we need universal military training, but I am sure that—for peace or war—we need universal literacy, at least.

Is the under-educated State a threat to the Nation? Of all draft registrants in the State of Washington only 1.4 per cent had to be turned down for educational deficiencies. In South Carolina the grand total was 33.3 per cent. One-third of a State ineligible for the Nation's defense!

I know that there are still many uncompromising States Righters. But can thinking Americans remain State-isolationists or My-State-Firsters? Even if there were no other sensible arguments against the ideologies of the provincial patriots, the fact is that in an average peacetime year more than seven million Americans move from one State to another. This country is exactly what its name implies—the United States of America.

The schooling of American children must be a united effort.

Mining Extension Classes

Morgantown, W. Va., Feb. 5.—Extension classes in coal mining, mine equipment maintenance, oil and gas, and other technical subjects are being attended by more than 1600 persons in different parts of the State, it was announced today by the University of West Virginia School of Mines. The coal-mining classes, operated by the school's extension department in cooperation with the vocational division of the State Department of Education, are offered in principal coal mining communities throughout West Virginia. Classes in oil and gas subjects, held in other towns, cover the technical aspects of the petroleum and natural gas industry.

To Do Painting for College

Winooski Park, Vt., Feb. 5.—St. Michael's College has commissioned the Vermont artist Rita Pfeifer to do an oil painting for its new library. The Montpelier artist will paint Mont St. Michel, the former home in France of the Fathers of St. Edmund, who conduct St. Michael's. The painting will be hung above the mantel in the new library.

Youth at the Helm

Students Run a Jersey Industry for a Day

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Feb. 5 (AP).—A 17-year-old youth sat in the president's chair in a large surgical supply corporation. Frank Metz not only sat in the chair, but was making like the president as he urged top management officers to "greater productivity and efficiency."

It happened in New Brunswick, at the main plant of the corporation (Johnson & Johnson) where "A Day In Modern Industry" was observed.

Two hundred senior students from the New Brunswick and the St. Peter's high schools took over the corporation lock, stock and barrel for a day. They were out to learn what makes the wheels of a major modern industry click.

For the corporation, it was an industrial experiment in selling the American free enterprise system and acquainting tomorrow's workers with modern management.

The plan is an adaptation of the "Mayor For A Day" idea. The corporation invited all senior students to take part in the special day. Four hundred volunteered, from whom 200 were selected. Each took his choice of job.

The youthful industrialists gathered in the power plant where officials of the corporation took them to their designated positions in personnel, traffic, engineering, cotton mill, gauze mill, plaster mill, export, legal aand numerous other departments.

Young Edgar Ward replaced the corporation's assistant general counsel and immediately started dictating to a classmate, Norma Chase. After the day's work, Legal Counsel Ward said, "I only hope that the students following me in school will have the same opportunity to see and get the feel of big business from the inside."

Husky Frank Krives became director of personnel and thought the industry day "a swell idea."

"It's much better than a tour," he said. "Under this plan a young fellow or girl can get the real sense of working."

In the training department 18-year-old Henry Yetman tried to explain how high school youngsters picture big business.

"Looking from the outside in," he said, "it is massive and confusing. You can't imagine what goes on inside. This plan helps the undecided student to make a definite decision one way or the other. I sat in on supervisors' meetings, attended training courses, made out work schedules, and liked it. I feel confident now that I want to get into some kind of manufacturing plant, and deal in employe relations, and have something to do with training activities."

Masters Individual Closes Tonight

By Marian H. Barre

UNIQUE among tournaments, the invitational Masters Individual closing tonight in New York at the Park Sheraton Hotel is exclusively for experts, 36 luminaries from all over the country forming one section, while an equal number of rising stars play in another. All other annual tourneys are amateur affairs. The Individual opened Friday, five sessions being necessary in a movement where each virtuoso plays in a partnership with every other.

Among Washingtonians belonging in the upper strata are Dr. A. J. Steinberg and Col. R. H. Skinner. Two other Life Masters achieved that status while living here so we still claim them as our own; they are J. J. Parish and Mrs. Frederick Eberson.

J. G. Stone, with more points than many "Lifers," heads the Senior Master group; a mere technicality has been his stumbling block. Among others playing are Fred L. Karpin, Miller Roberts, and Miss Kathleen McNutt, who became a "Senior" last fall, hence this was her first invitation to an Individual.

TWO Maryland State Championships were captured by Washingtonians in the Baltimore annual last week-end. Mrs. Edward Cotter and Mrs. Lillian Krick winning women's pairs while a local line-up tied in the team game. Playing in the foursome were Skinner, Stone, and J. D. Boyd, with Ira Haygooni, of Baltimore, also a member. The other team played Bowie, Gill, Schlesinger, all of Baltimore, and the Philadelphia ace, John Crawford.

Remaining Maryland trophies fell as follows:

Men's pairs—Edward Pierson and R. L. Nelson, Baltimore; mixed pairs—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Solomon, of Philadelphia; open pairs, Schlesinger and Jane Hunter, Baltimore.

The District group picked several awards for placing in these events; Stone and Murray were third in male pairs, Cotter and Parish, fourth in the opens, Karpin and Spritzer led an open qualifying session; the champion team won the final round; Boschan, Eberson, Poissant, and Tubbs were fourth in this match.

The monthly master point game at the Count Club will be played Tuesday evening; another nationally awarded match is scheduled for Saturday evening at the Chess Club.

WASHINGTON BRIDGE LEAGUE members please note:

Instead of the usual team game, another master point pair contest will be played Wednesday at 8:00 p. m. in Hotel Roosevelt.

This change in schedule was voted by the executive committee in order to secure the due quota of monthly national awards which otherwise would be lost if the first session of the men's and women's pair championships cancelled the bi-monthly event. These championships will be held concurrently on February 16 and 23, all duos playing through both rounds without elimination.

Two former members here on a visit won north-south in Section A last Wednesday. They are Mr. and Mrs. John Darsey, now of Atlanta, Ga. In the other position top awards went to Colonel Skinner and Lewis Tubbs. In Section B, Mrs. Dora Schwartz, H. R. King, Mrs. Howard Campbell, and C. C. Johnson led their respective positions. Mr. and Mrs. Karl Itkin, J. G. Stone, Joe White, Mrs. F. Millspaugh, Mrs. Elizabeth Count, George Lassise and Henry Horne collected half master points.

At the Federal Bridge League monthly pair match on January 31 the following partnerships won:

Mrs. Frieda Bentley, Lou Levinson, Colonel Skinner and Stone, Mrs. Eberson and her hostess, Mrs. Lester Gibson, R. H. Higgins and M. Allen. In the runner-up list were Mrs. Margaret Fisher, Dr. N. J. McHugh, Colonel Seabourne, A. Soberheim, Mrs. J. A. Dearing, Mrs. T. E. Turner, Dr. Jasney, and E. Bublick . . . The Federal resumes team-of-four play tomorrow evening.

National points in competition at the Chess Club on the "fourth Thursday" were divided among Boyd and White, Mrs. Myrtle McMahon and J. G. Fletcher. (Myrtle has kept right on winning since the Northern Virginia). Understudies in this game were Mrs. C. W. Zimmer, Dr. C. C. McDonnell, David Murray and Gary Ankonian . . . The Chess Club has another M. P. game coming up on February 12.

Two other similar matches occur this week, at Buckingham Village Tuesday evening (this event was scheduled for February 1 but was postponed) and at Euclid Studios Friday evening.

P. O. Department Should Still Issue All Stamps

By William M. Stuart

THE 1949 stamp program has not yet been announced by the Postoffice Department. It is uncertain whether Congress will repeat its 1948 stamp program concerning authorized new issues. Third Assistant Postmaster General Lawler, in whose division stamps originate, indicates that discussions are already under way for stamps honoring General Pershing, Charles Evans Hughes, Ernie Pyle, Orville and Wilbur Wright, "Babe" Ruth, Alexandria, Va., and several others.

Each day brings its quota of new bills and ideas for new commemoratives from Congress, therefore, it is very difficult even to suggest the correct number of new issues. Before any announcement can be made, it would seem necessary to have some understanding with Congress as to what stamps it will sponsor. A better plan would be to have the department issue all stamps as formerly, as this method has always been satisfactory.

A BILLION contraband postage stamps seized in Bermuda during the war by the Bermuda prize court will be sold at auction March 10 and March 11 in the prize court offices, Hamilton Hotel, Hamilton, Bermuda. The stamps will be sold by the firm of R. H. Harmer, Inc., of New York.

Most of the stamps came from Axis-dominated countries and parts of Africa. They were intercepted in Bermuda while on their way illegally to the United States.

Some 485,000 stamps seized in 1941 when they were found in the luggage of a major illegal stamp ring figure who was passing through Bermuda on his way to Cuba. The illicit stamp ring was exposed in the Bermuda prize court in 1945. The seized used and unused stamps weigh nearly 2 tons. It is expected the sale will amount to $60,000.

REPRESENTATIVE JOSEPH W. MARTIN, JR., of Massachusetts asks for a commemorative stamp honoring the 160th anniversary of the first cotton mill built at Pawtucket, R. I., in 1789. The cotton textile merchants will observe national cotton week in May and ask that the stamp be issued on May 9, the first day of the celebration.

POLAND has issued a souvenir sheet containing three stamps. The 80-zloty, blue, shows the late President Roosevelt; the 100-zl., magenta, General Pulaski, and the 120-zl., light green, General Kosciusko.

The Woodridge Stamp Club meets tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Recreation Room, 1818 Rhode Island ave. ne. Next meeting will be held February 21.

The Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., met Tuesday evening in Pythian Temple and an auction was held, Ellery Denison officiating. Next Tuesday evening the annual "hobby" show will be held and an invitation is extended to all collectors to bring along their favorite hobby. The meeting will be held in Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw., beginning at 8 p. m.

The Capital City Post Card Club meets tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. at the Thomson School, 12th and L sts. nw.

French Expect Tourist Year to Be Even Better

PARIS, Feb. 5 (U.P.). — France expects the biggest tourist year in its history in 1949, according to Henry Ingrand, general commissioner of the French Tourist Bureau.

"We had over two million tourists in France this past season, surpassing our most optimistic hopes, and we have every expectation to do better than that next year," Ingrand said.

The general commissioner was interviewed in between trips to the United States and Switzerland, where he headed the western Europe tourist committee of the European Recovery Program.

"Western European countries want to work up united and coordinated tourist publicity and facilities," Ingrand said. "We can in this way offer Americans especially a rounded vacation at any time of the year."

He said French tourist advertising would concentrate on bringing free-spending travelers to the Riviera in winter months when the Mediterranean coast is comparatively empty.

"A man leaving New York in freezing cold on a February night can arrive on the beach at Cannes or Nice the following day," he said. "Perhaps he won't be able to swim, but he will surely get a nice sunburn."

Ingrand said 300,000 airplane seats and ship bunks would be available for transatlantic travel in 1949 and "there's no reason why they all shouldn't be filled all year round."

He said that in the decade before the war United States citizens numbered about 75,000 per year in France. Last year there were 160,000 Americans wandering about France. South American trippers numbered roughly 10,000 in 1948, the same as before the war.

"What we must make the South Americans understand is that they can visit France happily and well on very little money. They do not need to be rich to come to Paris," Ingrand said.

Despite the low travel allowance for foreign currency, British tourists are filling parts of nearby Brittany, Ingrand said.

"If the Labor government would increase the £35 allowance we would of course be very happy," he added.

"The most amazing tourist development this past few years has been the number of Swiss and Belgians to visit France. We estimate one tenth of the population of these two countries crossed our frontiers in 1948. This is probably due to favorable exchange rates."

Speaking about next year, Ingrand explained major French efforts would be made to add nearly 200,000 hotel rooms to those already existing, with special emphasis on country inns and out-of-the-way places. Additionally the government was trying to work out a scheme of nation-wide rentals which would make it easy for tourists to travel the by-ways of France.

Concord, N. H., Feb. 5 (U.P.). Whistle Stopping

Dog Issues Ski Challenge

By Orval Hopkins

HERE'S another of those silly stories about a dog. According to a piece I got in the mail, Frostie, a ski dog at Sun Valley, Idaho, challenges any dog in the world to a race on skis. Several pictures accompanied this broadside, one of which I have used here. Meanwhile, the press blast says, Frostie is in training with his next big race—against Queenie, a big St. Bernard owned by the Nevada state highway commission. And I hope he loses. I deplore this tendency of every other whelp in the country to play the fool and act up so, just to attract attention. He probably just wants to get his name in the paper. And his picture, too, probably.

FROSTIE

CURRENT ISSUE of Travel USA, publication of the National Park Service travel division, has a piece about Washington parks by Naturalist W. Drew Chick, jr. And a picture of Chick showing some pretty girls a snake, or vice versa . . . Colonial Airlines is flying a group of camera fans to Bermuda on March 5 for 12 days of peering and clicking. The trip is sponsored by U. S. Camera magazine . . . The Red Cross at Nassau this year is calling its annual carnival—scheduled for March 10—the Mahamas Merry Go Round. Says here the carnival is "a giddy blend of English garden party, American county fair and social register old home week" . . . Canadian Pacific's Empress of France has a new master, Capt. B. B. Grant, and a new purser, A. W. M. Stark.

NOT THAT we haven't told you the glad news before, but the American Bowling Congress opens its 46th annual session next Saturday in Convention Hall, Atlantic City, and Lou Cunningham, the official A. C. tub banger, is just about beside himself. "Approximately 30,000 bowlers," sputters Lou, "will come to this resort between opening day and the closing on April 9 to take part in this greatest cf all participant sports events." It looks like quite a hog-tyin', at that.

AN OPPORTUNITY to visit Mexico for $59 will be offered air travelers this month by American Airlines, if all goes well. R. E. S. Deichler of the line says the fare will become effective February 16 if a special tariff filed with the CAB is approved. There are some ifs and a couple of buts, however. If, for example, you are flying over that portion of the AA route that includes Ft. Worth-Dallas and El Paso, you can pop down to Mexico City for 59 extra fish. When you get to Mexico City, you can take on one of those tours the travel people fix up for you for anywhere from $40 to $75.

NOW IN THIS country for a three-month tour is Florian Neiderer, assistant general manager of the Swiss National Tourist Office in Zurich. Neiderer says he's here to familiarize key travel agents with new Swiss holiday facilities and plans for the 1949 season. During the war he was largely responsible for the success of the GI leave action plan, which enabled 330,000 American servicemen and women to enjoy inexpensive furloughs in Switzerland . . . The Queen of Bermuda returns to the New York-Bermuda run on February 12. Formal opening of the Princess Hotel in Hamilton will coincide with the "Queen's" arrival on the fourteenth.

THE STELLA POLARIS will start a new series of cruises to the North Cape and Norwegian Fjords next June. The 15-day junket will start at $290 and the 10-day job at $195. She's a trim looking ship, too . . . Col. and Mrs. R. H. Fletcher, incidentally, of 1921 24th st. nw., are on an 18-day cruise to the West Indies and South America aboard the Nieuw Amsterdam, Holland-American Line flagship . . . An American bagpipe band made up of 65 American girls plans to tour Britain next summer. The outfit is the University of Iowa Scottish Highlanders and, says the American Express, the babes have played before more than 2,500,000 people on other tours in the United States and Canada . . . Four big-league skiers are due at Montreal Airport on February 17. Their names are James Couttet, Henri Oreillier, Claude Penz and Jean Blanc. They are expected to take part in the Dominion downhill and slalom championship and the Quebec Kandahar while on this side.

CARGO AGENTS for Northwest Airlines in Minneapolis-St. Paul are puzzled over some queer objects that went through the Twin Cities recently en route to Washington from Tokyo. The things look like skis, but they're wider (one foot) and longer (eight feet) and are made out of Japanese reeds. Maybe they're sounding boards for Congress, cracks Northwest . . . Mike Frome of the AAA reports that the National Forest Service is starting an experimental policy of charging fees for camping, picnicking and such. You tell NFS for me, Frome, that us grassrooters are against it. Sounds like the Republicans, for heaven sake.

A NOTE from Miami Beach says the record bonefish caught on a fly-casting rod in Miami Beach waters weighed 9 pounds, 2 ounces. It doesn't say Miami Beach is NOT Miami, but I understand it's not.

Baedeker Will Resume Issue of Guidebooks

WHAT'S a synonym for guidebook? Baedeker is the word.

At first feared a permanent casualty of World War II, the familiar tourist handbooks now seemed headed for a lively comeback.

The fat pocket-sized Baedekers in their characteristic crimson bindings ceased appearing soon after Hitler's Reich went to war. And before peace returned the century-old publishing house of Karl Baedeker was bombed out in Leipzig, a Soviet zone city today.

But the Baedeker name may reassert its old authority in the travel field if success favors the current efforts of the great-grandson of the original Baedeker to resume publication of the guidebooks from Hamburg in the British zone.

Made Travelers "Baedekerians"

THE BAEDEKER standard in preparing guidebooks called for thoroughness of detail, painstaking documentation, maps and town plats both numerous and accurate. Baedeker paragraphs on local history were uniformly concise, stated conservatively, and without political bias.

Covering all Europe, parts of North America and the Orient, the volumes were often reissued with revisions, some running into 28 editions. As a result, in a field where many publishers produce helpful handbooks, the Baedeker name is unique.

Webster, for instance, defines Baedeker as a noun meaning "a guidebook of the series established by Karl Baedeker; loosely, any guidebook." A Baedekerian, says the same authority, is "a traveler who follows the guidebook in his choice of routes, scenes, and objects of interest."

"Baedeker Raids" on England

THE NAZIS in April, 1942, announced they would raid British historical and cultural centers in reprisal for RAF raids on German military sites. Their targets were such towns as Canterbury, York, and Bath, whose shrines and landmarks were described in detail in Baedeker guides. The term "Baedeker raid" hurtled instantly into journalistic language.

The original Karl Baedeker of guidebook fame learned the printing business from his father in Essen, where he was born in 1801. He set up for himself in nearby Koblenz in 1827. Late in the 1830's he issued handbooks for travelers, the first on the Rhine country, and second on Belgium and Holland. The English guidebooks of John Murray served as the early Baedeker pattern.

Baedekers on Germany and Austria followed in 1842, Switzerland in 1844. Paris and environs set a new standard in city guides in 1855. Upon Karl's death in 1859, his son Fritz took the helm, and in 1861 issued the first English translations. In 1872, he transferred the business from Koblenz to Leipzig.

Despite the multiple reissues of volumes on European cities and countries, the Baedeker Handbook for Travelers to the United States made its fourth and last appearance in 1909. It included 33 maps and 48 plans, concluded with "excursions to Mexico, Cuba, Porto Rico, and Alaska." James Bryce, John Bach McMaster, and T. A. Jaggar, jr. contributed introductory monographs on American government, politics, and physiography.

Azalea Trail Opens February 20

Mobile, Ala., Feb. 5 (AP).—Mobile's famed Azalea Trail will officially open February 20—the earliest in history.

The 17-mile-long trail of flowers is already partly in bloom, Trail President Hayden Rector said. The early blooming, six weeks sooner than usual, is attributed to unseasonal January weather. Heat records for January have been broken here this month.

Last year 120,000 visitors toured the azalea-lined route through the residential sections.

Chicago Railroad Fair to Run Another 100 Days This Year

THE Chicago Railroad Fair, 1949 edition, will open on June 25 and run for 100 days—closing on October 2, Maj. Lenox R. Lohr, president of the exposition, announces. The 1948 fair opened on July 20 and continued until October 3, attracting more than 2½ million visitors in a 76-day run.

While the fair grounds have been winterized and inactivated, planning for the coming year has been proceeding.

The exposition will occupy the same area on the lake front as did the '48 version, for Major Lohr's conception of the development of the project places all emphasis on "better" rather than "bigger."

In some spots, enlargement of facilities cannot be avoided. Thousands were turned away from the grandstand at the spectacle "Wheels a-Rolling" which played to an audience of more than 1,200,000. Plans are being made to enlarge the grandstand.

The erection of covered ways connecting the various exhibits on the grounds are being planned to protect visitors from sun and sudden showers; all roadways will be black-topped to add to walking comfort, and adequate comfort facilities will be provided to serve the fair visitors.

Improved eating facilities will be available, and at least four additional dining cars will be in service.

The Deadwood Central Railroad, which hauled hundreds of thousands of visitors up and down the grounds, will be expanded to accommodate greater numbers. A second train will be added and will travel over the same tracks with a passing track added to permit passage of the trains.

Changes and additions to existing exhibits will be made.

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
February 6, 1949

For advanced skaters only: Ice queen Margie Lee and champion Irving Jaffee come to a spectacular stop at New York's Rockefeller Plaza skating pond.

Beginners gain confidence by pushing chairs ahead of them. But new skaters shouldn't become too dependent on them. After circling pond a few times, they should be ready to strike out on their own.

Skating

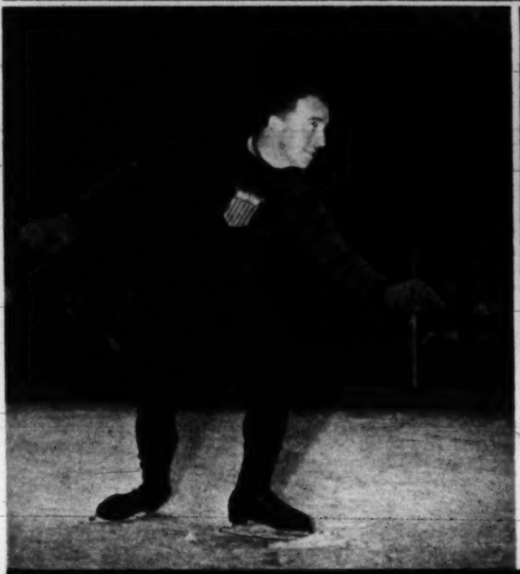
It's easy to learn how

IF YOU and a pair of ice skates are getting acquainted for the first time, Irving Jaffee forecasts plenty of fun ahead for you. Jaffee, former Olympic speed skating champion, ought to know. A skating teacher, he has just made a home movie entitled "Ice Capers" (Official Films) showing beginners how to skate. Chief fault of neophytes, he finds, is fear of falling. Jaffee encourages them to take an occasional spill, says it's as much a part of the sport as figure-eights.

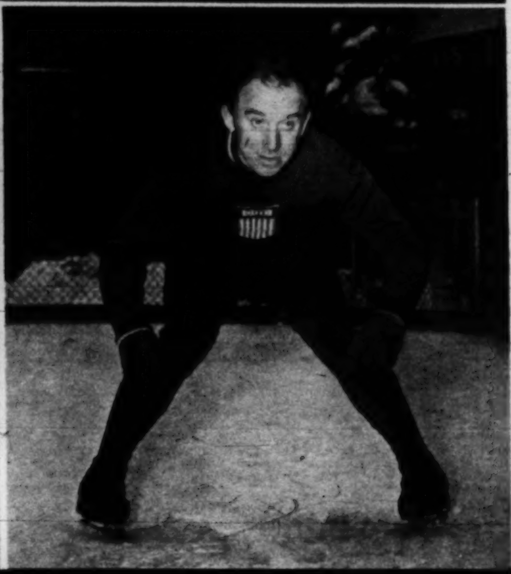
Other musts: be sure skates fit properly—men should wear their regular shoe size, but women one size smaller. While skating, keep knees bent, shoulders forward and relaxed, and eyes ahead. Bring knees together for balance as you shift from one leg to the other. Most important of all, practice just as often as you possibly can.

There's a right way to get up off ice if you fall. Trick is to rise from one knee with hands balancing body weight at each side. Never try to struggle up from sitting position; you'll lose your balance.

Like everything else, skating has its right and wrong way



WRONG: To stop by dragging one foot behind. This throws beginner off balance.



RIGHT: Flex the knees, lean forward, toes in. Weight is thus kept evenly distributed.

WRONG: To tense body when falling. Legs go out from under and landing is hard.

RIGHT: When falling, relax and lean forward. Slide along, hands out on the ice.

WRONG: Clasping outside hands throws both off balance, makes turns awkward.

RIGHT: Lock arms inside and grasp hands. Outside arms remain free for balance.

Fabien Sevitzky

"Hiawatha" changed the life of a young Russian

FABIEN SEVITZKY smiled wearily as the tiny, white-haired woman took a chair beside his bed in a St. Petersburg hospital. For weeks illness had threatened the life of the 18-year-old music student. On that day, while he was convalescing, his aunt was his first visitor.

She chatted for a while and before her departure left two books, Russian translations of "Hiawatha" and "The Last of the Mohicans." As he read the strange and thrilling Indian tales, he felt a passionate desire to see the New World.

By the time he returned to the Conservatory where he was a student, he was certain that his musical future lay in the United States. Over strenuous protests, Fabien hastened to end his studies so that he could earn money for the trip to New York. He set four years as the time limit. Graduated with high honors, he was asked to join the exclusive ranks of artists at Moscow's Imperial Theater.

Then came World War I, followed by the Russian revolution. America seemed far away. Eventually he reached Poland, and in 1923, exactly 12 years after he first opened the cover of "Hiawatha," he landed in New York City.

Musical honors have been heaped upon Sevitzky, the present conductor of the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra. But no tribute has pleased him more than adoption by the Blackfeet tribe of Montana as an honorary chief. To him it is the fulfillment of a dream inspired by "Hiawatha."

Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin meets reporters. Onetime governor of Massachusetts, mayor of Boston, he is labor's voice in government councils.

Tobin of Labor

A Bostonian is set to rebuild a badly weakened department

By EDWARD J. NICKEL

AS THE Secretary of Labor in a Democratic administration which the rank and file of labor claim a large share of credit in returning to office last November, tall, soft-spoken Maurice J. Tobin occupies a special spot in the Washington limelight.

The 47-year-old onetime governor of Massachusetts and twice-elected mayor of Boston is engaged in a task which resembles nothing more nor less than trying to put Humpty-Dumpty together again.

No story-book character, his Humpty-Dumpty is a badly shattered Department of Labor.

For when the 80th Congress got through with the Department—the youngest and smallest of the executive departments—its personnel was reduced from more than 7,000 to 3,300, its annual appropriation cut from $32 million to less than $15 million.

Its Conciliation and Mediation Service was set up as an independent agency outside the Department. The U. S. Employment Service was transferred to the Federal Security Agency.

The 35 field offices of the Division of Veterans' Re-employment Rights were cut to 20. The regional offices of the Wage and Hour Division were reduced from 13 to six. The all-important Bureau of Labor Statistics was forced to curtail its activities.

What remained was a broken shell.

This is the Humpty-Dumpty that Maurice J. Tobin has set himself to put together again.

Tobin Knows What It Is to Work

THE BOSTON-BORN son of Irish-immigrant parents, Tobin is no stranger to hard work—or to political controversy. The cabinet member who represents America's 15 million organized workers—and twice as many more who are unorganized—in the councils of the federal government has climbed the political ladder rung by rung.

As a youngster in the Mission Hill district of Roxbury, a Boston suburb, he first won friends with the shy Irish charm which still impresses strangers. At any rate, he built a thriving newspaper route—500 customers a day—while attending Roxbury's Mission Grammar School.

In those days it was young Tobin's ambition to become a salesman, and in 1917 he dropped out of the High School of Commerce in his second year to take a job with a leather company.

Tobin's job, like many another worker's, went out the window at the time of the postwar recession of 1921-22. He went to work for a telephone company and joined a union. Meanwhile, he continued his education at night and acquired a law degree.

Tobin's first brush with politics occurred in 1922, when he backed a friend, Al Moore, for Congress. The combination clicked, but Moore lost.

In 1926, Tobin, then 25, was elected to the Massachusetts state legislature, five years later to the politically-important Boston School Committee.

In 1937, Tobin entered a six-cornered race for election as mayor—and won. His principal opponent was the indefatigable James M. Curley. Though both Democrats, they have seldom seen eye to eye. Tobin was re-elected mayor in 1941. Three years later he was chosen governor of Massachusetts. Running for re-election in 1946, Tobin was defeated by Republican Robert Bradford in the same G.O.P. sweep which elected the 80th Congress.

This was the man to whom President Truman turned last August to fill the post of Secretary of Labor, vacated two months earlier by the untimely death of Lewis B. Schwellenbach. Tobin was then engaged in a Massachusetts primary struggle for the Democratic nomination for Governor. At the President's bidding, he dropped out of the race and went to Washington. He promptly found himself in a key position in what soon proved to be the toughest political campaign the nation has seen in this generation.

The Tobin family meets the President. Left to right: Carol Ann, 13; Mrs. Tobin; Maurice, jr., 10; Secretary Tobin; Mr. Truman and Helen Louise, 15. The children and Mrs. Tobin haven't moved to Washington yet, still live in the family home in Jamaica Plains, a Boston suburb. The Secretary flies from Washington to be with them on week ends.

Tobin's task: to satisfy labor

Union leaders look to him to lead fight for new labor law, 75-cent minimum wage and stronger Labor Department

When Maurice Tobin was sworn in as Secretary of Labor last August 13—it was a Friday as the cynics were quick to observe—the Truman Administration was in its darkest hour. Calamity was in the air. The optimism of the Republicans was matched only by the depression of the Democrats.

But politician Tobin had known the hurly-burly of too many election campaigns to admit defeat more than two months before the ballots were cast. While some of his cabinet brethren seemed to prefer to sit on their hands, the new Secretary of Labor rolled up his sleeves, cleared his throat, and went out to the hustings to fight.

From the beginning of September through the first of November, Tobin made 150 campaign speeches. He lashed out at the Taft-Hartley Act, decried the pruning of the Labor Department and appealed to the voters to rally around Harry Truman.

When the ballots were counted and the Republicans and many Democrats, too, had recovered from the shock, Tobin found himself in a strong position. No longer an interim appointee, he found himself a full-fledged cabinet member in a revitalized administration.

From now on, the nation would be watching him closely. Especially the leaders of organized labor.

Conscious of this scrutiny, Maurice Tobin has approached his job with caution. He has stepped on no bureaucratic toes, and has steered clear of the Washington habit of name-calling.

The hard-working secretary, who arrives at his desk at ten in the morning and seldom leaves before eight at night, receives an average of 40 callers a day. He is well liked by A.F. of L. and C.I.O. leaders who are known not to have been overly enthusiastic about some of his predecessors.

Opposed to Formal Conference

While he has called openly for co-operation in revising labor laws and reorganizing the Department of Labor, Tobin has declared that he is opposed to the suggestions that he call a formal labor-management conference. He prefers instead informal discussions to thrash out common problems.

The Secretary's opposition to the Taft-Hartley Act has in no way diminished since the campaign of last fall.

"The Taft-Hartley Act failed to recognize the spiritual qualities of the average human being and wage earner in our country," he has declared.

High on Tobin's check-list of remedial measures is the restoration to the Labor Department fold of the bureaus detached by the 80th Congress.

"I want a department in which all federal labor laws are administered," he has said. "I want a department that will be what Sam Gompers wanted it to be—'labor's voice in the President's councils.'"

About one of the agencies in question, the U. S. Employment Service, which was transferred to the Federal Security Agency, there seems to be little argument. F.S.A. boss Oscar Ewing agrees that the Service properly belongs in the Labor Department.

Return of the Mediation and Conciliation Service is admittedly more controversial. It was given independent status under the Taft-Hartley Act principally because employers objected to so-called "Labor Department bias."

Secretary of Labor Tobin feels strongly about such accusations.

"We are here to carry out laws

When he addressed the C.I.O. convention in Portland, Ore., last fall, Tobin (shown here with C.I.O. head Philip Murray) made a strong plea for repeal of Taft-Hartley Act.

Well-wishers at Tobin's swearing-in included (left to right) Paul Dever, now governor of Massachusetts, Frances Perkins, A.F. of L.'s William Green and James Carey of C.I.O.

written by the Congress," he says. "In certain fields, the Labor Department and indeed the whole government is partisan on the side of the poorly paid worker for the good of the whole economy. In guaranteeing to workers the protection of the government in collective bargaining, we are not only helping those individual workers, but every stratum of the economy of our country from the lowest to the highest.

Defends Record of Impartiality

"BUT TO SAY that the Labor Department would be prejudiced in the handling of mediation where the law and morality call for impartiality is not borne out by the evidence of 34 years' experience with the Mediation Service as part of the Department."

It is no secret in Washington that the Department of Labor would like to have the National Labor Relations Board placed within its administrative framework. "It is a labor function and rightfully belongs in the Department," declared Assistant Secretary of Labor John Gibson last December. On this subject, Tobin has remained silent.

That the new Secretary will be able to get a bigger slice of the budget pie this year seems a foregone conclusion. Some of the money will surely be used to expand the Bureau of Labor Statistics and restore some of the statistical services which had been curtailed. Tobin is ambitious, too, to inaugurate an educational program in the form of a labor extension service.

President Truman's proposal to raise the minimum wage rate to 75 cents an hour—a move which involves the Department of Labor's Wage and Hour Division—has the enthusiastic support of the Secretary.

"The economy of our country is not a one-way street," he declares. "We must have consumers as well as producers. The 40-cent minimum wage has a purchasing-power equivalent to only 22 cents today as compared to its value ten years ago when the act was passed."

On these and other matters affecting the welfare of America's working people, Maurice Tobin so far has been content merely to express his views. He is saving his arguments for Capitol Hill.

"In the final analysis," Tobin reminds his associates, "labor law will be made by the U.S. Congress."—THE END.

STOP-
loosening your skin!

MAKE THIS TEST! You will be shocked to find out how loose your skin really is!

DO THIS! Sit before your mirror. Do exactly as the girl is doing in the picture above. If folds of skin roll up under your eyes, you have loose skin! This loose skin may easily wrinkle too soon causing you to look much older than you really are!

Millions are actually loosening delicate skin tissues around their eyes in the very act of creaming their skins.

But this old way of skin care is rapidly being discarded. Well informed women are adopting skin care that ends destructive rubbing.

My Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting. No more need for rubbing at all. Think what this means!

When you use my cream that requires no rubbing, you are not loosening your skin—you are not deepening fine lines! In short, you stop helping your skin to grow loose and older looking. You help to preserve tone, elasticity and smoothness your skin naturally has.

Clearer Skin, Too, The First Day

What's more, I can promise you a clearer skin the first day you stop rubbing dirt-laden cream back into tiny skin crevices and into pore mouths.

Here's why. The cleansing ingredient in Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting—it has the power to surround each tiny particle of stale make-up and grime and separate it from the skin. It literally lifts dirt away from your skin! No destructive rubbing is necessary—just smooth it on and tissue it off!

What to Expect

Your first trial will convince you that my 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting (no more rubbing) and that it makes your skin far cleaner than before, without rubbing.

So get any size jar—even the smallest size is ample to prove that you don't have to rub your skin any more to clean it.

And remember, this one cream does 4 things for your skin. Besides self-acting cleansing—it smooths!—it aids the natural pore-refining process!—and it makes a perfect powder base!

Panel of shoppers and a class of store employees trade views on across-counter behavior as climax of sales course conducted by ace salesman Walter H. Mueller (standing, left).

How Not to Sell

Customer has his day in Wichita sales course

THERE IS an old story about the man who stopped at the shirt counter of a department store and was greeted by a bored clerk, who asked: "Something?"

The customer eyed him coldly and said, "Yes, I want a kimono for my uncle. He's a sleep-walker."

Anybody who has ever been in business knows that nothing will build up a shopper's sales resistance quicker than a clerk's bad manners.

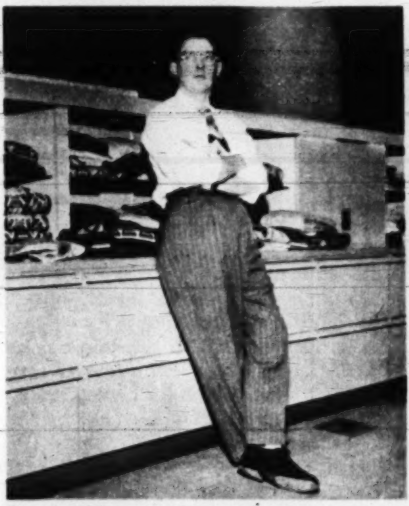
On the theory that customers and clerks alike would benefit by exchanging views on how sales are best made, Walter H. Mueller, an advertising man of Wichita, Kans., recently conducted a free course in salesmanship. Sponsored by the Wichita Eagle, the course was attended by more than 1,200 local sales people. They came from large chain stores as well as corner haberdasheries for training in selling techniques that will send the customer away satisfied—and with the purchase under his arm. Some of the sales-killing blunders Mueller told his students to avoid are illustrated here.

At the end of the six-week course employees faced a panel of shoppers. Said one panel member: "I've always wanted to get a bunch of you together and tell you just what I think of you!"

Clerks Listen to Customers

CUSTOMERS griped mainly about high-pressuring, indifference and discourtesy. Salespeople listened, then asked how service could be improved.

The Wichita sessions produced timely answers for those on both sides of the counter. Similar sessions on improved salesmanship are currently being conducted in a number of other cities under the sponsorship of the National Federation of Sales Executives.



Don'ts for salesmen: Lolling, carelessly-dressed clerk will discourage customers.

Can't-be-bothered type of clerk is target for criticism. Shoppers demand attention.

Sale is close if shopper (posed by ad-man Mueller) can be induced to handle article.

Poise, grace are important sales assets, help put shopper at ease, in mood to buy.

Relief for tired toes! But customer's request to see distant item may embarrass salesgirl.

Too many choices may distract shopper. Salesman should talk up one or two items.

Trick of holding garment to make it fit doesn't fool experienced shoppers. Sales blunders shown were posed in Wichita store whose salespeople are taught never to make them.

HATS

NOTHING LENDS so much spice to spring as the first extravagant creations of millinery designers. Wintertime's dark felt headpieces, neatly feathered or furred, seem more drab than ever when confronted by spring's fabulous bonnets. They may look like oversized wedding cakes, pink clouds of veiling or baskets abloom with every known variety of posy, but they're wonderful and welcome harbingers of sunny days and outdoor living still to come.

To show what American women will be wearing with the first spring breeze, PARADE photographed hats just designed by six outstanding New York milliners. In general, they are a little larger, a little more feminine than last season's.

Flowers, veiling and ribbons abound, and even the simplest hats have a gay touch, whether it be a cleverly-rolled edge or a bright bow of ribbon. Pastel felts and natural straws vie for first place, while favorite colors include lovely moss and lime greens, tones of gold and yellow, and the whole exotic mauve family, ranging from lilac to gentle purple-pinks.

Polka-dotted silk scarves in grey and emerald are draped about Anita Andra's white shantung straw.

Profile-flattering evening turban of sheer dusty pink and coffee malines, designed by Braagaard, has a matching stole in the same soft shades.

Gay touch on this gold straw sailor with buckle by Florence Reichmann is soaring bow of vivid plaid taffeta.

Emme masses lilac-blue roses on a lilac shantung bonnet, circles it with enough taffeta ribbon to form an ascot.

Actress Linda Darnell, one of several movie stars who paint as a hobby, mixes paints at Vermont studio of famed illustrator Norman Rockwell. No beginner, she has painted since childhood, once planned a career in art. Her work has been exhibited in Hollywood galleries.

Linda Darnell, Artist

For instruction she turns to Norman Rockwell

EVER SINCE Hollywood began, there has been a rumor that even the most beautiful movie stars can hardly read and write, if that. A living and breathing example to the contrary is beauteous Linda Darnell, who is not only lettered as befits a scholar from Sunset High School in Dallas, Tex., but can dash off a portrait in at least ten colors in less time than it would take you to see "Forever Amber" all over again.

One of the growing number of stars who have taken up art as a serious hobby —Margaret O'Brien, Joan Crawford, Van Johnson and Frank Sinatra, to mention only a few—the luscious brunette is as handy in front of an easel as she is in front of a camera, and just as alluring.

Already given lessons by top-notch artists John George Vogel, Rockwell Kent, and Theodore Luckits, she spent part of her recent vacation in the East studying under Norman Rockwell, famed for his magazine covers and a member of the faculty of the art-by-correspondence Institute of Commercial Art, in Westport, Conn. She is one of the few pupils ever to get personal tutoring at the Rockwell farm-studio situated near Arlington, Vt.

It is still too early to say definitely that when the movies gained another sweater girl the world lost a female Leonardo da Vinci, but the Darnell talent is said to have appeared at an early age. In grammar school, while other students were roughing around during recess, the young Artist Rockwell personally demonstrates his working methods and use of color to Linda.

Linda kept to the school steps with a sketch pad and an Eberhard pencil, drawing everything in sight. It paid off when she began getting five cents apiece for doing her skylarking chums' art class homework.

In high school, before a talent scout from 20th Century-Fox discovered her during a routine exploration in Dallas, she was intent on preparing herself for a career in art. The bewildering three-week trip to Hollywood for screen tests drove all thought of art from her head, but after—bleak with disappointment—she was directed to return to her schoolbooks, she submerged herself in art again, half-heartedly sending in occasional snapshots to the movie moguls, modeling, and acting as official greeter for the city of Dallas.

She would still be at it if a telegram had not arrived on April 2, 1939, telling her that Darryl Zanuck had seen her screen test and wanted her at once. She took the next train.

Ten years and some two dozen pictures later, she is almost as well known in Hollywood for her drawing as her acting. She has completed well over a hundred sketches and water color portraits, among them pictures of Tyrone Power, Clark Gable, Lana Turner, Ann Miller, and of her own husband, cameraman Pev Marley. If the worst comes, she still has plenty of time to be another Grandma Moses.

Prints of old masters spread on farm floor help explain the principles of good composition and drawing necessary in all superior art work.

Self-portrait sketched from glamor photo is good likeness. She has done similar portraits of a number of leading Hollywood figures.

In small studio added to her Santa Monica home, the actress-artist paints realistic picture of pet dog as husband Pev Marley looks on.

Molasses Whole Wheat Rolls

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE'S FOOD EDITOR

Heartening fare after vigorous winter sports: hot Molasses Whole Wheat Rolls, jam, mugs of cocoa.

1 After the first addition of flour, beat the mixture until it falls in sheets from spoon.

2 Knead finished dough with "heels" of palms, folding and kneading till smooth and elastic.

3 Chill dough until ready to use; knead a few seconds; shape into rolls; let rise and bake.

. . . . Make five dozen, and store the dough

NOTHING so quickens the appetite as the fragrance of baking bread or rolls. Today we give you a recipe for old-fashioned Molasses Whole Wheat Rolls that has been simplified and modernized to make it easy for you to follow. Mix up the dough (enough for five dozen rolls) and store it in the refrigerator. For the next few days, bake as many rolls as you wish and serve them piping hot.

Youngsters will love to find them waiting, fresh from the oven, when they troop in, chilled and hungry, after hours of skating or taboganning. Set out jam and fill mugs with foamy, marshmallow-topped cocoa—then watch your popularity rating rise! Serve them with dinner, and see how they glamorize ordinary fare for the entire family.

If you have a home-freezer, you'll want to include these rolls in your repertoire of frozen foods. Baked or unbaked, they respond handsomely to zero storage.

Molasses Whole Wheat Rolls

2 pkg. dry yeast	2 teaspoons salt
½ cup lukewarm water	2 eggs, unbeaten
1½ cups scalded milk	3¾ cups sifted, enriched flour
⅔ cup molasses	3 cups unsifted whole wheat flour

⅓ cup shortening, melted

Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water, as directed on package. Cool milk to lukewarm; add to yeast. Stir in molasses, salt and eggs. Combine enriched flour and whole wheat flour; add 4 cups of this mixture to yeast mixture. Beat until smooth (batter will fall in sheets from spoon). Beat in shortening. Add remaining flour mixture gradually, working it in well. Knead on lightly floured board until dough is smooth and elastic. Place in well-greased bowl and brush dough with soft shortening. Cover bowl; place in refrigerator until ready to use (will keep 4 or 5 days). When ready to bake, knead dough for a few seconds; shape into rolls; brush with melted shortening and set in a warm place to rise until double in bulk. Bake in hot oven, 400° F., for from twelve to fifteen minutes. Yield: about 5 dozen whole wheat rolls.

'Forty-Niners of a century ago played for high stakes as hard-won gold plumped across gambling tables in California's Golconda. Most adventurers went home broke.

The Miner '49ers

A hundred years ago, the word was "Gold"

NOBODY KNOWS yet what the big news will be in 1949 or how much it will shake us up. The last time a '49 rolled around it was something to remember. For 1849 was the year of the California gold rush, a cross-country hysteria that reached into almost every American home, caused husbands to leave their wives, soldiers and sailors to desert their posts, sent paunchy office-workers sailing around Cape Horn, and whole families staggering across almost unexplored wastelands.

Now fading into the mists of history, the brawling, tempestuous race for fabulous wealth is brought back to life in one of 1949's most nostalgic books, Scribner's soon-to-be-published "Gold Rush Album" of contemporary sketches, photos and posters edited by Joseph Henry Jackson.*

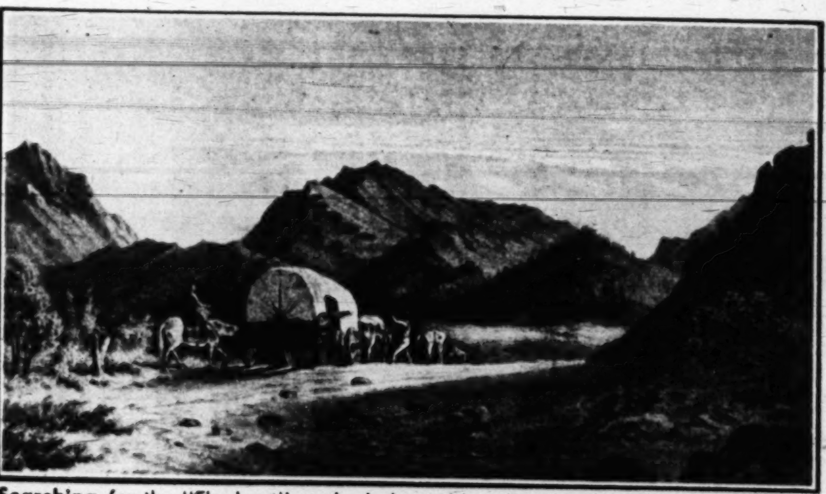
The excitement actually began in 1848, when James W. Marshall discovered nuggets in a mill-race he was digging for John August Sutter in the Sacramento Valley. By 1849 rumors of $15,000-a-day finds were the chief topic of conversation as far east as Maine, and had filtered overseas via every departing clipper and packet. Every American who could scrape together a grub-stake was on his way west, spurred by Horace Greeley's prediction that at least a billion dollars lay waiting in the canyons and gravel beds of the California mountains.

80,000 Sought Riches

According to the best estimates, some 80,000 gold-seekers arrived in California in 1849—Americans, Germans, French, Mexicans, Chileans, Peruvians, Kanakas, and Chinese.

Some found, and kept, the gold. Hundreds perished on the 17,000-mile voyage around Cape Horn, or the 2,400-mile overland trail they followed to the tune of "Susannah," and "Zip Coon."

*Gold Rush Album. Joseph Henry Jackson, Editor in Chief. Charles Scribner's Sons. New York. $10.



Searching for the "Elephant" motherlode, gold-seekers journeyed cross-country by ox-cart and afoot. Above, they dropped down Mormon Trail. Salt Lake was halfway.

Is this Young Wife WRECKING HER MARRIAGE . . .

because her knowledge about these INTIMATE PHYSICAL FACTS is not complete or scientific?

When a young wife doesn't get off on the right start in married life for this reason—often her husband begins to show a cool indifference and honeymoon days are over.

All too often a woman foolishly follows old-fashioned and wrong advice of friends. If only married women would realize how important vaginal douching often is to intimate feminine cleanliness, charm, health and marriage happiness. And what's more important—if only they'd learn about this newer, scientific method of douching with modern ZONITE.

No other type liquid antiseptic-germicide tested is SO POWERFUL yet SO HARMLESS

No well-informed woman would think of using weak, homemade solutions of salt, soda or vinegar for the douche. These DO NOT and CAN NOT give the germicidal and deodorizing action of ZONITE.

No other type liquid antiseptic-germicide for the douche of all those tested is so POWERFUL yet so SAFE to delicate tissues.

ZONITE positively contains no carbolic acid or bichloride of mercury; no creosote. ZONITE is non-poisonous, non-irritating, non-burning. Despite its great strength—you can use it as directed as often as you wish without risk of injury.

Zonite principle discovered by famous Surgeon and Chemist

ZONITE actually destroys and removes odor-causing waste substances. Helps guard against infection. It's so powerfully effective no germs of any kind tested have ever been found that it will not kill on contact. You know it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract BUT YOU CAN BE SURE that ZONITE immediately kills every reachable germ and keeps them from multiplying.

Obtainable at all drugstores.

CREOMULSION for Coughs, Chest Colds, Bronchitis

Flumes in Auburn Ravine washed water deeper into the diminishing gold beds that had yielded $15,000 per day per man. Yankees and Orientals worked side by side to find the precious dust.

Adventure and hardship were one in the search for glittering bonanza

FORTY-NINE was a time of troubles and violence. They began when Old Dry Diggings, the shantytown outpost of Golconda, was renamed Hangtown in January, after the first goldfields executions for murder. Sacramento City, at the junction of the gold-bearing American and Sacramento Rivers, opened its saloons and gambling dens to the hordes descending from the mountain passes. In the boomtown tradition, eggs sold for a dollar each, flour for $100 a barrel. Those who found gold tried to triple it at faro tables. All had snapping nerves; some had itchy trigger fingers.

At the end of '49, few had found "The Elephant"—the bonanza of fabulous wealth. Greeley's estimate of a billion dollars in four years dwindled to a quarter of the amount. Many took the long, broken-hearted trek homeward emptyhanded. Some stayed to settle California. Today, even the magical names are hazy—North Fork, Horseshoe Bar, and Murphy's. But the spirit of '49 lives on.

Dorothy Hart's smile wins six offers from Hollywood!

Dorothy Hart, Universal-International Starlet, blazed onto the Hollywood scene as the winner of a big film studio's country-wide beauty contest. Then she spurned the prize—a movie contract—to become a cover girl.

After Dorothy's winning smile appeared on the covers of eight leading magazines in rapid succession, the movies beckoned again. This time Dorothy couldn't say "no" to all six tempting offers she received. At Universal-International now, she is on the threshold of stardom. And she is taking care to keep the sparkle in her famous smile. "It's a Pepsodent Smile," Dorothy says. "I know from experience, Pepsodent brightens my teeth best!"

Toys Are Medicine

Fun is part of the cure in children's wards at La Rabida

KEEPING youngsters happily occupied while they are convalescing is one of the most difficult of the many problems plaguing hospital staffs—and parents with sick youngsters.

Doctors and nurses agree that children who feel well but need rest will remain quietly in bed only under pressure, or if their interest is diverted from themselves.

Devoted entirely to caring for children whose hearts have been weakened by rheumatic fever, Chicago's La Rabida Sanitarium is immersed in exactly that problem. Its staff has solved it by providing sugar-coated distractions in the form of absorbing games and leisure occupations to while away the time.

"Rest is the most urgent need for our 50 or more children," a La Rabida official explains. "Kids are kids. Nothing is quite so engrossing for them as toys, games and more toys."

The prescription of "toys and games" serves as an ally to medical treatment for patients at home as well as in hospitals. Through its successful application, children are kept happy while being restrained physically.

Program Planned in Advance

La Rabida's recreational program is carefully planned. Activities for the young patients are divided into six groups, depending on how ill they are and how much rest they need.

The boys and girls demanding complete rest comprise Group One. Their day's schedule includes listening to stories and recorded music. They look at pictures, see movies, read, play concentration games, forecast the weather by bedside means, and do a limited amount of schoolwork. The older patients organize Scout units, but forego an energetic Scout program.

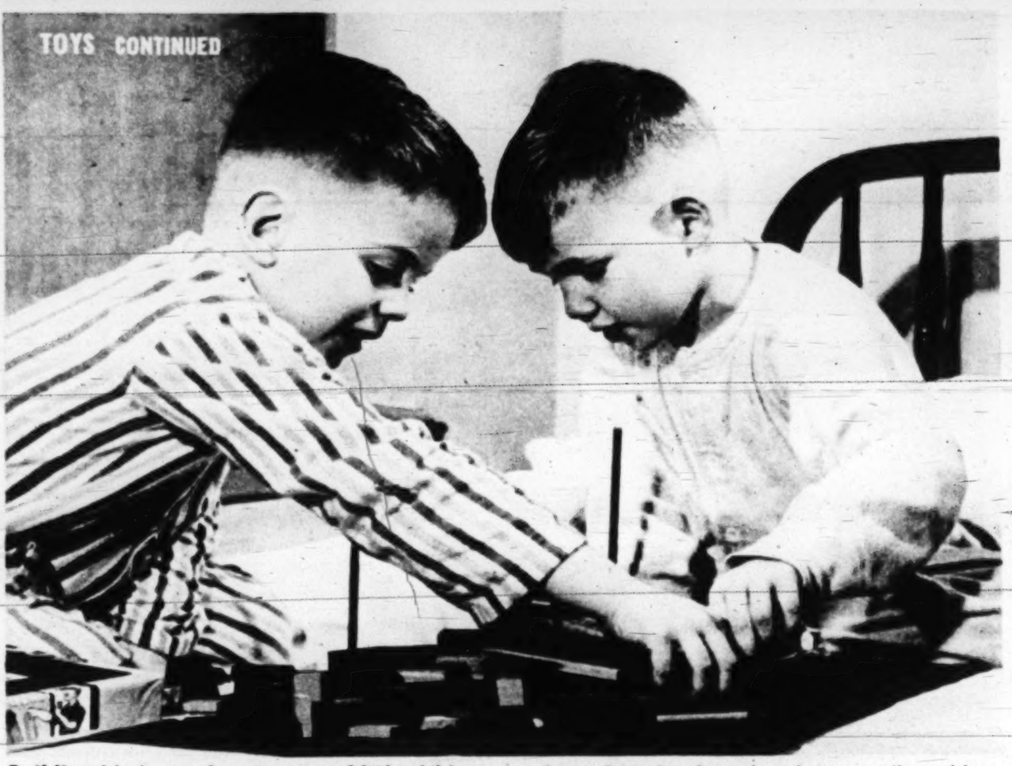
Fashion Forum

PARADE held one in Salt Lake City, and reports pungent opinions next week.



Building blocks are favorite toys of little children. Game is made easier when large cardboard is used as base. Patients often place large cardboard box with one side cut out over knees, use it as table.

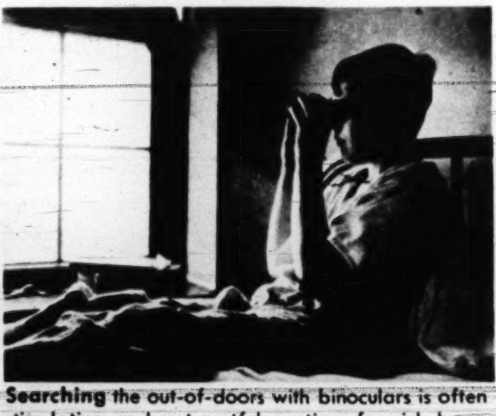
At home or in the hospital, sick youngsters need games

La Rabida's Group Two is composed of youngsters restricted to minimum activity out of bed. Bed-bound recreation for them includes playing with light toys, drawing, pasting, cutting, clay modeling, puzzles and light sewing.

The other groups range from those permitted moderate activity out of bed to those allowed limited and ultimately unlimited activity. While resting, they are kept busy and interested with needlework, leather work, weaving on frames and looms, construction toys, singing ensembles, puppets, light gardening, cooking, home-making with dolls, walks and games which are not too taxing.

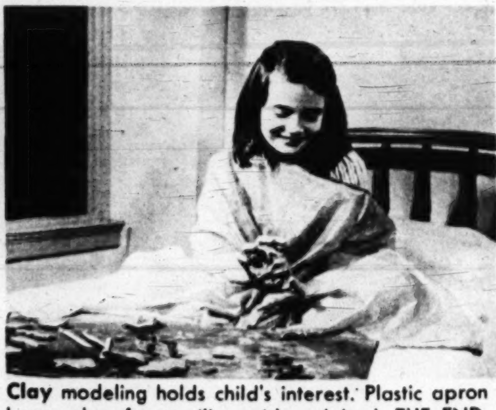
La Rabida is one of many sanitariums and hospitals fighting diseases of the heart. Work in all of them is assisted nationally by the American Heart Association, which begins its annual campaign for funds tomorrow and sponsors National Heart Week February 14-21.

Making wallpaper and curtains for doll's house is interesting as well as practical for Junior Misses.



Searching the out-of-doors with binoculars is often stimulating and yet restful pastime for sick boys.

Older lads predict weather. They use maps, radio, barometer and thermometer, plus published records.



Clay modeling holds child's interest. Plastic apron keeps clay from soiling girl and bed. THE END.

Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, National Commander of the Disabled American Veterans, presents check for $33,000.00 to James K. Nickerson of Port Washington, N. Y., top winner of 1948 DAV Service Foundation Puzzle Contest.

FOLLOW THESE INSTRUCTIONS

1. Identify the six objects at the top of the puzzle. (The name of each object is a six-letter word.)
2. See the table of letter values below the puzzle. Each letter is worth a certain number of points. If you have exactly named the objects you will find that the total value of the 36 letters that spell out the names of the six objects is 743 points. If you don't arrive at 743 points then try again, for the 36 letters must add up to 743 points.
3. Now your job is to place those words, correctly spelled, into the shaded letter-paths, each of which has space for six letters. You can place any one of the six words in any one of the shaded paths. Each word must read from top to bottom or left to right.
4. You will now note there are 13 empty white squares remaining in the diagram. Now you must insert letters of your own choosing into those 13 white squares and by combining these letters with the interlocking letters you have already filled into the grey squares, spell out 5 extra complete words. Each of these 5 extra words, too, must read from top to bottom or from left to right.
5. Of course, it is easy to fill in 13 extra letters which in combination with the letters in the grey squares will spell out 5 extra different words, but remember your job is to use 13 letters that will give you a high score when the value of those extra letters (as shown in the table of letter values) is added to the 743 points you will have already earned if you identified the pictured objects correctly.

SEE SAMPLE PUZZLE BELOW And Read How We Solved It!

DIAGRAM No. 1

We show here how to go about solving a DAVogram, and how to work out alternate answers to get higher scores.

First we identified the objects pictured: RABBIT . . . SADDLE . . . HAMMER . . . KETTLE — and then we added up the value of all the letters in the names of these four objects (using the table of letter values given for the Official Puzzle) and found the total was 467 points. Next, we filled in these four names in the four shaded paths and then added 10 extra letters which gave us 3 extra words: GLOOM . . . HARBOR . . . BUILD. These 10 extra letters which we had filled into the white squares had a total value of 181 points, thus giving us a total score of 648 points when added to the letters we had filled into the shaded squares.

Then we tried again, and with some thought we changed our 10 extra letters and got three different extra words, as you can see in Diagram No. 2. We changed GLOOM to CLAIM, HARBOR to HORROR and BUILD to BUGLE. We thus attained a total of 210 points for the 10 extra letters we filled into the white spaces, giving ourselves a total score of 677. Of course these are only two possible solutions and perhaps we might have done even better by shuffling the four identified names around into different shaded letter paths. Now, if you get the idea, why not try your hand at the Official Puzzle.

If you have previously entered this 1949 DAV $100,000.00 Puzzle Contest, DO NOT USE THIS FORM for submitting a substitute answer. Please be patient until you receive your Official Substitute Solution Form with your Official Entry Number (allow 2 to 3 weeks depending on distance from Washington, D. C.). Additional copies of this Official Puzzle and Entry Forms will be sent free on request when accompanied by self-addressed stamped envelope. (Address Dept. 500)

FULL LIST OF WINNERS WILL BE SENT TO ALL CONTESTANTS AFTER FINAL JUDGING

THE OFFICIAL RULES Please read carefully

1. $100,000 will be awarded in accordance with the instructions, official prize list and these rules to the contestants who achieve the highest scores in solving the Official Contest Puzzle. This sum will be awarded in three prize groups: Group No. 1 with a first prize of $5,000.00; Group No. 2 with a first prize of $15,000.00; Group No. 3 with a first prize of $30,000.00. Each group has an additional list of 109 prizes each, making a total of 330 prizes in all. (See official list of prizes.)

2. To enter Group 1 a contestant must send in with his answer to the puzzle a donation of $2.00 to the Disabled American Veterans Service Foundation; to enter Group 2 a donation of $5.00 is required and to enter Group 3 a donation of $10.00 must be sent in. A contestant may compete in any one, two or all three prize groups and once having entered may transfer his entry from any group or groups to any other group or groups by submitting the necessary additional donation any time prior to final judging.

3. Each prize group will be judged separately. The contestant who submits the highest valid score in Group 1 will be entitled to first prize in Group 1. Second prize in Group 1 will be awarded to the contestant with the second highest score submitted in that list and so on until the 110 prizes in Group 1 have been awarded. Prizes in Groups 2 and 3 will be awarded similarly.

4. In the event of ties in any group (which seem likely, since this is a large national contest), as many prizes will be reserved in that group as there are tied contestants, before any prizes are awarded for lower scores. To break such ties these tied contestants will be required to send in solutions to a set of five tie-breaking puzzles. The solutions to puzzle No. 1 in this tie-breaking set will be judged first and then the tied-for prizes will be awarded in the order of the valid scores submitted. If this is not sufficient to break all ties and permit awarding of all the tied-for prizes, then the solutions to puzzle No. 2 submitted by the remaining tied contestants will be judged. If ties still remain, the solutions of the still tied contestants to puzzle No. 3 will then be judged and so on, if necessary, to puzzle No. 5. This may mean that puzzles Nos. 2 to 5 may not have to be judged. (It is worth noting that in the last DAV Service Foundation Contest top prize of $33,000 was awarded as the result of judging only puzzle No. 1 in the first tie-breaking set.) However, if further needed to break ties a second, third or even a fourth set (each of 5 such tie-breaking puzzles to be judged similarly) may be used. All tie-breaking puzzles will be similar to the original puzzle with clearly identifiable objects, though the objects may be more difficult and more numerous. Partial credit may be given for partial solutions. Tie-breaker puzzles will be judged on the same basis as the original puzzle. The time limit for solving and mailing back the first set of tie-breaking puzzles (if needed) will be not less than 14 days from the date of mailing to tied contestants, and therefore all tie-breaker puzzles will be mailed on the same day in a local area near tied contestants; for the second set of tie-breaking puzzles (if needed) not less than 7 days; and for the third and fourth sets (if needed) not less than 3 days each. Tied contestants will not be required to make any additional contributions. Should final ties remain after the fourth set of tie-breaking puzzles, each tied contestant will receive the full amount of the prize for which he or she is still tied.

5. The contest is open to any resident of the Continental United States except employees of the DAV and its subsidiary units, the DAV Service Foundation, its advertising agency, its service organization, or members of their families. Also excluded is anyone who has won $500.00 or more in cash or kind awarded in any other contest prior to entering this contest, or any member of his or her family. Every possible precaution will be taken to enforce this provision. Only one member of an immediate family living at the same address may compete. All entries must bear a permanent home address in the Continental United States to which all contest mail will be sent. Where a contestant changes such permanent home address, the DAV Service Foundation should be notified immediately, but the Foundation can, in no case, assume responsibility for delivery of mail. In view of the uncertain address of members of the Armed Forces on active duty, and the consequent delay in mail delivery, this contest of necessity is not open to them.

6. Each contestant will receive an acknowledgment and an entry number upon receipt of his or her solution to the Official Puzzle, which solution must be submitted on an Official Entry Form and must be accompanied by a contribution of $2.00 or more. At no extra cost, one substitute solution can be submitted on the Official Substitute Solution Form which will be sent to each contestant and which will carry the entry number registered in the contestant's name. In working out and submitting puzzle solutions, contestants must follow the instructions accompanying the puzzle. Neatness does not count, but unsigned or illegible entries, or entries so unclear as to be confusing, will not be considered, and donations accompanying such entries will be returned upon request after judging is completed. Where more than one entry is submitted by an individual his or her highest valid score will be considered only in that group or groups in which that score is entered. That score will serve to compete in any one, two or all three prize groups, depending on the amount donated with that particular entry. An individual may win one prize in each prize group.

7. In solving the puzzle, practically any word that fits may be used. A contestant will not receive more points than that claimed nor more than that earned. Therefore, please use care in totalling your score. Remember not to use any hyphenated word or form, prefix, suffix or combining form, abbreviation or contraction. The final word source authority for this contest will be the Merriam-Webster New International Dictionary, Unabridged, Second Edition, 1948 printing and (with the exceptions noted) any word may be used provided it actually appears in bold-face type anywhere on any page within the A-Z main alphabetical section of the above dictionary. No plural or other inflectional form is acceptable unless it appears in bold-face type. No word that appears only as part of a two or more word phrase or expression (such as "suey" in "chop suey") is admissible.

The DAV Service Foundation will not enter into any individual correspondence concerning the eligibility of any word for use in solving the puzzle. Each contestant however may be required, upon request, to furnish the source of any word used.

8. All entries must be sent by mail to:
DAV SERVICE FOUNDATION
$100,000.00 Puzzle Contest
Washington 6, D. C.
and must be postmarked before midnight, April 30, 1949, and received before 5:00 P. M., May 15, 1949, to be eligible for consideration. The deadline dates for mailing and receipt of substitute solutions are 60 days after these respective dates. The failure of any contestant, after request by the DAV Service Foundation, properly to identify the source of a questioned word, may make said word inadmissible. The DAV Service Foundation will not be responsible for lost or delayed communications or for clerical or mechanical errors and each contestant by the act of sending in an entry agrees to be bound by the rules and instructions and, in any event, with the decision of the DAV Service Foundation and/or its Committee on Awards on any and all matters affecting the contest.

9. Any contestant who accepts help of any kind from anyone (same family or household excepted) will be disqualified. Sworn statements to this effect will be required from all winners and every reasonable effort will be made to enforce this rule.

Melancholy Baby

Although "St. Christopher," the moody St. Bernard pictured above, had just won high honors at a British dog show, you'd never know it from his expression. Traditionally lachrymose, St. Christopher's breed takes its name from the monastery of St. Bernard high in the Swiss Alps, where it has been bred for 1,000 years. Forlorn-looking, hefty St. Christopher—a messy eater—always wears a bib at dinner time. His owner is tying it on him.
